British Cabinet Fears Hitler Speech Is Play For Time Before War

By Frank R. Kelly.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, Sept. 12.—Not a word of Chancellor Adolf Hitler's speech at Nuremberg tonight is regarded by the British government as helpful to the cause of peace.

Although the British took slight hope from the fact that Hitler did not slam and bolt the door on continued negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and the Sudeten German minority, they noted that nowhere in his tirade did he renounce the use of force to settle the problem, nor did he yield an inch in substance or tone from his previous position.

For an hour and ten minutes tonight, Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and his chief advisers within the cabinet—Lord Halifax, Sir John Simon and Sir Samuel Hoare, who were joined by Sir Robert Vansittart and Sir Alexander Cadogan—were closed at 10 Downing street, while they examined Hitler's speech line by line.

Situation Not Altered

The meeting ended at 10:40 o'clock with the cabinet's "big four" in agreement that Hitler's pronouncement had not altered or eased the situation in any way.

The British were obviously relieved that Hitler did not give the signal for an assault on the Czechs, which would have brought Britain's military might instantaneously into action tonight to defend France while that country fulfilled its treaty obligations toward Czechoslovakia.

Nevertheless, in Whitehall's opinion the crisis is not over and indeed may be said to have only begun. Tension will continue, it is felt, as long as the German army continues to remain in what amounts to a state of full mobilization and as long as the negotiations between the Prague government and the Sudeten Germans drag out.

Play for Time Seen.

The British found Hitler's speech more truculent and abusive than they had expected. They were not at all impressed with his pacific references to the end of Germany's "old feud" with France and its professed desire never to "cross swords" with Britain. In London's opinion these remarks were designed as a play for time until the completion of Germany's Siegfried line which, the British noted, Hitler said would be ready before winter.

What disturbed the British cabinet ministers most was Hitler's shout about the Sudetens: "If these tortured and oppressed creatures cannot help themselves they will get help from us."

Equally disquieting was his demand that the Sudetens should be given the right of self-determination. Although the British did not find this clear, they believed it foreshadowed a campaign by Hitler to organize a plebiscite in the Sudeten area.

In general the British ministers felt that a speech which left the situation "as it was" must inevitably lead to deterioration of the positions of the various powers.

Uneasiness was increased in government circles when it was real-

European Developments

Nuremberg—Reichsfuehrer Hitler halted on the very brink of the precipice of war. He closed the eight-day Nazi Party convention by demanding "self-determination" for Czechoslovakia's Sudeten Germans.

Prague—Disorders, in which two Sudeten Germans were wounded, swept Czechoslovakia near the German border immediately after Hitler's speech. The Minister of the Interior was empowered to impose martial law.

London—British Cabinet's "Big Four" reviewed Hitler's speech with Prime Minister Chamberlain and decided it had not altered or eased the situation in any way. They approved a policy of standing firm and preparing for action.

Paris—Premier Daladier, immediately after hearing Hitler's speech with other Cabinet members, conferred for two hours with his Chief of Staff of French defense forces, the Chief of the Army and Military Governor of Paris. General reaction was, "While there's life there's hope."

Rome—Italy received Hitler's speech with marked favor.

Geneva—League of Nations diplomats regarded the European crisis as continuing.

Czech Nazis 'Will Get Help,' Fuehrer Says

'Always Hit Back at Once,' Hitler Tells 25,000; Brands Benes a Liar, Scorns Democracies.

By the Associated Press.

Nuremberg, Germany, Sept. 12.—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler went to the very brink of war tonight, but was careful to arrest himself this side of the precipice.

Tantalizingly, he kept dangling the possibility of a war-less solution of the Sudeten German problem before Europe's statesmen.

In a 78-minute address before 25,000 persons in the Nazi congress hall, he closed the eight-day Nazi party convention by producing "self-determination" for the Germanic minority as the implied alternative to forcible action against Czechoslovakia.

"I assure the democracies that the fate of the Sudetens is not a matter of indifference to us," he declared. "If these harrassed people feel they are without rights and aid they will get both from us."

Sudetens Shot, Bombs Follow Hitler Speech

'Communist' Fires Pistol Into Singing Crowd of Henlein Followers at Town in Bohemia.

By the Associated Press.

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Sept 12.—A series of disorders near the German border were reported tonight after Adolf Hitler's Nuremberg speech.

Reports of disorders in which two Sudeten Germans were wounded and two bombs set off were received here while Czechoslovaks who listened to the radio broadcast of Hitler's speech expressed the opinion that it was even more bitter than they expected.

The two Sudetens were shot, one seriously, in a disturbance at Graslitz, in west Bohemia, when a man described as a Communist fired two pistol shots into a crowd of singing, cheering followers of Nazi Chieftain Konrad Henlein.

The crowd chased the man into the postoffice, where he was seized by police who spirited him away from the infuriated Sudetens.

Bombings Near Border

The two bombings were reported from Falkenau and Eger, a short distance from the German border. The explosion at Falkenau occurred in the central section of the city, shattering 50 windows in the Hahn Hotel. Twenty-five windows were broken in a Czech school by the blast at Eger.

At Carlsbad (Karlovy Vary) Nazi sympathizers paraded the streets after assembling at a large mass meeting to listen to Hitler.

To maintain order "at all costs," Minister of Interior Josef Cerny was empowered to impose martial law in the Germanic minority's region "only in case of extreme necessity."

As evening came, the minister sat in his office at the center of a network of police telephone lines which extended to the German border in the north, south and west. Beside

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Count Rene de Sainte-Quentin, French Ambassador to the United States, returned from Europe aboard the Normandie today saying the French people were "quiet but concerned" over the present European crisis.

He returned to Washington this evening in accord with the French government's desire to have its Envoys to the principal world powers at their posts during the critical Central European developments.

Roosevelt Telephones Hull On Crisis, Watches Elections

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 12.—President Roosevelt, happy that his eldest son James was reported recuperating satisfactorily from a stomach operation, talked by long distance telephone with Secretary Hull about the international situation today and awaited the results of the Maryland senatorial primary. White House authorities reported nothing new developed from the phone conversation.

The President arranged to stay here until tomorrow night at least. Then, if James' condition is still satisfactory, he will leave for Hyde Park.

Mr. Roosevelt was expected to receive returns from today's Maryland primary promptly.

The President chatted with James for some time and then returned by car to his special train. Crowds applauded him when he got off and on his car.

James had another attack of hiccoughs today, but doctors said this was not unusual after a gastric operation.

Members of the Roosevelt family—the President, Mrs. Roosevelt and Mrs. James Roosevelt—arranged to visit the patient in rotation.

A bulletin, issued jointly by Dr. H. K. Gray, the operating physician, and Dr. G. B. Eusterman, Mayo physician, said that the President's son "had as good a night as could be expected for the first postoperative night." The President said the bulletin was a fine report.

Hines Wins Mistrial in Racket Case

Pecora Decides Question About Other Crimes a Fatal Error; Dewey Insists That the Law Is on Side of State.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 12.—Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora declared the case of James J. Hines, veteran Tammany leader charged with protecting Dutch Schultz's policy racket, a mistrial today, in a three-hour decision, read and spoken to the largest crowd that had jammed the courtroom since the hearing began.

The linking of Hines' name to the poultry racket by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey in Saturday's cross-questioning of Lyon Boston, a defense witness, Justice Pecora asserted, was an error so prejudicial to the fundamental rights of the defendant that no instructions he might give a jury to disregard it would be adequate to permit the trial to continue.

His judgment and conscience in the matter were clear, he said. He had no right, he maintained, to pass the matter "pusillanimously" to a higher court. He continued the defendant's bail and adjourned the court with a statement that Hines certainly should be brought to trial again.

[A slight young man with a cultured voice, Boston had testified calmly on Saturday that he failed to find evidence sufficient to convict Hines, though he had been instructed by District Attorney William C. Dodge, friend of Hines, to prosecute the investigation vigorously, the Associated Press said.

[Then Dewey asked: "William Fellowes Morgan, commissioner of markets, discussed the subject at length before the grand jury, didn't he?

Dewey Voices Dissent

["I don't recall that," Boston said. Then came the "prejudicial question—

["Don't you remember any testimony about Hines and the poultry racket there by him?" Dewey asked sharply.

[Chief Defense Counsel Lloyd Paul Stryker then had leaped to his feet. "I move for a mistrial," he snapped. He charged Dewey with making an "intentionally prejudicial" statement.—Editor's note.]

District Attorney Dewey, asked by the clerk of the court if he wished to concur, rose gravely in defeat.

"I certainly do not," he said crisply. "I am of the firm opinion that the question asked was correct and proper." Though the two chiefs of his indictment and appeals bureau both agreed with him, he said, "unfortunately the people of the State of New York have no appeal

Palmisano and Opponent Nearly Neck and Neck

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore (Tuesday), Sept. 13.—Representative Vincent L. Palmisano early today held a slight lead in the Democratic primaries over Thomas d'Alesandro, jr., who is fighting to unseat the House District Committee chairman, sometimes called the "Mayor of Washington."

Latest returns from the third (Baltimore) district showed d'Alesandro with 12,154 votes against 12,158 for Palmisano, with all but 4 out of 104 precincts reporting. D'Alesandro had indorsed Representative Davey J. Lewis for Senate, and had been given a Presidential handshake last week when Mr. Roosevelt spoke at Denton, Md. Louis Svehla, a third candidate, trailed far behind.

In the Fourth District, Representative Ambrose J. Kennedy, vice chairman of the House District Committee, held a big lead with 83 out of 150 polling places reporting. Returns gave him 4,882 votes, to 2,587 for Francis Michel and 1,502 for Walter V. Wentworth. Representative William P. Cole had 5,900 votes in the Second District, from 61 out of 180 precincts, compared with 3,863 for Dr. Charles J. Wells.

New Dealer Trails Senator In Baltimore Districts and Mullikin's Home County

Prince Georges Returns Indicate Incumbent Will Carry Section Previously Held Sure to Favor Lewis.

Senator Millard Tydings maintained a lead over Representative Lewis in Prince Georges last night as complete returns from nine of the county's 34 precincts indicated victory for the incumbent.

Prince Georges had been generally considered in the Lewis column. It was thought that the presence of Kent R. Mulliken and M. Hampton Magruder, as well as the fact that many Government workers live in Prince Georges, would carry the county for the New Deal candidate.

Lewis Loses Laurel

With every section of the county represented, the totals stood at 2,314 for Tydings and 1,802 for his opponent.

Arthur E. Hungerford, "forgotten man" in the primary, had 14 votes.

Tydings showed surprising strength in Lewis strongholds such as Laurel, home town of Kent Mulliken, the Representative's campaign manager. Laurel's two precincts gave Tydings 456 and Lewis 346.

In the third precinct of Chillum, just across the District line, Tydings nosed out Lewis by 19 votes, the count standing at 199 to 180.

Slim Margin Surprise

Marlboro, in the southern part of the county, gave the Senator 195 votes to 225 for Lewis. The Representative's slim margin in Marlboro was another surprise, as that town is the home of M. Hampton Magruder, collector of internal revenue, who announced his support of Lewis. However, Magruder's influence was somewhat counter-balanced by the fact that Tydings was admittedly strong in the southern farming section of the county.

In the four-cornered gubernatorial race, Lansdale G. Sasscer, Prince Georges "favorite son," received a thumping indorsement of 2,946 votes in 12 precincts, against 451 for Herbert R. O'Conor, of Baltimore; 372 for Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore, and 138 for William S. Gordy, jr., of Salisbury.

Marlboro, Sasscer's home town, presented the State Senator with 395 votes, O'Conor received 15, Jackson, 14, and Gordy, none.

Nice Leads Phoebus

On the basis of returns from 14 scattered precincts, Gov. Harry Nice appeared to have a 10-to-1 lead over his rival, State Senator Harry T.

Lindbergh Aiding Soviet Air Force, Tokyo Charges

Special Cable to The Post.

Tokyo, Sept. 12.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh is said to be acting as adviser to the Soviet government in execution of a three-year aviation program, according to an official report to the foreign office from Yujiro Sugishita, Japanese minister to Finland, the Domei News Agency and Japanese newspapers stated today.

Domei said Lindbergh had been invited to Moscow ostensibly to witness a test flight of new planes, but actually to advise the Moscow government regarding important aviation plans.

The newspaper "Chugai Shogyo" reported the American flyer would advise the Russians concerning establishment of five new air bases scattered throughout the Baltic and Black Sea regions and in Siberia. It said he also would instruct the Russians with regard to rebuilding old war planes.

Crash Kills Flier Who Set Record

London, Sept. 12 (AP).—Flight Lieutenant M. J. Adam, who set a new world altitude record of more than 10 miles last year, and a companion were killed today when their Royal Air Force bomber crashed at Farnsborough, Hampshire, and burst into flames. Adam established his record of 53,937 feet June 30, 1937.

In Maryland and Maine

Returns from all parts of Maryland indicated an easy victory for Senator Millard Tydings over Representative Lewis.

In the Democratic gubernatorial race Attorney General Herbert O'Conor held a lead over Mayor Howard Jackson of Baltimore, while William S. Gordy, jr., led both on the Eastern Shore. Lansdale Sasscer, who was running fourth, led in nearby Prince Georges County.

Preliminary reports from Prince Georges County showed Tydings leading by a narrow margin in that area, which was claimed for Lewis.

Montgomery County Democratic returns, due to the long ballot and the fact that Republican votes were counted first, were inconclusive as Nice piled up an 11-to-1 lead over his Republican opponent.

Republican incumbents apparently made a clean sweep in the four main races in Maine's general election, the first in the Nation. Gov. Barrows and the three Representatives in Congress had substantial leads.

Montgomery Gives Nice 11-to-1 Lead

Early Returns From County Show Tydings Ahead of Lewis in Race for Senatorship.

Gov. Harry W. Nice rolled up a 11-1 lead over Harry T. Phoebus, his opponent for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, in first returns last night from Montgomery County. Twenty out of 35 precincts gave the incumbent official votes to 163 for Phoebus.

Senator Tydings led Representative Lewis by 77 votes to 51, and Howard W. Jackson had tallied 68 to 41 for Herbert O'Conor in the contest for nomination to the Governor's chair by the Democrats.

Galen L. Tait, former collector of internal revenue in Baltimore, held a margin of approximately 2½ to 1 over Oscar Leser, former Baltimore judge, in their fight for the Republican Senatorial nomination. Returns showed 1,245 votes for Tait and 526 for Leser.

Seeking the Republican nomination for Representative from Maryland's Sixth Congressional District, A. Charles Stewart had piled up 1,155 votes against 616 for Frank R. Long.

In the race for county commissioner from the Fifth District, Paul M. Coughlan was the choice of 1,116 voters, while 665 Republicans marked ballots for Herman C. Heffner.

Most spirited contest to develop so far in the county primary found nine candidates for six places on the Republican State central committee dividing the total vote as follows:

Robert L. McKeever	1,541
James C. Rogers	1,479
Earl W. Shinn	1,394
Walter W. Dawson	1,282
Nathan C. Duvall	1,084
Louis Proctor	964
Preston L. Snyder	938
Lawrence V. Lampson	911
Simon O. Smith	691

Ira C. Whitacre was out in front of C. William Miles by 1,148 to 611 for nomination as county treasurer.

Republicans Make Clean Sweep in Maine

3 Incumbents Ahead for Congress as Barrows Increases Advantage Over Brann.

Portland, Me., Sept. 12 (AP).—Down East Maine, one of the two anti-Roosevelt States of 1936, tonight apparently gave a clean sweep victory to all four of the Republican candidates for the top offices at stake in the Nation's first election of 1938.

Gov. Lewis O. Barrows (R.), who assailed the New Deal in his campaign, ran up a lead of 20,000 votes over the Roosevelt Administration's indorsee, former Gov. Louis J. Brann, with 576 of the State's 629 precincts unofficially tabulated. Included were three wards from heavily Democratic Lewiston.

In the First Congressional District, the voters returned Representative Oliver (Republican) to office by a decisive margin over Harold B. Emery (Democrat), who had assailed Oliver's advocacy of the Townsend old-age pension plan.

In the Third Congressional District, Representative Brewster (Republican) scored a lop-sided victory over Melvin P. Roberts (Democrat). Brewster campaigned particularly against the Roosevelt Administra-

McRae Withdraws In Georgia Poll; Backs New Dealer

Atlanta, Sept. 12 (AP).—William G. McRae, Atlanta attorney and Townsendite candidate for the Senate, withdrew from the Georgia Democratic primary race tonight and urged his supporters to vote for New Dealer Lawrence Camp.

This unexpected action reduced the Senatorial field to three men—Camp, Senator Walter George and former Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

He said "The real issue in this race is whether the vested interests can purchase the Senatorship."

Rep. Bacon Stricken on Road, Dies of Heart Attack at 54

New York, Sept. 12.—Representative Robert Low Bacon (Republican), New York, 54, died of a heart attack tonight at the State police barracks at Lake Success, Long Island.

Bacon attended a political meeting in New York City and was driving back with his wife to their home in Old Westbury when he became ill.

Mrs. Bacon ordered the chauffeur to drive into the barracks seven miles from Old Westbury. Bacon had been inside only about 10 minutes when he died.

Representative Bacon was born July 23, 1884, at Jamaica Plain, Boston, Mass., and was educated at Groton and Harvard where he was graduated from the law school. He had represented the First New York District in Congress since 1923, and was always re-elected with increased pluralities.

Representative Bacon always took a great interest in military affairs. He first served with the New York Field Artillery in 1916 and continued throughout the World War as a Field Artillery officer, receiving the Distinguished Service Medal.

His widow, the former Virginia Murray, of New York City, whom he married April 14, 1913, survives with three children, Alexandra Murray, Virginia Murray and Martha.

Gordy and Sasscer Far Behind in Democratic Governorship Contest; Nice and Leser Top Republicans.

By Edward T. Folliard

United States Senator Millard E. Tydings, who headed the Roosevelt Administration's "purge" list, has won the Democratic nomination for a third term.

His victory over Representative David J. Lewis, Roosevelt-backed New Deal candidate in Maryland's uproarious primary, apparently will be a crushing one.

Tydings, 61,405.
Lewis, 48,544.
Hungerford, 3,113.

Later returns from all of the 23 counties were expected to swell Tydings' margin of victory.

O'Conor Lead Mounts

Attorney General Herbert O'Conor was leading his three rivals for the Democratic nomination for Governor—Mayor Howard W. Jackson, William S. Gordy and Lansdale G. Sasscer. The vote:

O'Conor, 43,717.
Jackson, 32,750.
Gordy, 5,130.
Sasscer, 4,742.

Tydings apparently carried four out of the six Baltimore election districts, thus reversing the earlier claims of the Lewis strategists.

The Senator, characterized by President Roosevelt as a "betrayer" of the New Deal, was ahead in 10 out of 12 counties reported early this morning.

Charles County for Tydings

He was piling up some of his best margins in southern Maryland and the Eastern Shore, which the President visited in an attempt to win votes for "Little Davey" Lewis.

Charles County gave Tydings 1,039 and Lewis 515. It was in this county, at Morgantown, that President Roosevelt virtually promised a crowd of Lewis boosters a 2-mile, $3,000,000 bridge across the Potomac.

Tydings also was ahead in Caroline County, the seat of which is Denton. In this home town of Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, the President made a Labor Day speech justifying his right to "invade" a State on behalf of liberal Democrats.

Lewis Losing Prince Georges

Tydings was far ahead in Prince Georges County, the home county of a whole raft of Lewis lieutenants, including Kent R. Mullikin, campaign manager for "Little Davey;" Dr. H. C. "Curly" Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, and M. Hampton Magruder, collector of internal revenue for Maryland and regarded as Democratic "boss" of the county.

The Senator carried Mullikin's own town of Laurel, and also Dr. Byrd's precinct in Berwyn.

Tydings "Happy at Victory"

At 12:45 a. m., Tydings issued the following statement:

"I am very happy to have won such a hard-fought victory. I am very grateful to all friends and acquaintances who supported me in the campaign.

If Tydings continued to maintain his lead it looked as if he would get more than 100 votes of the 149 pos-

By the Associated Press.

With the Maryland primaries and Maine's general election out of the way, there will be senatorial primaries today in Arizona, Colorado, New Hampshire, Vermont, Utah and Washington, but in most of these States the incumbents have little or no intra-party opposition.

Louisiana also will have a primary, but Democrats there already have declared Senator Overton renominated. Michigan, which has no senatorship at stake this year, will decide other contests in a primary.

Although the New Deal is not an issue in the Democratic senatorial primaries today, it is the center of Georgia's four-man senatorial battle. The primary in that State tomorrow will be between Senator George, whom the President wants defeated; Lawrence Camp, White House choice, and former Gov. Eugene Talmadge.

Lonergan Up Today

Senator Lonergan of Connecticut, who like George and Tydings opposed the 1937 court bill, will come up for renomination in a State Democratic convention today and tomorrow.

South Carolina Democrats prepared to name the State's next Governor, three Representatives in Congress and minor officials in a run-off primary today.

The Congressional contests are between Representative Taylor and former Representative Hare, in the Third District, Representative Mahon and Joseph R. Bryson, in the Fourth, and G. Lloyd Ford and John L. McMillan, in the Sixth, in which there is a vacancy because of the death of Representative Gasque.

Three Louisiana Contests.

Baton Rouge, Sept. 12 (AP).—The political machine of the late Senator Long will be opposed in only three State-wide races in tomorrow's Democratic primary.

There are contests in three of the eight Congressional Districts and the races in two of them have produced excitement reminiscent of some of Long's own campaigns.

James H. Morrison, opposing Representative Griffith, Gov. Richard W. Leche's candidate, was shot in the arm Saturday as the Sixth District campaign reached its peak.

In the Fifth District campaign Lieut. Gov. Earl Long, brother of the slain Senator, campaigned for Will Harvey Todd against Representative Mills. D. Y. Smith and George Wesley Smith are other candidates in the fifth.

Increase in Bank Insurance Weighed

Chairman Leo T. Crowley disclosed yesterday that the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation is studying the possibility of insuring bank deposits above the present $5,000 limit.

Yesterday's mails carried to the 13,719 insured banks of the country a questionnaire asking the number of their deposit accounts below $5,000, between $5,000 and $10,000, between $10,000 and $25,000, and over $25,000. Crowley, recalling that Chairman Steagall (Democrat), of Alabama, of the House Banking Committee, advocated the increase, said the FDIC wanted to find out how much extra risk would be involved.

Crowley expressed belief that if the additional risk was very small, there would be little or no objection to increased insurance.

Stengle Names Committee Heads

Charles I. Stengle, president, American Federation of Government Employes, yesterday announced to the organization's annual convention in Chicago appointment of the convention committee chairmen and vice chairmen. The following are from Washington, according to the Associated Press.

Credentials, Mrs. Helen McCarthy Voss, vice chairman; rules, Michael D. Schaefer and C. F. Orton; constitution, James G. Yaden; place of next convention, G. Carroll Dimond and Willis E. Hurd; resolutions, Miss Vinnie Harrington; audit, Larue Tanner; officers' report, Margaret M. Kennedy; reading clerk, Ryland Babb, and sergeant at arms, Edward J. McGinnis and Harry F. Rader.

Dies and Allred in Affectionate Pose

Beaumont, Tex., Sept. 12 (AP).—A resolution boosting Vice President John Nance Garner, for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1940 was defeated at a meeting today of the executive committee of Texas Young Democrats.

GARNER.

The vote was announced as 9 to 6. Several of those opposing the resolution said they took that position because the constitution of the organization forbade indorsement of any candidate.

Some advocates of the resolution, said, however, they believed it was turned down because the committeemen felt it might be embarrassing to President Roosevelt.

El Paso, Tex., Sept. 12 (AP).—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York said today in discussing his availability as a Presidential candidate in 1940:

"I couldn't get a ticket to the gallery in the convention."

Interviewed between trains as he traveled to the American Legion convention in Los Angeles, he added:

"Anyone in office and looking at another office is like a man driving and 'necking' at the same time."

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 12 (AP).—Attorney General David T. Wilentz ruled today that relief recipients or persons holding WPA jobs could not be deprived of their right to vote under a State constitutional provision barring paupers from the ballot.

He told Mrs. Sarah Oliver Hulswit, of Suffern, N. Y., national chairman of the "Women's Rebellion," that he would not comply with her request that voting lists be purged of persons receiving Government assistance.

Mrs. Hulswit charged that relief workers and persons getting Government aid were "intimidated and coerced" by Government officials in balloting and could not "vote freely."

"Before anyone can be considered a pauper appropriate legal proceedings must be held by a judicial officer adjudging him a pauper," Wilentz replied.

Salt Lake City, Sept. 12 (AP).—Senator King (Democrat), Utah, praised Senators Tydings, of Maryland, and George, of Georgia, today and said "there has been too much encroachment by the executive department on the other branches of Government."

Tydings was described by King in an interview as "one of the ablest men in the Senate—a man of courage and ability."

George, also opposed by the President, was termed by the Senator "one of the finest lawyers in Congress, a man who would be an ornament to the Supreme Court bench."

"We have three branches of Government with separate functions, and one must not encroach upon the other," said King.

Green Demands 30-Hour Week To Increase Jobs

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Creation of employment through a 30-hour week in industry was demanded today by President William Green of the American Federation of Labor, in an address before the International Typographical Union's eighty-second annual convention.

Declaring relief from unemployment must come from within private industry and not by Governmental subsidy, Green offered a 6-hour, 5-day week as a solution and challenged economists to "accept our plan or provide a better one."

Criticism of the National Labor Relations Board and a warning the American Federation of Labor would seek or give no quarter in its fight with the Committee for Industrial Organization were other features of the address.

American Lutherans Open 8th Conference

Eastern District of American Lutheran Church yesterday opened its eighth annual Concordia Conference at Takoma Lutheran Church. In the afternoon the Rev. Carl Heminghaus of Baltimore spoke. The Rev. Dr. Frederick H. Meyer, pastor of Fordham Lutheran Church, New York, gave the main sermon at the communion service last night.

MacDonald Buys Into DohertyChain Of Florida Hotels

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—George MacDonald, Catholic layman and financier, has acquired from Henry L. Doherty, a "substantial interest" in the latter's hotel and resort properties in Flordia and the Bahamas, he disclosed today.

Reliable sources estimated $25,000,000 as the price involved.

MacDonald, who was a close friend of the late Cardinal Hayes and has been honored by the Catholic church, with his personal associates will direct the properties, including some of Florida's best known hotels.

MacDonald said that for the past six years, during the depression period, he had been investing in choice Florida property.

C. I. O. Wins Fight for Smelter Union

Company's Dealings With A. F. of L. Are Held Void, Ordered Ended by Labor Board.

The long fight between the American Federation of Labor and the Committee for Industrial Organization over the "Blue Card" union of employes of the Eagle Picher Mining & Smelting Co. yesterday brought a C. I. O. victory before the National Labor Relations Board.

A board examiner recommended that the company and the $18,000,000 concern that owns it, the Eagle Picher Lead Co., reinstate 130 striking employes with back pay for more than three years and stop encouraging membership in the Blue Card Union of Zinc, Lead Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, an A. F. L. affiliate.

The finding is expected to intensify the federation's fight on administration of the Wagner labor relations act by the Labor board. Charging bias by board members in favor of the C. I. O., federation officials have even hinted that members of affiliated unions might refuse to comply with some board decisions.

The examiner, William Ringer, declared the Blue Card union was formed by the companies "as part of their three years' campaign to discourage membership in the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, formerly affiliated with the A. F. of L. but at the present time affiliated with the C. I. O."

Contract Void

The companies' contract with the Blue Card union should be declared null and void, Ringer held.

In addition to reinstatement of the 130 workers, Ringer called for remedial wages to 18 others.

The 130 were among some 600 members of the international union in the tri-State district (southeastern Kansas, northeastern Oklahoma and southeastern Missouri) who began a strike for union recognition on May 8, 1935. The union was then affiliated with the A. F. of L. Most of the strikers returned to work three weeks later in a back-to-work movement.

Ringer charged the companies formed and administered the Tri-State Union and its successor, the Blue Card Union, and that there were "numerous instances of violence and armed force by officers and members of the Tri-State Union against groups and individuals of the international union and persons sympathetic to its members."

Ringer said that F. W. Evans, operator of half a dozen mines in the district, co-operated in back-to-work mass meetings, and three weeks after the strike began, assisted in the organization of the Tri-State Metal, Mine and Smelter Workers Union in opposition to the international. Evans eventually was named president of the new union, Ringer reported.

During the early stages of the new Tri-State Union, Ringer said, its official weekly newspaper criticized the American Federation of Labor and its president, William Green.

The attacks ceased, he said, after the Tri-State Union was reorganized as the Blue Card Union and affiliated with the A. F. of L. to replace the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, which had gone over to the C. I. O.

"Furnished" Expenses

Two days after the Supreme Court upheld the validity of the Wagner act, the examiner said, leaders of the Tri-State Union entered into an agreement with the A. F. of L., to take over all working contracts in force between the Tri-State Union and the mine owners in the tri-State district. Ringer said the Tri-State Union furnished the "preliminary organization expense of affiliation" with the A. F. of L.

Ringer recommended the C. I. O. complaint be dismissed as to John R. Sheppard, director of the company's research department; Floyd Turbett, assistant superintendent of the insulation department, and 255 other employes. The dismissals were recommended on the grounds the men did not desire reinstatement, had obtained other employment, were convicted of damaging property, or were incapable of performing former duties.

Meanwhile, the Ford Motor Co. complained to the Labor Board that the examiner who heard charges of Wagner act violations at the company's Long Beach, Calif., assembly plant did not conduct "a full and fair hearing."

A list of exceptions was filed to the report of Thomas H. Kennedy, the examiner, who held that the company had interfered with the rights of its employes to join the United Auto Workers Union (C. I. O.).

The Gallup Poll

Senator George Leads, 2 to 1, on Primary Eve; Talmadge Strongest in Rural Areas

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 12.—Walter F. George, the veteran Georgia Senator whom President Roosevelt marked for "purging" from the Democratic Party, continues to hold a lead of nearly 2 to 1 over each of his principal opponents in the American Institute's final pre-election survey of the Georgia primary race.

GALLUP.

With Georgia's registered voters scheduled to go to the polls Wednesday, the institute survey found that up through Monday Senator George was firmly holding his early lead, with former Gov. Eugene Talmadge second, Lawrence Camp, President Roosevelt's choice, a close third, and William G. McRae trailing far behind. The institute's final results are:

Per Cent of Popular Vote

George	48%
Talmadge	28
McRae	1

Under Georgia primary law, candidates are nominated by county unit votes rather than by popular vote. Each county has from two to six votes in the nominating convention. There are 410 unit votes in all, and whoever receives a majority—206 votes—wins.

A study of Senator George's strength by counties indicates that his vote in the convention will be about twice as large as the combined votes of his two principal opponents.

Roosevelt Still Popular

The Georgia primary represents the latest test of President Roosevelt's drive to purge his party. The President went into Georgia last month to attack Senator George in a speech at Barnesville in which he all but read the Senator out of the party. While institute surveys have repeatedly found that the President is personally popular in Georgia, being approved by a decisive majority, nevertheless only a minority of the State's voters have apparently been willing to go along with him in supporting Lawrence Camp for the Senate.

The survey shows that approximately two-thirds of the voters who are planning to cast their ballots for Senator George are pro-Roosevelt.

There are apparently two reasons why these persons are supporting the man Roosevelt opposes. As gleaned from earlier surveys and from the comments and remarks of voters, these reasons are (1) despite Roosevelt's popularity a majority of Georgians resent the President's tactics in taking a hand in the State's primary, and (2) the President was not able to convince the majority that his choice, Lawrence Camp, would make a better Senator than the veteran George.

Typical of many comments was that of a 50-year-old business man who is supporting George "because of the stand the President took in telling us how to vote." This same voter is for Roosevelt, too: "I approve of him, but he can't tell me how to vote."

Another typical comment was from a farmer in Bryant County who is for Roosevelt "because he's been liberal to the South and sent our farmers checks," but nevertheless is supporting George because "it's an advertisement for our State to have a ranking Senator."

Persons who are planning to vote for Camp are almost unanimously pro-Roosevelt. These voters—representing one-fifth of the State's total, declare that Camp will give the President strong co-operation.

Talmadge supporters, on the other hand, are predominantly anti-Roosevelt, approximately three out of five saying they disapprove of him as President.

George Weak With Farmers

The survey indicates that Senator George's chief political strength lies in the upper and middle income groups, his chief weakness in the lower income group and among farmers. Talmadge's strength is with farmers and low-income voters. The former Governor actually polls a plurality of the farm vote.

Camp draws his support fairly evenly from persons in all walks of life, though his weakest spot is with the upper-income group.

	Up. Inc Group	Mid. Inc. Group	L. Inc. Group
George	71%	54%	34%
Talmadge	11	23	36
Camp	17	22	29
McRae	1	1	1

	Geo.	Tal.	Ca.	McR.
Farm	36%	43%	20%	1
Rural n-f.	54	21	25	*
Cities, 2,500-10,000	64	12	23	1
Cities, 10,000 and over	59	12	28	1

C. H. Woodward Gets Post at Board of Trade

Claude Henry Woodward will serve temporarily as assistant to Francis G. Addison, jr., president of the Board of Trade, pending appointment of an executive secretary to replace Robert J. Cottrell, whose resignation was accepted yesterday.

WOODWARD.

Woodward will direct the office affairs of the board, Addison announced. A native of Washington, the new executive assistant was educated in the public schools and for many years has been active in business and banking affairs.

He has been a prominent member of the Board of Trade and is now serving on the District Minimum Wage Board as representative for employers.

Newspapers Help Movies Out of Red

Hollywood, Sept. 12 (AP).—Hollywood, which put up half a million dollars to stage the more-movie-business campaign, today reported picture business was leaping into the black from the red.

Every key city in the country reported heavy business, some a 20 per cent increase over normal for this time of year.

Federal-National Bank Building Sale Approved

Additional dividends for creditors and depositors in the closed Federal-American National Bank & Trust Co. were forecast yesterday when Justice Joseph W. Cox, in District Court, refused to interfere with the sale of the institution's former headquarters at Fourteenth and G streets northwest.

Cary A. Hardee, receiver, sought approval of the sale of the building for $765,000 to the newly formed Hamilton National Bank. Ratification of the sale was blocked last week and was called up yesterday for a formal hearing.

Protestants were Herman and Ben Cohen, who said they held receiver's certificates valued at $57,285.98. They asserted the building should bring more than the current offer.

U. of Md. Rolls To Set Record

Enrollment at the University of Maryland for the fall term will be more than 4,300, largest in history, Willard M. Billegeist, director of admissions, said yesterday at College Park, as the university prepared for a record registration day tomorrow.

Applications for entrance in the freshman class jumped 50 per cent over last year to 1,500. Only 1,000 have been admitted.

Of the 4,300 students accepted for the academic year 1938-39, 3,000 will be at College Park. The remaining 1,000 will be at the university's professional schools in Baltimore.

Destroyer to Attend Cup Regatta Here

The Navy Department announced yesterday the destroyer, Jacob Jones, commanded by Lieut. Comdr. Arthur H. McCollum, will arrive at the end of the week to attend the President Cup Regatta.

Manned by five officers and 100 men, the vessel is now in New London, Conn. It was placed in commission in 1919 and has a displacement of 1,050 tons.

Federal Theater Chief Hits Critics As 'Uninformed'

Return of more than 3,500 workers of the Federal Theater project to private employment in the last two years was reported yesterday by Director Hallie Flanagan.

Touching on one of the major points of criticism of the project, which has been accused of being a hotbed of Communist activity, Mrs. Flanagan said that, "contrary to statements of the ill-informed, less than 10 per cent of the authors are concerned primarily with social problems."

The Federal Theater Project, she reported, now employs 9,170 persons on 2 projects in 20 States as against a peak of 12,700 in 1936.

Since its inception in August, 1935, the project has produced 924 plays. Performances totalled 54,960 to audiences of 26,532,674.

RFC Ouster Of George Aide Upheld

Sheppard Committee Finds Political Activity a Bar to U. S. Office, Weighs New Maryland Charge

The Senate Campaign Committee yesterday ruled that the Reconstruction Finance Corporation acted properly in removing Edgar B. Dunlap, regional counsel at Atlanta, for his work in behalf of Senator Walter F. George.

Previously the committee had ruled that both H. Hampton Magruder, collector of internal revenue for Maryland, and Mrs. Beatrice Toulson, postmistress at Salisbury, Md., had run counter to Federal regulations and statute in their activities in behalf of Representative David J. Lewis, candidate for the Democratic senatorial nomination against Senator Millard E. Tydings.

The committee said it had received from Arthur E. Hungerford, of Baltimore, a renewed request for an investigation of the charge, made by Senator Tydings in a campaign address, that Henry W. Webb was dismissed as Maryland director of the Federal Housing Administration because he refused to support Representative Lewis.

The committee expects to decide today on the complaint of Senator George over the removal of Erle Cocke, National Emergency Council director for Georgia. Cocke was replaced by Clarke E. Foreman, of the power division of PWA. George contends, solely because Cocke had been named on George's recommendation.

The committee received a complaint from Albert Hilliard of Reno, Nev., unsuccessful candidate for the Democratic Senatorial nomination in that State, but refused to disclose its nature other than to say it pertained to "a dismissal for political activity."

Meanwhile, the Democratic National Committee filed its report for the June 1-August 31 quarter with the Clerk of the House of Representatives showing receipts of $120,511 and expenditures of $123,932. Added to previous reports, this raised the total cost of the Democratic national campaign for the year to August 31 at $636,117, including the unpaid obligations.

The Republican National Committee, which filed its report Saturday, listed receipts of $788,185 and expenditures of $794,459 during the same period.

The Republican report listed numerous individual contributors of $1,000 or more. The only Democrat donations of $1,000 were from Max Silverstein, Detroit, and Breckinridge Long, Laurel, Md.

Down for $100 each on the list were Secretary Hull, Secretary Ickes, Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, RFC Chairman Jones, several Senators and Mayor Hague of Jersey City. Charles Michelson, Democratic publicity director, gave $300.

Citizens Urged To Decorate Homes For Regatta Week

The District Commissioners yesterday issued a proclamation calling upon Washington citizens to decorate their homes and places of business during the week of the President's Cup Regatta.

At the same time, members of regatta committees reported at a luncheon meeting at the Raleigh Hotel that plans have been completed for the annual event, scheduled to begin Saturday with sailing races on the Potomac.

Present at the luncheon meeting, sponsored by the Fo'csle Club, were Elizabeth Reed, queen of the 1938 regatta, and the six ladies of her court. James A. Councilor, general chairman of the event, announced that tickets are on sale at the regatta committee's Willard Hotel headquarters, at the local headquarters of the American Automobile Association and the Keystone Automobile Club, at the Greyhound bus terminal and at leading hotels in the District.

The regatta will end on Sunday, September 25, with speedboat races for the President's gold cup.

Ignorance Syphilis' Best Ally, Clinic at Georgetown Is Told

Half of Million Who Contract Disease Each Year Discover and Report Infection Tardily, U. S. Public Health Surgeon Tells Alumni Five-Day Gathering Here.

Half of the 1,000,000 persons contracting syphilis each year are not aware of their contagion and consequently seek treatment tardily, Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, assistant surgeon general, division of venereal diseases, United States Public Health Service, yesterday told prominent specialists in medicine and surgery gathering at Georgetown University for a five-day clinic.

Dr. Vonderlehr, speaking on treatment of syphilis from a public health standpoint, emphasized "case finding" to the medical men and urged them to make early diagnoses and reports to public health authorities.

"As a rule, for every two persons in a community who seek treatment for syphilis there are three who unknowingly have been exposed and do not seek treatment," he said.

The disease can be cured in 85 per cent of cases if treatment is begun in the first year of contagion, Dr. Vonderlehr said. He stressed early treatment and preventive steps, urging regular recourse to the Wasserman test in finding new cases.

"There are about 60,000 children born each year with syphilis when early pre-natal treatment could prevent such occurrences in 95 per cent of the births," he said.

The five-day program, a part of the third annual alumni extension course, is sponsored this year by the Class of 1913 of the Georgetown University school of medicine.

The Rev. David V. McCauley, S. J., dean, welcomed the alumni to the school.

Dr. Vonderlehr's report followed a paper by Dr. John Mark Higgins, of Sayre, Pa., who described as a "rare occurrence" a case in which a new-born baby contracted profound anemia and jaundice 36 hours after birth but lived.

The infant's life was saved by periodic blood transfusions and liver injections, he said. Contraction of anemia such a short time after birth is "very rare," he said, and is usually fatal.

Heartbeats of an unborn baby to be broadcast for the first time will highlight today's programe, Dr. John R. Cavanagh, in charge of the dispensary at Georgetown Hospital, will supervise the demonstration, which will be broadcast at 10:30 a. m. over Station WMAL. The broadcast is sponsored by the school in co-operation with the Medical Society of the District.

The sounds will be heard through the Marbel Loud Speaking Amplifier for Heart Soounds through a special mircrophone p'aced on the patient's chest. Dr. Cavanagh will explain the different types of heart and interpret the sounds, stating whether the heart is normal or abnormal, for the benefit of students and audience.

The operative clinic begins at 8:30 a. m. when 17-year-old Helen Elizabeth Beck, who has suffered an ailment similar to hemophilia since she was six years old, will go on the operating table.

Dr. James A. Cahill, jr., of the Georgetown class of 1913 and chairman of the extension course program, will remove the girl's spleen at 11 a. m. in an effort to cure her.

Surgical considerations of the thyroid were discussed during the afternoon by Dr. Frank Lahey, of Boston, president of the American section of the third international goiter conference, which opened at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

Drs. Cahill and William F. O'Donnell, both of the Georgetown class of 1913, presided at the sessions.

Other speakers were Dr. Nicholson J. Eastman, professor of obstetrics, Johns Hopkins University Medical School; Dr. Frank C. McCormack, of the Georgetown class of 1913; Dr. Ivy Pelzman and Dr. Constantine G. Pakal, both of the Georgetown medical faculty, and Dr. George Tully Vaughan, emeritus professor of surgery at Georgetown.

Surgeons and specialists attending the clinic will conclude the day with a reunion banquet for the class of 1913 in the University Club. Dr. O'Donnell and Dr. Pelzman will preside.

Maj. Brooke Takes Stand, Denies Killing

'Never Laid Hands on Her in Anger,' He Tells Counsel in Trial for Wife's Murder.

Columbus, Ga., Sept. 12 (AP).—Maj. John Rutter Brooke, jr., 45-year-old infantry instructor accused of killing his wife, Elizabeth, on June 8 at Fort Benning, emphatically denied the charge from the witness stand today.

"I have never laid hands on her in anger in my life," he said in reply to a question by Defense Council T. Hicks Fort.

Tell of Leave-Taking

Maj. Brooke testified there was nothing unpleasant during a motor car ride he and his wife took shortly before her body with the head battered was found at the foot of the stairs in their quarters.

The major said they returned to their quarters after 10 o'clock that morning and that prior to his leaving for a meneuvers camp he embraced his wife in the living room.

Brooke said he left about 11:15 a. m., dressed in a helmet, breeches and high laced boots.

"Did you have any blood on your clothes when you left?" Fort asked.

"I did not," the major replied.

"How did you leave your wife that morning?"

"Perfectly all right. I spoke to her on the sun porch and she was perfectly all right."

The Government rested its case this morning after offering testimony indicating the major was $6,500 in debt at the time his wife was slain.

Just before closing, the Government placed on the stand a Federal Bureau of Investigation agent who said the 45-year-old infantry instructor was uncertain in his denial of guilt a few days after the killing.

Denies Forcing Confession

Under cross-examination the agent denied he tried to force a confession.

Following a week's presentation of circumstantial evidence by the prosecution, the defense opened with Mrs. Alma Brooke Sanford, sister of the defandant, as one of the first witnesses.

The black-clad matron testified she heard Capt. Thomas Drake scream and yell at the Brooke children last Tuesday morning just before the trial began and that she found them in an hysterical condition.

Previously during cross-examination Capt. Drake told of interviewing the children in the district attorney's office but denied he had "bullied" them.

Mrs. Sanford said she had lived in the Brooke home for months at a time and added "I have never known a happier family. They were an ideally devoted couple."

Also testifying as character witnesses for Maj. Brooke were Capt. W. D. North, Maj. G. A. Davis, Maj. Don Pratt and Master Sergt. John Stanford. All declared he had a good reputation.

Before the trial the Government said it intended to show Brooke was an habitual gambler and held double indemnity insurance policies on his wife's life.

Debts in Evidence

At the beginning of today's session, District Attorney T. Hoyt Davis offered a list of debts amounting to $6,500 which he said was taken from the Brooke quarters.

Defense Counsel T. Hicks Fort agreed he would admit installments on the amount of indebtedness had been paid through May.

The wife of the Army officer was found slain in their quarters at Fort Benning, June 8.

Maj. L. H. Sims, Fort Benning officer, testified Army regulations state an officer's official bills must be paid before the 10th of each month and that Maj. Brooke had never been delinquent in his accounts on the post.

2 Men Die of Auto Fumes, 1 Takes Life With Gun at Hotel

A third man was found fatally shot in a hotel room, a pistol by his side.

Two of the deaths were officially ruled suicides.

Henry Herman, 29, attorney for the PWA power division, was found slumped over the wheel of his car in a garage behind his home at 3225 Reservoir road. Detective Sergt. Jeremiah Flaherty said Dr. Christopher J. Murphy, deputy coroner, would issue a certificate of suicide.

The ignition key of Herman's automobile was turned on, police said, but the motor had stopped running.

Herman, unmarried, held degrees from the University of Colorado and Harvard Law School. Rhetts said he had appeared cheerful Sunday but had not been seen since leaving to play tennis in the afternoon.

Earlier yesterday in a Raleigh Hotel bedroom Benjamin F. Harrell, 39, of Silver Spring, Md., was found fatally wounded, with a .38 caliber automatic pistol on the floor nearby, by William J. Loeffler, night watchman. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald issued a certificate of suicide.

Mrs. Harrell said her husband, suffering from tuberculosis, had just been discharged from Glen Dale Sanitarium. He formerly had been employed as a chauffeur by the Department of Agriculture.

George R. Land, 52, of 2025 I street northwest, was pronounced dead by an Emergency Hospital physician following futile efforts of the rescue squad to revive him after his removal from the front seat of an automobile parked behind 2121 H street northwest.

Police said a section of garden hose led from the car's exhaust pipe to a ventilator window and that the engine still was running when Land was found by his nephew, John W. Grady, of Greenville, S. C. Land was employed at the Park Lane Inn, according to police.

Swiss Mine Frontiers With Dynamite

Mines Placed Under Roads and Railroads Facing Germany as Volunteer Troops Are Called.

Berne, Switzerland, Sept. 12 (AP).—Switzerland, fearful of invasion if a new European war occurs, bolstered her frontier defenses today with dynamite and volunteer troops.

Along her northern border, where frontier fortifications face Germany, mines loaded with dynamite were placed under railroad tracks and international highways. An official announcement said this was done with a view to their "destruction" in case of aggression.

Swiss troops were called to duty from the volunteer military machine which acts as the nation's defense force. Heavy forces of sentinels surrounded border positions as the mining work progressed rapidly.

The government announced its frontier preparations as "preventive measures," adopting the same tone as the French, Belgian and Netherlands governments in their precautionary measures.

The order will be enforced until further notice.

The border precautions, also extended along the French boundary.

plebiscite as a possible solution.)

In one respect, however, the Fuehrer sought to relieve the international situation: He held out an olive branch to France.

Reasserting Germany's readiness to let bygones be bygones, he again renounced all aspirations for revision of the Versailles treaty with a view to regaining Alsace-Lorraine.

"Strasbourg means much," he said, "but we have surrendered it in the interests of peace to settle for once and for all the eternal strife with France."

"On other frontiers, too, we have made sacrifices. We have acted more than loyally."

Fails to Commit Self

While asserting positively that no German deserved the name of German if he was not willing to risk his life on behalf of the people of the same blood in Czechoslovakia, the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans, Hitler in no way committed himself on the method he intends to pursue to compel the Prague government to give the minority the deal he is determined they shall get.

That deal, according to all that has happened in the past week in the party congress, can be only union with Germany of the region inhabited by the Sudeten Germans.

"The responsibility for the next move now is up to Britain and Lord Runciman (unofficial British mediator in Prague)," said one prominent official.

"At any rate, after tonight, nobody can make Germany responsible for what is to happen. Prague and London hold Europe's fate in their hands."

"The Almighty did not create 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans to deliver them over to a hated foreign regime," Hitler thundered. "The Almighty has not created 7,000,000 Czechs to act as guardians of these Germans."

Charges Manhandling

He charged that in the neighboring republic "millions of people are being manhandled and suppressed."

"The depriving of these human beings of all rights must come to an end," he cried.

His words were greeted with sweeping demonstrations of intense patriotic fervor.

Outside the hall, in hotels, restaurants and on street corners, Germans embraced each other.

They applauded each Hitlerian oratorical climax, and as Hitler drove back to his hotel over the 3-mile route from the hall the streets were jammed with spectators who filled the air with their cries of "heil."

Nazis pointed out one passage in Hitler's speech as significant. It was:

"On the whole it is a matter of the Czechoslovak government to arrange affairs with authorized representatives of the Sudeten Germans and come to an understanding one way or the other."

In other words, he consented to continued negotiations but wanted a definite solution before long.

The fuehrer's hatred of the Czechs, of whom he spoke in contemptous terms, seemed to be centered upon the personality of President Eduard Benes.

Gives Lie to Benes

"Benes invented the lie that we mobilized our troops on May 21," he charged.

Thousands of his followers shrieked the cry of derision, "pfui."

"A great power cannot a second time stand for such a contemptible attack," he shouted. "I am a National Socialist. As such I always hit back immediately."

He charged Czechoslovakia with "mistreating and oppressing" the Sudeten Germans, and declared the minority was "being systematically ruined and doomed to slow extinction."

Hitler then for the first time disclosed the carefully guarded secret of Germany's fortifications in the west—a subject to which only Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering hitherto had dared to make a reference.

Gigantic Fortifications

"I can assure you that since May 28," he said, "the most gigantic fortifications works of all time were begun in the west."

Then, apparently with the intention of warning France, he piled up an array of figures to show rearming Germany's gigantic activities on her frontiers with France, be completed before winter sets in."

"I can assure you the work will Belgium and Switzerland.

He reported that there were 362,000 workers, 100,000 labor service men and numerous army engineering and infantry battalions at work on the fortifications.

He said each day 8,000 freight cars transported material amounting to 100,000 tons into the frontier region and declared:

The early part of Hitler's speech was devoted entirely to recalling the Nazi party's fight for supreme power in Germany.

Attacks Democracies

Then he turned to an attack on the democracies, charging that "we see democracy and bolshevism arrayed in a solid front" against Germany.

"It is a bloody mockery of history," he said, "that the democracies are allied with the most brutal dictatorship in the world."

It was evident throughout the Fuehrer's speech that he was making an attempt to persuade the French, and with them the British, that it was not in their interest to risk the possibility of a European war on behalf of a small state which he asserted denied the most elementary, human rights to its minorities.

Hitler Speech Puts Peace Up to Czechs, Italians Feel

Rome Listens Closely to Nuremberg Address, Lauds Fuehrer's Stand for Its 'Dignity, and Moderation;' Fascists Welcome Reaffirmation of 'Axis' and Believe War Is Not Imminent.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Sept. 12.—High Italian Fascist officials expressed the belief that Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Nuremberg speech today placed responsibility for European peace squarely up to Czechoslovakia and her allies.

They expressed admiration for what they termed the "dignity" and "moderation" of the Fuehrer's speech.

One usually reliable source said it was up to England and France to face realities and realize that rights of the Sudeten Germans in Czechoslovakia could no longer be denied.

Fascist leaders especially approved Hitler's support of the Rome-Berlin axis and expression of German friendship for Italy.

Although comparatively few Italians understand German, enormous crowds stood anxiously before radio sets throughout the country. Many asked each other: "Is it war or peace?"

Those who understood his words nodded their heads in relief.

"It's peace for the moment, anyhow," they said.

Insurgents Take Strategic Peaks On Ebro Line

Hendaye, France (At The Spanish Frontier), Sept. 12 (AP).—Spanish Insurgent army headquarters on the Ebro front reported tonight continued victories had given their forces possession of dominating peaks in the Caballos Mountains from where they could rake government lines on the west bank of the Ebro.

Insurgent dispatches admitted Loyalist troops launched a series of counterattacks but contended they came to nothing.

The Insurgents said hundreds of militiamen of the Loyalists' new Sixtieth Division were captured. They estimated the total Loyalist dead in the last four days of fighting at more than 1,000.

Reports from the Loyalist side were limited to accounts of counterattacks which gave no definite results.

Trolley Operator Fined as Speeder

A Capital Transit Co. motorman, accused of operating his street car 36 miles per hour in a 23-mile speed limit, was fined $10 by Judge Edward M. Curran in Traffic Court yesterday.

According to Policeman Peter Fuss, the street car was traveling above the speed limit near Wisconsin avenue and R streets northwest. The accused motorman was Oscar Adams, 48, of the 1600 block of Twenty-fourth street northwest.

Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.

Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.

Japanese Claim Fresh Gains In Hankow Drive

Shanghai, Sept. 12 (AP).—Japan's overland offensive westward toward Hankow north of the Yangtze River raced forward at an accelerated pace tonight, according to Japanese army reports issued here.

The army asserted capture of Hwangchwan, about 75 miles east of the vital Peiping-Hankow Railway, was imminent.

The Japanese said 15 Chinese divisions in this region retreated, paving the way for a Japanese thrust even nearer to Hankow.

"Dense concentration" of Chinese soldiers south of Hwangchwan was wiped out under repeated aerial bombings, the Japanese said.

South of the Yangtze River a long deadlock between Japanese and Chinese forces was broken west of Kuichang, the Japanese said, when the invaders cracked defense lines and advanced to within a few miles of the Hupen border to the west.

20-Foot Propellers Seen for Planes In Stratosphere

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 12.—Giant propellors, 20 feet in diameter, about twice the size used on present planes, were forecast at the opening of the fifth International Congress for Applied Mechanics here today.

The Congress dedicated a new wind tunnel, the first stratosphere tunnel in this country, in which 400-mile-an-hour winds in rarefied air will reproduce flying conditions of 7 miles altitude.

Stratosphere flying is one reason for the giant propellors, predicted by Charles H. Chatfield, director of research for the United Aircraft Corporation. Propellors high up, he explained will have to revolve slower, because they lose their "bite" when their tips travel faster than the speed of sound. Sound is slower in the stratosphere.

Lee Ging Explains To U. S. That His Name Is Lee Ging

By the Associated Press.

Lee Ging, of Colusa, Calif., yesterday asked the board of tax appeals to redetermine an income tax deficiency assessment of $4,251 and set the record straight concerning his name.

The Internal Revenue Bureau addressed the deficiency notice to "Don Ho or Don Hoy, alias Lee Ging."

Ging asserted in his petition filed that Lee Ging was his true name and he had "never used or been known by any alias."

Don Ho, he added, is his wife and the mother of his nine children. He contended the Internal Revenue Bureau failed to allow sufficient exemption for his dependents.

Reich Emigrants To Fill Quota

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, Sept. 12.—Nazi pressure since the anschluss in Austria has resulted in immigration of a greater number of German political refugees to this country, with prospect the complete quota of 27,370 will be used in the coming year, Dr. Joseph P. Chamberlain, chairman of the National co-ordinating committee for aid to refugees and emigrants from Germany, said today at headquarters here.

A total of 11,917 Jews migrated here in the year ending July 1, according to Chamberlain, who said that 513 of these came from Austria. The total he revealed, was more than 1,000 higher than that of 1937, which included Jewish and non-Jewish arrivals. He said refugees from Germany numbered 4,392 in 1934; 5,210 in 1935; 6,346 in 1936 and 10,895 in 1937.

Mexican Deputies Accuse U. S. of Bulldozing Nation

Mexico City, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—The United States was assailed tonight at a joint session of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies in honor of foreign delegates to the International Congress Against War and Fascism, and Mexico was represented as "suffering attacks which may be considered as a war of foreign chancellories."

United States Ambassador Josephus Daniels was among those present while Mexican legislators vented their dislike of their northern neighbor.

Little Business Asks U. S. to Shun European Strife

Pittsburgh, Sept. 12 (AP).—A plea that America keep out of any possible European war was voiced today in a statement approved by the board of the National Small Business Men's Association.

The statement said:

"We urge our Government to serve notice on all European governments that the United States will take no part in their madness; that we will close our doors to traffic in war aid of any sort, and that the governments responsible for perpetuating war upon a helpless world will gain the enmity of the American people for generations to come."

The association will begin its annual convention here tomorrow.

Say it with a Clear Skin

NO man or woman wants to have a finger poked at them or receive sympathy because of an unhealthy skin appearance.

Some skin troubles are tough to correct, but we do know this—skin tissues like the body itself must be fed from within.

To make the food we eat available for strength and energy, there must be an abundance of red-blood-cells.

S.S.S. Tonic builds these precious red cells. It is a simple, internal remedy, tested for generations and also proven by scientific research.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells . . . to restore lost weight . . . to regain energy . . . to strengthen nerves . . . and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel . . . and have your friends compliment you on the way you look. There is no substitute for this time-tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

ALUMINUM
1 POUND
In 1926 we could sell this much raw aluminum for 20c.
Research and increased efficiency enabled us to add this much more by the year 1929.
This block represents the amount we could sell for 20c in 1929.
More research, more investments in efficient plants, enabled us to add this much more by 1938.
Now we can sell this much aluminum for 20c.

The price of aluminum is one of the most important things in the world to us, as producers of this metal.

The price has to be right for the user if we are to stay in business.

People don't have to buy aluminum. They can always say, "It costs too much", and use some other material.

As we look back, it seems as though every policy of this company has grown from the idea of making a useful metal of good quality cheap enough to enable it to compete with other metals, some of which are thousands of years older. The reason ours is a successful business today is because we have made aluminum cheap.

As recently as 1926 we had to sell bulk aluminum for 27 cents a pound. By 1929 we had found ways to reduce the costs and could lower the selling price to 24.3 cents per pound. Today, although on an average the workers in our plants receive about 30% more for making a pound of aluminum than they did in 1929, the base price is only 20 cents a pound.

Considering the great difficulty of getting aluminum out of its ore, 20 cents is a low price. Frankly, we are a bit proud of the efforts of our research men, engineers and production experts which have made such a price possible.

France Sees 'Menace' in Hitler Speech

Nation Is Ready, Colonies Have Attested Loyalty, Says Bonnet After Cabinet Listens.

By John Elliott,
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, Sept. 12.—The French reaction to tonight's speech of Chancellor Adolf Hitler at Nuremberg is accurately reflected in the grim cliche of a physician leaving the bedside of a patient who is desperately ill—"while there is life there is hope."

Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet and all the officials at the Quai D'Orsay gathered around a radio set and listened to the Fuehrer, as, amid the breathless applause of the Nazis, he addressed the closing session of the party congress at Nuremberg.

Find It "Menacing"

After it was over a high official of the French government made no attempt to conceal his anxiety concerning the gravity of the Czech situation, describing Hitler's speech as "menacing." At the same time he found ground for some comfort in the fact that Hitler did not suggest an immediate recourse to violence and did not close the door to further negotiations.

But Hitler's threat not to tolerate interference by the British and the French in what he evidently considers a quarrel solely concerning the Germans and the Czechs, and his intimation that he wasn't going to suffer another diplomatic setback, such as he received on May 21, was regarded here as most ominous.

It was a veritable war council of the French cabinet ministers who sat in conclave under the chairmanship of Premier Edouard Daladier at the Ministry of War for two hours this afternoon, and listened to an expose of the international situation from Bonnet, who returned this morning from Geneva, where he had discussed how France, with Russia and Rumania should implement their respective alliances with Czechoslovakia, with Litvinov and Conmenu. The tense and preoccupied faces of the French ministers as they entered the council chamber reflected only too plainly the gravity of the European crisis.

At the end of the meeting, Albert Sarraut, the minister of the interior, read out the following communique to the newspapermen:

"The council of cabinet, gathered under the chairmanship of Eduard Daladier, has taken note of the recent diplomatic documents and of the events of foreign policy of which an expose has been made by Georges Bonnet.

"The minister has rendered homage to the patriotism of the nation to its calm and its sangfroid. It has also received from North Africa and from our entire colonial empire the most touching testimony of their fidelity to France. This dignified attitude so worthy of the country is particularly useful to the defense of peace."

Country Is Ready

Questioned by newspapermen for further details of the meeting, Sarraut parried by replying, "We have considered every hypothesis. That's all we could do since we are still in the dark as to what Chancellor Hitler is going to say."

The allusion by a reporter to the seriousness of the situation produced this sally from the minister of the interior, "Grave, well the least that can be said is to employ a well-known formula that the situation, on merit, is being followed with the closest attention."

Ramon Patenotre, minister of economics, told newspapermen that "all measures of an economic character have been taken and will come into effect automatically so that if, unhappily, a conflict should break out we will not see in this field an improvisation such as was the case in 1914."

It was also significant of the growing menace to peace, that Premier Daladier received immediately after the cabinet meeting, Gen. Maurice Gamelin, chief of staff of the French defense forces, Gen. Alphonese Georges, chief of staff of the army, and Gaston Billotte, military governor of Paris. Their conversation lasted two hours, but no statement concerning it was issued to the press.

Subsequently Daladier talked with Jean Mistler, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Chamber of Deputies. After the meeting, Mistler said, "if events should become precipitate, I will summon a meeting of Parliament." Under the French constitution, not the executive, but the French Parliament must declare war. So when the French government decides that the time has come for France to fulfill her treaty of alliance with Czechoslovakia, it will have to summon Parliament to approve its action.

Military authorities were ready to clamp down martial law along the frontier where thousands of Sudeten Germans were clamoring for "return to our political home in the German Reich."

The intercouncil of the Cabinet, presided over by Premier Milan Hodza, met after listening to the speech but ended the session without issuing a communique.

The presumption, however, was the cabinet officers were giving close scrutiny to police reports from Sudeten regions.

From some quarters came the opinion that Hitler's address contributed nothing new politically to the present Czechoslovak-Sudeten German situation.

One responsible government official, pointing out Hitler's demand for self-determination for the Sudetens, said this very issue was now being negotiated with the Germanic minority.

Hitler's personal attacks on Benes, whom the Fuehrer accused of spreading "lies" in connection with reports of German army mobilizations, was excused by Czechoslovak officials as declarations intended for internal consumption and designed to impress the German people.

The fact that Hitler said nothing about the government's negotiations with the Sudetens and did not urge their suspension was regarded favorably in some quarters.

Washington Relieved

Outwardly silent and inwardly relieved, but only to the extent of grasping at a breathing spell before facing more dangers ahead, the State Department turned full attention yesterday to the speech of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

At the end, the common opinion in official Washington was that, in respect to its tone, no more swashbuckling, belligerent and provocative address could have been made. But because it was couched in generalities, refrained from enunciating a concrete plan and failed to end negotiations over the Sudeten Germans, the speech, it was agreed, postponed the peril of war for a little while.

Treasury and Securities and Exchange Commission officials watched developments abroad in an atmosphere of unusual calm. Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau prolonged his week-end at his Dutchess County farm instead of returning to his desk, as expected, while SEC officials gave no indications of considering plans for swift invocation of their power to close security markets in an emergency.

The Treasury was able to look upon the day of international alarms from the background of the unprecedentedly strong monetary position in which the United States stands alone among the nations. The Nation's immense gold hoard, amounting to about 55 per cent of the world's visible supply, has been increased by about $150,000,000 since August 31 by the continued flight of the monetary metal from Europe.

Military 'Games' on Czech Border

This Czech soldier hiding behind a tree, ready to fire upon his "enemy," is participating in extensive military maneuvers held near Milovice. With Europe engaged in war games and the rest of the world talking war, one wonders how long these fighting men will remain at play.

Moscow Regards Hitler's Address As 'No Surprise'

Moscow, Sept. 12 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's Nuremberg speech was received without surprise in Moscow, where it was not expected the Fuehrer would back down on his demands for self-determination for Sudetens in Czechoslovakia.

On the contrary, the view has been current in Soviet circles that the ultimate outcome would be a settlement among the western powers at the expense of Czechoslovakia.

Britain was believed here to be willing to go the limit in satisfying Nazi demands in Czechoslovakia, so long as this does not mean actual warfare.

Bulgars to Issue Military Call

London, Sept. 12 (AP).—A British news agency (Reuters) dispatch from Sofia, Bulgaria, said tonight it was reliably reported the government would issue an order tomorrow for military registration of all men between the ages of 20 and 50.

The Bulgarian army began maneuvers Monday which will last a week.

(The Balkan entente—Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia and Rumania—agreed July 31 to cancel clauses of the World War treaty of Neuilly and permit her to rearm.)

ized that Hitler maintained his stand in the face of repeated British warnings of the possible consequences of a departure from the methods of peaceful negotiations.

No final conclusions were reached, however, by the ministers at their conference tonight. It is expected they will meet again tomorrow, when a fuller report will be available from Sir Nevile Henderson, British Ambassador in Berlin.

British defense forces will be kept in readiness for immediate action for the next few weeks or months or until the Sudeten problem is finally solved.

The greatest crowds since the abdication of King Edward VIII jammed Downing street early tonight to await the dramatic meeting of Chamberlain and his inner cabinet. A strong force of police kept the spectators from loitering in front of the black door of No. 10 through which Chamberlain and his wife passed at 7:30 following their return from an automobile drive in the country this afternoon.

While in no way anxious to fight for the Czechs alone, the cabinet realized that any attack on France would really be an attack on the British empire, since the British frontier in Stanley Baldwin's famous phrase of three years ago, is still considered to be on the Rhine, if not on the Danube or the Vltava, which flows through Prague.

Aware of the seriousness of the situation, the cabinet authorized Chamberlain, Halifax, Hoare and Simon to deal directly with any emergency arising from Hitler's speech without waiting for another cabinet session. Final approval was given to the measures which would be taken at a moment's notice to implement the Anglo-French military understanding.

While the session was still in progress, the Czechoslovak minister, Jan Masaryk, called at the foreign office and left with Vansittart a note intended to stiffen the British policy, which he had just received from his government in Prague. Although no official account of the contents of the note was available, it was understood that the document conveyed a warning to the British government that if Hitler proposed a plebiscite for Sudetenland, Prague would reject it, however much it appealed to the British government as offering means for a solution of the dispute.

A plebiscite such as Hitler staged after he marched into Austria would be incompatible with the integrity of the Czechoslavak state, the note was believed to have stated.

The note also declared, it was understood, that plan No. 4 represented the Czech government's extreme offer to the Sudeten Germans which it was not prepared to extend. The note pointed out, it was further understood, that the Prague government had made its latest concessions only under the strongest pressure from the British government and that, therefore, the British would have to accept some responsibility for them.

U. S. Cruiser Arrives

The American colony in London was said to be visibly cheered today by the arrival at Portland, one of the British naval bases in southern England, of the new 10,000-ton cruiser Nashville. The Nashville will stay at Portland at least a week.

During the night the Nashville crossed the channel from Cherbourg, where she paid a "courtesy visit" as part of the shakedown cruise which the vessel is making in European waters. The Nashville fired a 21-gun salute as she steamed into Portland harbor. This was returned by the British battleship Royal Oak, which with the fourth destroyer flotilla, has been sent to Portland for two weeks for anti-submarine exercises, while the rest of the home fleet maneuvered off the east coast of Scotland, ready to defend the North Sea against any enemy.

The cruiser Honolulu, sister ship of the Nashville, is due from Gravesend on September 22, and the Nashville and Honolulu will be available if it becomes necessary to evacuate Americans from the British Isles or elsewhere.

Final preparations were made today at Invergordon, Scotland, for the autumn cruise of the British home fleet which begins tomorrow. A number of naval reserve men from the Sussex coast arrived at Invergordon today and have been posted on various battleships to undergo their annual 14-day's training.

Delay Asked in Second Trial

Stryker moved toward the bench as a recess was called, and asked to be permitted to make a statement. "I wish to ask the court for an order that in the event that the district attorney should desire to move this case again for a second trial," he said, "that the trial be set at some time after the conclusion of the coming political campaign."

The presiding justice, whose decision had brought to a close a trial that lasted four weeks and two days, produced 4,600 pages of testimony from 60 witnesses, said he would hear Stryker when the district attorney's office made its motion. Continuing the crescendo of acrimony which has marked the trial, Sol Gelb, assistant district attorney, had meanwhile interposed the remark that the prosecutor's office would move for trial when it deemed it was ready.

So ended, at 5 p. m., a session in which Justice Pecora had barred the doors, so that even newspapermen attending could not get out to flash his decision to the afternoon papers, and then read with emphasis quotation after quotation from the higher courts, as the principles which had guided him in reaching the decision. He had spent a sleepless Sunday night over it, Justice Pecora said later, and he told the crowded courtroom he had not read his final authority until a few minutes before he entered to announce his decision.

Deplores Extra Defences

The court deplored, he said, the extra expense that would be entailed upon the State and the defendant by his decision. He deplored the incident that impelled him to act but "the safety and the security of the humblest citizen in the land, and of the meanest criminal in the land," he declared, "should not be imperiled by considerations of the saving of public moneys.'

In the stampede from the courtroom that followed the justice's decision, a ring of policemen was formed in the corridor about Hines, and helped him through a pressing crowd to a taxicab at the curb in front of the courthouse. A yelling, excited mob of some 3,000 Hines partisans cheered him as he sped away. Dewey passed from the courthouse a little later, amidst a scattered hand-clapping on the steps, and then was uproariously booed as his car took him to the District Attorney's office.

Stryker said: "We are ready to retry this case at any time, but any attempt to re-try it in the heat of the coming political campaign will be opposed with the same force with which I moved for a mistrial against the District Attorney."

Mrs. Hines, who has been an almost continuous spectator at her husband's trial, was met walking alone along Worth street, near the courthouse 40 minutes after the trial was ended, and begged to be excused from comment. "I have too much to think over tonight," she said.

It was learned that Dewey would await the public's reaction to the outcome of the trial before making any pronouncement on the move that has been under way to draft him for the Republican nomination for the Governorship of New York. Several Republican leaders questioned his further availability and Representative Bruce Barton, who has been suggested as a running-mate for him, walked from the courthouse where he saw the outcome of the trial, refusing to comment.

As a final word, Justice Pecora said: "I want to thank the press for the cleanest and most masterful coverage of this trial of any trial I ever heard of."

The legal precedents which he had been citing throughout the afternoon inveighed heavily against excesses by public prosecutors bent on obtaining convictions in violation of standards of fairness, or of the rights of defendant to be presumed innocent unless and until proven guilty. When court was adjourned, a circle of admirers rushed up to clasp his hand and assure him he had struck one of the greatest blows in recent times for "the liberty of the individual."

Throughout the reading Dewey sat mostly with his chin cupped in one hand, slumped low in his chair, and a red flush rose at times from his neck. Once he turned and tried to smile at a friend behind him, but the smile was wry.

Memorial Bridge Wiring Bid Asked

The National Park Service today advertised for bids for rewiring the electrical installation by which the draw span on the Arlington Memorial Bridge is operated.

The electrical installation was damaged by the floods of March, 1936, and April, 1937, and since then only temporary wiring has been used. Bids will be opened in the Interior Department Building on September 21.

Duggan Asks Pan-American Peace Process

By the Associated Press.

Laurence Duggan, chief of the State Department's division of American republics, last night called for a "completely integrated peace mechanism" for Pan-America, "whether embodied in one treaty or several." He hinted that an attempt may be made to secure it at the forthcoming Pan American conference at Lima.

Secretary of State Hull said yesterday he hoped to be able to attend the conference personally. It begins in December.

Duggan spoke over a National Broadcasting Co. hook-up outlining what remains to be done to develop the good neighbor policy.

Recalling that Bolivia and Paraguay, Honduras and Nicaragua, Ecuador and Peru, and Argentina and Chile are settling their boundary difficulties peacefully, he said:

"Despite this heartening picture, there is a very real need of a completely integrated peace mechanism, whether embodied in one treaty or several."

He emphasized the need for further improvements in commerce and referred to the visit Warren Pierson, president of the Export-Import Bank, is making to the South American countries.

"Mr. Pierson is said already to have ascertained," he said, "that there is a considerable amount of business which might well come to the United States but which is now being lost owing to the unfamiliarity of our traders with the mechanism of the Export-Import Bank. It may be that Mr. Pierson's investigations will disclose fields for American enterprise hitherto not explored because of financing difficulties which the bank could help to overcome."

The United States, he added, is already not only holding its own but is gaining in Latin American trade, "considerable loose talk" to the contrary notwithstanding. In 1937 the United States' share of total import trade of Latin America increased from 31.5 per cent to 34.7 per cent, whereas the trade of our principal competitors decreased.

Businessman Adopts Alexandria Waitress' Twins

"I never knew there were so many big-hearted people in the world," said Mrs. T. Clifton Howard, Alexandria welfare officer, after revealing last night her selection of a Baltimore couple as foster parents to the twins, boy and girl, born to Mrs. Ella Stevens in Alexandria Hospital three weeks ago.

Mrs. Howard spoke with feeling of the "really splendid families," 40 in all, who sent offers from all over the country to make a home for Mrs. Stevens' babies. The mother was a waitress in Alexandria at $8 a week, and is separated from the twins' father, a former Navy man, now unemployed.

The Maryland merchant and his wife who will bring up the twins, according to Mrs. Howard, lost their only child two years ago. The twins were sent Sunday to their new home, adoption papers having been signed and attested. Under Maryland law the couple must pass a three-month probationary period before the adoption is final.

Mrs. Stevens, still ill in Alexandria Hospital, does not know the name of the foster parents and will not see her children again.

Chile's President Gets Extra Power For Four Months

Santiago, Chile, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—President Arturo Alessandri, struggling with a cabinet crisis, tonight was voted "extraordinary powers" by the Senate to cope with the internal situation created by last week's national Socialist Nazi uprising.

The emergency authority was granted for four months and the state of siege, proclaimed in this city September 5 shortly after the outbreak started, was extended to the entire republic for a similar period.

The state of siege will be lifted from October 10 to October 30 so as not to interfere with the campaign for the October 25 presidential elections, when a successor to President Alessandri will be chosen.

Meantime, the president undertook to form a new cabinet to replace the one that resigned this morning. Pending the government's reorganization, the president asked the resigned ministers to remain in charge of their respective departments.

Mother of Star Accused of Hiding Taylor Death Gun

Los Angeles, Sept. 12 (AP).—Mrs. Margaret Fillmore, sister of Mary Miles Minter, former screen actress, on the witness stand in a civil suit today accused her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Shelby, of concealing the gun which killed William Desmond Taylor, Hollywood director, 15 years ago.

She charged that her mother, with her dead grandmother, Mrs. Julia Miles, hid the weapon in a Louisiana bayou.

Mrs. Fillmore made the remark under cross-examination in the court of Superior Judge Thomas W. Gould, where the mother and daughter are involved in a suit over possession of $50,000 worth of furniture.

Mrs. Shelby, at conclusion of the hearing, branded her daughter's charges as "ridiculous," but said she would insist that the district attorney either absolve her of connection with the Taylor murder or place her on trial for the killing.

Cost of Loans Doubles for U. S.

By the Associated Press.

The cost of short-term borrowing by the Treasury doubled yesterday in the wake of its $700,000,000 long-term borrowing operation.

In making its weekly sale of $100,000,000 worth of 91-day bills, the Treasury had to accept an average price of 99.974, equivalent to borrowing at .103 per cent, compared with last week's average price of 99.988, which was equivalent to .049 per cent.

Yesterday's cost, although much larger than that of recent weeks, was still well below the average on this type of security in previous years.

Matanuska Colony Turned Over to Ickes

Jurisdiction over the Matanuska Resettlement project at Palmer, Alaska, to which 200 relief families were sent in 1935 and where 170 remain, with 100 babies added to the population, was transferred formally yesterday to the Interior Department from the Federal Emergency Relief Administration, under which the experiment was initiated.

An announcement disclosed that 1,500 families in the United States and Alaska have filed applications for resettlement in the Matanuska Valley, with about 80 new applications arriving weekly.

The transfer, affecting control of the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation and the Matanuska Valley Colonization project, was arranged through conferences between Works Progress Administrator Hopkins, former administrator of the FERA, which legally expired on July 1, and Secretary Ickes. It was accompanied by means of transfer of the shares of stock of the corporation to Secretary Ickes as pledgee.

The action was agreed to in a resolution passed by the board of directors of the Alaska Rural Rehabilitation Corporation May 31, but acceptance of the project by the Interior Department was delayed pending the personal inspection of Secretary Ickes.

Administration of the project will be placed with the Division of Territories and Island Possessions, of the Department of the Interior. Promotion of the project will be placed under the Alaska Railroad, which is authorized by law to further colonization efforts in the territory.

'Mrs. J. Edgar Hoover' Sent to Gallinger

Policewomen yesterday arrested a woman who posed as "Mrs. J. Edgar Hoover" when attempting to arrange for charging a permanent wave on credit at a downtown department store.

Employes in the store's beauty shop, aware that the No. 1 G-man is a bachelor, summoned the officers. The woman, who said she was from Chicago, was held at Gallinger Hospital for observation.

Textile Wage Body to Be Named Today

Appointment of a 21-man industry committee to determine minimum wage rates for the textile industry today will set in motion wage-hour act machinery for adjustment of pay scales above the 25-cent basic wage minimum fixed in the law.

Wage-Hour Administrator Andrews announced yesterday he not only will appoint his first industry committee but will define the scope of the textile industry affected. Rayon, silk and cotton are expected to be included but last-minute differences had arisen over inclusion of knitted underwear.

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, formally protested against inclusion of knitted underwear in the textile classification, contending it would result in wage reductions to the garment makers.

On the other hand, Ray A. Sheeney, of the underwear institute, is said to have contended that 40 per cent of the underwear manufacturers spin their own yarn and rightfully fall in the textile classification.

Donald Marr Pelson, of Chicago, vice president of Sears, Roebuck & Co., and formerly active in NRA, is expected to be named chairman of the textile industry committee. During NRA days he served on a special committee to investigate working hours in the cotton garment industry. He was also on the Industrial Advisory Board and later was special assistant to the chairman of the NRA Administrative Board.

Although the statutory minimum wage of 25-cents an hour does not become operative until October 24, the industrial committees are empowered to recommend upward adjustments between a 25 and 40 cent level and may start work at once. Equally representative of workers, employers and the public, the committee is empowered only to make recommendations to the administrator. The administrator may approve the recommendations, and, after public hearings, issue an order making them mandatory.

Georgetown U. Clinicist Lauds Roosevelt Doctor

Dr. H. K. Gray, surgeon who operated on James Roosevelt, eldest son and secretary of the President, was complimented on his procedure yesterday by Dr. Jerome Selinger, of Columbia University, attending the Georgetown University Medical Clinic here.

Dr. Selinger was reporting latest methods of treatment for peptic ulcers and said there was "every reason to believe the operation (on Roosevelt) would prove successful." The surgeons, he said, acted with "commendable conservatism."

The clinic began a five-day session for Georgetown alumni yesterday.

Sen. Tydings Waits to Hear From Counties

Doesn't Intend 'to Pull a Hughes,' He Tells Friends as His Lead Mounts Slowly.

By a Staff Correspondent.

BALTIMORE, Sept. 12.—Caution was the watchword at the headquarters of both Senator Tydings and Representative Lewis tonight as returns poured in from Baltimore's 471 precincts and filtered slowly from the counties.

"I'm not going to pull a Hughes," Senator Tydings told newspapermen and radio announcers when they pressed him for a statement in the light of early encouraging reports.

Waits for Counties.

"I won't have anything to say until we hear more from the counties," he added.

Kent Mullikin, campaign manager for Lewis, while displaying much less confidence than Tydings, likewise withheld any prediction of the outcome. He made it clear, however, that he had not conceded the fight.

Tydings received the returns among his family and intimate friends in a suite in the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

In the party was Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies, his mother-in-law, J. Pickett, of Havre de Grace; his of Washington; his sister, Mrs. J. sister-in-law, Mrs. Aldace Walker, of New York, and Mrs. Tydings.

Lewis was spending the evening quietly with Mrs. Lewis and friends at his old home in Cumberland, but he had a direct line to his headquarters in the Emerson Hotel at Baltimore.

Lewis Manager Aloof

Mullikin, though obviously vitally interested in the result of the senatorial primary, avoided the precinct-by-precinct reports that came in over the radio and from Lewis aides over the city and State.

He explained that the piece-meal returns made him nervous, but he was alert whenever the reports were sufficient to show a definite trend either for or against Representative Lewis.

Baltimoreans, meanwhile, were eagerly awaiting the stroke of midnight. This traditionally dripping wet city had been almost bone dry since 6 a. m.

Not a bar was open, and no bottled liquor goods were for sale. The bars were scheduled to reopen at midnight, however, and for this the Baltimoreans waited, as well as for the returns.

Campaign workers in both headquarters tonight were talking as much about the difficulties of voting as they were about the progress of their candidates.

Stories poured in about voters who, after standing in line for a half hour or more, became so confused when they faced the automatic voting machine that they fled in embarrassment without casting a ballot.

Although State law provides that a voter may be allowed only two minutes to make his choice, election officials were admittedly lenient, even to the point of disregarding this provision.

Frequent reports of voters spending from 5 to 20 minutes in the voting booth reached the campaign headquarters, and one Tydings aid said that one voter had spent almost half an hour puzzling over the intricate machine.

Barber Pleads Innocent in Killing Of Maine Girl, 8

Portsmouth, N. H., Sept. 12 (AP).—Herbert W. Sprague, 53, of Portland, Me., an itinerant barber, today pleaded innocent in municipal court of the murder of Barbara Driscoll, 8, whose body, skull smashed, was found stuffed under a building in a railroad yard September 4.

Judge J. R. Waldron held him without bail and continued his case for a week on request of Rockingham County Solicitor Stephen Wheeler, who was awaiting pathological analysis of stains, allegedly blood, found on Sprague's clothing.

As Sprague was arraigned, it was announced that Gov. Francis P. Murphy had visited him last night in his cell and urged him to "commune with his God" because of the serious charge against him and commended the Portsmouth police for their "efficiency."

Republicans Lead in All Maine Races

Maine

tion's reciprocal trade treaty program.

Because of possible heavy Democratic majorities from outstanding Second District precincts, the lead of Representative Smith (Republican) over F. Harold Dubord (Democrat), remained in doubt.

Democratic National Chairman Farley, who came to Maine to give his "blessing" to the entire Democratic ticket, gave special praise to Dubord for his championship of the New Deal.

All three of the Republican members of Congressmen had indorsement of the Townsend old-age pension group.

Barrows won the gubernatorial election over Dubord in 1936 with a vote of 173,716 to 130,464. His total was the largest ever cast up to that time for a Maine candidate for Governor.

In the same year the State gave Alf M. Landon, Republican Presidential candidate, 168,823 votes to 12,337 for President Roosevelt.

Braun Carries Cities

For Governor: Barrows, 134,914; Brann, 114,479.

For Congress:

First District, 133 precincts out of 146: Oliver, 47,225; Emery, 30,851.

Third District, 248 precincts out of 271: Brewster, 46,678; Roberts, 27,062.

As the tabulation progressed it was seen that eight of Maine's 20 cities had fallen into the Brann column, while Barrows had captured five.

Although the old saying to the effect that "as Maine goes, so goes the Nation" has lost force, the fact remained that the adherents of both major parties were prepared to seize upon any result favorable to their side. Political observers throughout the Nation likewise watched for the reaction of today's voting to the New Deal and Townsend issues.

In the campaigning for the three House seats the Roosevelt program was defended by Dubord, Smith's opponent, and Melvin P. Roberts, who opposed Brewster. Emery directed much of his oratorical assault on Oliver's support of the Townsend plan. Dubord, while not naming the old-age pension plan by name, attacked the transaction tax by which it would be financed.

Tydings Is Apparent Victor In Heavy Maryland Voting

Primary

Lewis Holds Old District

Lewis was ahead in only three counties, all in his old Sixth Congressional District. They were his own county of Allegheny and the neighboring counties of Garrett and Washington.

In a broadcast from Cumberland, Lewis said:

"I have no reason to think I have failed; but if I have, others will take up the torch—and will not fail.

"Done My Utmost"

"I entered the campaign to justify Franklin D. Roosevelt and his work. I leave it feeling I have done my utmost, and done it in the sincerest way."

4TH & LAST ADD—Primary—A..

The Senator was ahead of Lewis in Prince Georges, a county which at one time had been regarded as almost certain to go for Lewis. Twenty-one out of 34 precincts had reported.

The Prince Georges vote:
Tydings, 4,288.
Lewis, 3,670.

Tydings was ahead in Laurel, the home town of Kent R. Mullikin, campaign manager for Lewis. The vote was Tydings, 300; Lewis, 181.

The Senator also was ahead in Montgomery County, first returns giving him 342 to 182 for Lewis.

It was the same story in Carroll County, but more emphatically so. Here the vote was:
Tydings, 71.

Tydings Leads on Shore

A fragment of the vote from Somerset, the first county on the Eastern Shore to report, was:
Tydings, 261.
Lewis, 55.

Tydings was ahead in five Eastern Shore counties.

Gov. Nice, seeking nomination for another term in the Republican primary, was far ahead of Harry Phoebus, self-styled "Abraham Lincoln of the Eastern Shore, in the Baltimore returns. The vote:
Nice, 29,903.
Phoebus, 4,470.

Former Judge Leser, Nice-backed candidate for the Republican senatorial nomination, was leading Galen L. Tait in Baltimore. The vote:
Leser, 17,954.
Tait, 8,775.

Fifty precincts out of 817 outside of Baltimore, gave, for Governor in the Republican primary:
Nice, 3,210.
Phoebus, 439.

For Senator, Republican:
Leser, 1,582.

Lewis Hopes Fade

From the beginning it appeared that unless Lewis made a good run in Baltimore he didn't have a chance for the nomination. His main strength was in the Sixth Congressional District, which he had represented, on and off, since 1910. If he could carry four or five of the Baltimore districts he might have a chance.

As Tydings held his early lead in the city, the hopes of Lewis people began to go down. Few thought he could muster enough strength in the 23 counties to offset a defeat in the city.

Polls Kept Open

Although the polls were due to close at 6 p. m., thousands of voters actually cast their ballots as late as 6:45 o'clock. Police were dispatched to the city's 471 precincts to take charge after reports were received that hundreds were still in line as the time for closing the polls neared.

Hastily, the board of supervisors decided to allow all who were in line at 6 o'clock to cast their votes, but no other voters were permitted to join the line.

Many voters left the polls earlier in the day without voting after waiting, in some cases as long as an hour.

The new complicated voting machinery in Baltimore, tried for the first time yesterday, was blamed by election officials for the jams at the polls. Instead of speeding up the balloting, the machines seemed to confuse voters and officials proved of little help.

Poll Officers Blamed

An emergency squad of a dozen experts supplied by the manufacturer of the automatic voting machines dashed about the city throughout the day trying vainly to speed up the balloting. They blamed the trouble on the ignorance of the polling officers, although they had been given training courses by the board of supervisors.

Many precinct records, it was reported, showed that less than 40 per cent of the registered vote had been cast because of the jams.

Equipped with several scores of adding machines, the tabulators were expected to report Baltimore returns promptly. Results of the county voting, however, may not be known before tomorrow as the polls closed an hour later and election officials are more poorly equipped than those in Baltimore.

Montgomery Vote Heavy

The vote in nearby Prince Georges County was just a trifle above the average primary vote. This was explained on the ground that there were no contests for local offices.

The vote in Montgomery County, however, was the largest on record. It was expected to reach 75 or 80 per cent of the registration, a tremendous turnout for a primary.

In the Glen Echo districts, six illiterates appeared at the pools. Five of them were able to give the names of their choices and the election officials, as provided by law, marked their ballots for them.

"American to Me"

The sixth, a Greek woman, listened patiently to the election officials and then, throwing up her hands, exclaimed:

"It's all American to me."

They gave her a ballot, and she marked it. It was predicted, however, that it would be thrown out as spoiled.

Age No Handicap

In Takoma Park, two women, one 75 and the other 81, were helped to the polling booth to cast their ballots. One was Mrs. Susie B. Bennett, mother of Luke Bennett, a Democratic leader in that area, and the other was Miss Annie B. Bennett, his aunt.

"As long as my legs will go, I'll vote the straight Democratic ticket," said Mrs. Bennett.

A whopping vote, reflecting the interest aroused by Roosevelt's intervention, was cast in the primary. Jammed polling booths were reported all the way from Cumberland, in the mountains, to Crisfield, far down on the Eastern Shore.

In Baltimore they were using voting machines for the first time, and the result was not altogether pleasing. The voters each had been allotted 7½ minutes to record their choices. Some of them took 10, 12 and 15 minutes, thus causing a jam.

For a time this year, it had appeared that Tydings would have no real opposition in the primary. Representative Lewis announced in May that he would seek another term in the House.

Called at White House

Then in June, "Little Davey" called at the White House and had a long talk with President Roosevelt. That same evening he announced he was going after Tydings' seat. He said he was going to run his own campaign, without outside help.

In mid-August, however, it became clear that President Roosevelt was going to play a major role in the campaign. At a White House press conference, he characterized Tydings as a "betrayer" of the New Deal, a candidate who wanted to run for office with both the prestige of the Roosevelt Administration and the money of his "conservative Republican friends" on his side.

But that was just the beginning. A week ago last Sunday, the President interrupted his sojourn at Hyde Park to make a 200-mile motor tour of Maryland. From beginning to end, "Little Davey" was at his side.

At Morgantown, in Southern Maryland, the President promised a crowd of Lewis boosters that he would use his influence to have a 2-mile, $3,000,000 bridge built over the Potomac River near that point. He kept his word, too, directing PWA Administrator Ickes to give "right of way" to applications for that bridge and for another at Havre de Grace, Tydings home town.

Next day the President traveled the length of the Eastern Shore, stopping at Denton, in Caroline County, to make a major Labor Day speech. In this he announced that, so long as he was its leader, the Democratic Party was going to be a liberal party. He claimed the right to go into any State to keep it so, praised Lewis as the "Good Samaritan" of American politics, and denounced Tydings by inference as a reactionary.

Jerome Frank to Speak

Jerome Frank, Securities and Exchange Commissioner, will speak before the Student Affiliate of the District Chapter of the National Lawyers Guild at a meeting to be held in the North Interior Building Thursday night. His subject will be "What's Wrong With the Law Schools?"

Prince

Phoebus, of Prince Anne. Nice tallied 1,463, while Phoebus, self-styled "Abraham Lincoln of the Eastern Shore," received only 146 votes.

In the Republican Senatorial primary, Judge Oscar Leser, of Baltimore, allied with the Nice forces, was given 975 votes. Galen L. Tait, of Montgomery Country, received 486.

De Groot Funeral To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Frank A. De Groot, 68, who died Sunday at Emergency Hospital, will be held today at 2 p. m. at his home, 911 Tenth street northeast. Burial will be in Glenwood Cemetery.

A native of Constantine, Mich., Mr. De Groot came to Washington many years ago as an employe of the Navy Yard. Later he became assistant registrar of the Treasury, a position he held until his retirement five years ago.

He was a member of the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War and the Douglas Memorial M. E. Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Carrie J. De Groot; a daughter, Mrs. Edith V. Brown, of Arlington, Va.; three brothers, John W. De Groot, of Washington, and Harry T. and Alfred E. De Groot, of Arlington, and one grandchild.

John J. Harold Rites Tomorrow

Services for John J. Harold, head of the District mosquito control division, who died Sunday night in Washington Sanitarium, will be held at Church of the Nativity, 6000 Georgia avenue northwest, tomorrow at 10 a. m. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Mr. Harold, 41 years old, had been in charge of mosquito control work here for the last six years. A native of Philadelphia, he came to Washington 34 years ago. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus and Costello Post of the American Legion.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Eileen M. Harold; a brother, Francis, and a sister, Margaret, all of Washington.

Dr. Frost, of Berea College, Is Dead

Berea, Ky., Sept. 12 (AP).—Dr. William Goodell Frost, 84, president-emeritus of Berea College, died last night of a heart attack at his home on the Berea College campus.

During a half century Dr. Frost was outstanding in placing the needs of mountain people before the country and in promotion of modern education among the hill folk.

Dr. Frost was the father of Dr. Norman Frost, professor of rural education at Peabody College, Nashville, and of Stanley Frost, an author, now in Chile; Wesley Frost, in the United States consular service in Brazil, and Mrs. Edith Colbert, of Cleveland.

League Diplomats Believe Hitler Talk Continues Crisis So Germany Can Finish Forts.

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 12.—"The crisis continues" was the general reaction among diplomats here for the nineteenth session of the League of Nations Assembly today after they had listened intently at radios to the Nuremberg speech of Adolf Hitler.

A Russian spokesman declared, "It was just what we expected—more bluff, nothing precise but a continuation of the sword rattling policy."

A Czechoslovak spokesman said, "It was violent and full of threats. The important thing about that speech is the reaction it has upon Paris and London."

The French delegation declared it was "not as bad as it might have been. It was full of threats but the threats were general."

Immediately after the speech, Earl de la Warr, British lord privy seal, went into conference with High Commissioners Stanley M. Bruce, of Australia; William J. Jordan, of New Zealand; Charles Water, of South Africa, and the Canadian Minister of Justice, Ernest LaPointe. Prime Minister Eamon de Valera of Ireland also participated.

St. Mihiel Battle Commemorated

St. Mihiel, France, Sept. 12 (AP).—Gen. Pershing and the American First Army of World War days were honored today at ceremonies commemorating the wiping out of the Germans' St. Mihiel salient just 20 years ago.

Pershing, although in France, was unable to attend on account of delicate health. He will celebrate his seventy-eighth birthday tomorrow.

Hague Under Inquiry

Attorney General Cummings' statement to the effect that the Department of Justice is still investigating the activities of Mayor Hague of Jersey City is reassuring. Earlier reports that the investigation had been dropped in the midst of a political campaign led to unpleasant implications. There is ample reason for Mr. Cummings to resent the apparently unfounded rumor which appears to have originated from someone within his department.

Certainly Mayor Hague's attempts to deny law-abiding citizens the rights of free speech in Jersey City ought to be investigated to the full. The mayor has even boasted of the success with which his minions have suppressed or forcibly deported from his domain so-called undesirables, loosely classified as "Reds." Every citizen who is familiar with the policy he has imposed upon Jersey City knows that he has precious little regard for the civil liberties guaranteed by the Constitution.

The statute forbidding conspiracy to deprive a citizen of his constitutional rights gives the Department of Justice an excellent opportunity to investigate the activities of Jersey's little tyrant. Its inquiry should be thorough and far-reaching. In cases of this sort where there appears to be strong evidence that constitutional rights have been denied, but the applicability of the statute seems uncertain, presentation of the evidence to the courts is especially desirable.

Mr. Cummings says that "no decision has consequently been reached on the question of whether there have been violations of Federal criminal statutes." Indeed, there is no necessity for the Department of Justice to make such a decision. That function is reserved to the courts. The duty of the department is to determine, after full investigation, whether there is sufficient evidence of a crime to warrant presentation of the case before the bar of justice.

Even without a water-tight case, the department might find it advisable to make a test of the existing statute to determine how far it may go in protecting civil rights against dictatorial city officials. That information might prove especially valuable to Congress in framing possible new legislation. And it would relieve the department of what would otherwise be the embarrassing necessity of explaining to the public that it could not find even sufficient evidence in Jersey City to make a test case.

The Small Claims Court

Judge Nathan Cayton has reason to be gratified at the success of the Small Claims and Conciliation Court which he was instrumental in establishing five months ago. Even in that brief period the new tribunal has effectively proved its usefulness. As its methods become better known to the public it is certain to be recognized as one of the truly important branches of Washington's judicial system.

The fact that nearly 10,000 cases involving $239,595 have been filed with the Small Claims Court in its first five months of operation indicates that it has filled a real need. In more than half of these cases papers were prepared for the individual claimants by the clerk of the court without the aid of an attorney. Moreover, defendants hailed before the court may present their own cases without the necessity of formal pleadings. For all trials are entirely informal and where settlements are not effected to the satisfaction of both parties, cases are decided by the judge on their merits.

Judge Cayton's August report to the Attorney General shows the largest number of claims ranged from $10 to $20. Obviously this tribunal has become precisely what it was designed to be—a poor man's court. Individuals may present claims for wages, damages, sale of property, rent, professional services, personal injury and various other types of obligation. Such claims are adjusted speedily, fairly and inexpensively. Even the $1 filing fee and 20-cent registration charge are waived in case of need.

With this plan in operation no citizen, however meager his resources, needs to suffer an injustice because of the expenses of litigation. And citizens who are called before the Small Claims Court for debt can defend their interests with virtually no expense. If they recognize the validity of the debt, or a decision is rendered against them, the judgment can be paid in installments adjusted to the debtor's income. Payments of this sort have been arranged in 848 cases to date.

More than 150 cases have been conciliated, and three times that number have been settled by the disputants before reaching the court room. There is no limit on the size of claims that may be submitted to either conciliation or arbitration with the agreement of both parties. When the public learns that friendly settlements may thus be obtained at a nominal fee in a very brief period much greater use of this conciliation procedure may be expected.

The Verdict In Maryland

The apparent victory of Senator Tydings in the Maryland primary contest occasions no surprise. For some weeks before the voting the political tides had been running definitely in his favor, with the size of Mr. Tydings' probable majority gradually replacing the question of his nomination as the subject of speculation. And, as the returns from the Eastern Shore and southern Maryland counties indicate, Mr. Roosevelt's personal intervention availed Representative Lewis little in the show-down.

It is more probable that Mr. Lewis was injured by the President's speech at Denton, outlining his conception of "the obligations and ideals of the Democratic Party." In spite of guarded language Mr. Roosevelt made it abundantly clear that his pattern for the party envisages a strongly-centralized, semi-socialistic and aggressively paternalistic government. In that desired evolution, the President concluded, Mr. Lewis would fit perfectly and, inferentially, Mr. Tydings would be a disruptive element. He therefore urged the election of Mr. Lewis, expressing the hope that the choice would be made by "all who have the right to make the choice."

Yesterday's election in Maryland therefore became, in effect, a referendum by the registered Democrats of that State on the question of whether or not their party should be transformed to follow the President's conception of "liberalism." There is no doubt that the issue of transformation was involved. For the Democratic Party in Maryland, while liberal by its own lights, has never stood for the centralizing and strongly paternalistic policies which the President desires. Its local leaders, on the contrary, have always fought this trend.

Under the State election laws few, if any, who are normally Republicans were able to vote in the Lewis-Tydings contest yesterday. But a very heavy proportion of registered Democrats marked their ballots for one or the other of these contestants. Thus they demonstrated a full appreciation of the referendum quality of their vote. Maryland Democracy, with its eyes open and after sober reflection, has sharply rebuffed Mr. Roosevelt's plan for remodeling the party from the top down.

The rebuff is the more pronounced because of the sterling qualities and great personal popularity of "Davy" Lewis. His seven terms in the House are only an index of the warm place he holds, and will always hold, in the hearts of his fellow-Marylanders. Throughout an exceptionally hard-fought campaign Mr. Lewis was never accused, and never could have been accused, of lowering his high ideals for personal advantage. He received throughout the frequently-expressed admiration of his determined opponents. That only makes his defeat the more significant.

Were Senator Tydings a more outstanding figure, or if Representative Lewis were less outstanding, the national importance of the verdict in Maryland could be qualified. But with the factors as they are it is obvious that the Democrats of the State have intentionally rebuffed their party leader and have done so primarily to register disapproval of his political philosophy. That is no matter of merely local significance.

This vote of no confidence—as it amounts to—places Mr. Roosevelt in a very difficult position. His personal popularity undoubtedly remains high. Popular gratitude for the benefits of the New Deal is still strong. But on the question of a permanent transformation of the Democratic Party he has been sharply and unmistakably repudiated. If a similar attitude is evinced in Georgia tomorrow, Mr. Roosevelt will not be able to delay in making a very important decision.

He will have to decide, and soon reveal his choice, either explicitly or implicitly, between modifying his political ideals and splitting his party. That choice can not be easy. To halt the course he has been following would be unpalatable and to form a new "liberal" party, in the face of his failures to command the recent primaries, would be dangerous. But in one or the other direction he must now veer.

Yesterday's vote in Maryland was a clear-cut test of the President's ability to carry his party in an important border State. That test was sharpened at his personal request and it was decided adversely to his clearly-stated ambitions and desires. Under the circumstances there can be no continuation of an ambiguous status quo.

Mr. Roosevelt must either retreat, satisfied with the ground already consolidated behind him, or he will have to advance still more daringly, with an increasingly mutinous army at his back.

Sword Of Damocles

It speaks volumes for the extremely jittery state of the world during recent weeks that Hitler's speech closing the Nuremberg congress is being greeted in London and Paris—almost everywhere, in fact, except in Prague—with a sigh of qualified relief.

By no stretch of the imagination can it be called a peaceful speech. At any other time it would have been deemed exceedingly belligerent. For while Hitler made no move at this time to unleash the dogs of war he did, nonetheless, throw down the gage of battle to Czechoslovakia. And he warned the powers sympathetic with that nation's effort to preserve its present structure that Germany is fully prepared to resist any intervention on the little republic's behalf.

Hitler did not deny Czechoslovakia the right to exist. But every reference to that country and to its chief executive, Dr. Eduard Benes, was barbed with bitterness. And, more clearly than ever before, the Fuehrer insisted that the 3,500,000 Sudeten Germans must be permitted to determine their own destinies free from restraint by the Prague government. Over the Germans in Czechoslovakia, he made clear, the Third Reich has extended the mantle of its protection.

His speech thus foreshadows an intensification of the German pressure in behalf of outright annexation of the Sudeten area. And this objective is clarified by his contemptuous dismissal of any plebiscite on the issue. Lip-service is paid to the idea of self-determination, but no procedure is suggested. All that is promised is a continuation of a psychological attrition clearly designed to increase the separatist forces within the neighboring republic. But Hitler's speech, with its great emphasis on Germany's preparedness, also indicates that if non-military pressure fails to budge Czechoslovakia, military measures may be resorted to.

With this part of the address was coupled a clever and subtle appeal to France and Great Britain. Realizing the validity of the alliance between these two democracies the Fuhrer sought both to drive a wedge between them and Russia, and to assure the Anglo-French combine that they have nothing to fear unless they take the risk of attacking Germany. Alsace-Lorraine, he told the French, is not coveted by the Reich. There is no German disposition, he told the British, even to attempt another naval race. The implication, of course, is that Germany will drop her colonial ambitions in return for a free hand in central Europe.

That this technique will be effective is highly probable. The average Englishman or Frenchman has no more wish than the average American to go to war with Germany. To the western world the future of Czechoslovakia is of less importance than avoidance of the horrible chaos and disintegration which large-scale war would bring. Civilization can be outplayed by a clever fanatic willing to gamble with all the heritage of the ages to gain his point. That Hitler knows, and plays his cards accordingly.

There is every indication, of course, that the Czechoslovak crisis will continue. But Hitler's Nuremberg speech is also assurance that, for the time being, there will be no war. Therefore London, Paris and Washington today breathe easier. A threat which loomed sufficiently great to cause France to man the Maginot line, and to compel Great Britain to concentrate her fleet in North Sea waters, has been temporarily averted.

There is reason to believe that these military preparations by the democratic powers, and the diplomatic warnings from London and Paris that accompanied them, had a salutary bearing on the crisis. With French and British war preparations so far advanced, this was clearly an inopportune moment for Germany to strike. And Hitler, as his record since he took the helm in Germany unmistakably shows, is a master of timing.

There will be other occasions in the not too distant future when Hitler may be able to take up where he left off, when the forces opposing the Reich will be less united than they appear at this moment, when Czechoslovakia, rent by internal confusion, may become an easier victim. When that day comes Hitler can strike.

The sword of Damocles which has been hanging over Europe has not fallen. It has merely become more clear that its point is focused over Prague.

"Rich men by the hundreds are dying every day and going to hell," declares an evangelist. Well, in view of what they have been saying about the New Deal for the past several years, they probably scarcely notice the transition.

The Record Of The USHA

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an editorial published in The Washington Post on September 9 there are certain statements in regard to the United States Housing Authority which are not correct. I shall appreciate it if you will allow me the privilege of correcting some erroneous impressions which might result from a reading of your editorial.

The editorial states: "Other communities have refused to sign the proposed USHA contract which, they contend, would deprive them of the right to control the development of projects for which they will be responsible." Except for differences in the amount of funds involved, all of the USHA contracts with the localities are substantially the same. Not a single locality has refused to sign a contract with us, or has hesitated or delayed about signing a contract with us, or has raised any substantial objection to any of the provisions of the contracts between the local authority and the United States Housing Authority.

You state: "Fort Wayne has given up its earmarking of USHA funds and is reported to be going ahead with a project involving no Federal aid." We have never been informed that Fort Wayne has given up its earmarking. Funds have now been earmarked by the USHA for 129 cities. These earmarkings were made in each case with the understanding that if any locality failed to present its plan within a reasonable time the earmarking would be rescinded. Of the total of more than $500,000,000 earmarked for 129 cities only two very small earmarkings have been given up, aggregating about $230,000.

You state: "Some cities report a waning of interest in slum clearance because they are not permitted to develop the type of projects which they believe best suited to their locality." The fact is that the USHA is aiding all localities to develop the types of projects which they believe best suited to their local needs, and which will meet the terms of the United States housing act.

The evidence gathered on my recent trip during which I visited representative local housing authorities in 16 cities, and the record here in Washington of correspondence with all the cities that have undertaken to participate in the USHA program, constitute an overwhelming and unqualified proof that local housing authorities throughout the country appreciate the co-operation and assistance given to them by the staff of the USHA in working out the problems incident to their low-rent housing programs.

The statements in your editorial provide the foundation for the intimation that the USHA is moving too slowly. The record is as follows:

In January, 1938, the first formal applications for loans were received. The President approved this first series of loan contracts in March. Between March and September of this year loan contracts have been approved by the President for a total of 81 projects in 43 cities in 19 States, with a total estimated development cost of more than $225,000,000. These loan contracts provide for the rehousing of more than 40,000 families of low income.

Prior to the signing of any loan contract, each local housing authority, in many cases understaffed and with inadequate funds, has to achieve three important results that take time and effort.

First, the local authority has to make an arrangement for raising 10 per cent of the development cost of the project. In January many experts said that the United States housing act was unworkable because this "could not be done." Through the careful and painstaking servicing of the local authorities by the financial and legal divisions of the USHA, the 10 per cent problem has been solved in every locality which has a loan contract. The entry of private capital into the field of public housing has been induced to the extent of many millions of dollars at an interest rate averaging about 3 per cent. This in itself is a unique accomplishment.

Second, it was said in January that our act could not work because the cost limitations were too low. Before making any loan contract, we have entered into detailed study and co-operation with the local housing authorities to get estimated costs as low as possible in order that we might know whether we were authorized to make a loan. In no case has a project been abandoned because we failed to meet the severe cost provisions of the act.

Third, it was said in January that our act could not work because of the requirement that the localities make annual contributions to reduce rents equal to 20 per cent of the Federal annual contributions. The USHA, by encouraging the localities to enter into negotiations with their city governments, has obtained firm commitments for local annual contributions averaging about three times the minimum requirements of the statute. This has often involved tedious negotiations and a long drawn out educational program. But in consequence the record of local participation in a program of this type far exceeds any achieved before, and guarantees rents far lower than those that could be obtained by Federal aid alone.

The three achievements stated above cannot be measured in terms of weeks or even months. They represent permanent gains built into the structure of the public housing program now being developed by the localities and the USHA. These structural gains will last and be felt as long as the projects stand.

After loan contracts are signed, the localities have to survey, appraise, option, search titles, and acquire land. Sometimes they have to carry out condemnation proceedings. Where slum sites are involved, site acquisition is naturally difficult and tedious. By the end of August, 60 sites had been appraised and 36 sites had been approved for purchase.

Most important of all, the period between the signing of loan contracts and the taking of construction bids is devoted to more intensive and detailed efforts to reduce capital costs and annual operating expenses in the interest of economy and low rents. This fundamental problem affects every arrangement in the consideration of a project and requires adjustments in the plans, materials, construction methods and use of interior equipment. Detailed examinations and negotiations must be entered into with respect to utility rates, additional forms of municipal co-operation and every other possibility which may cut a few cents more off the eventual rents.

I do not think that any private concern, and certainly no Government agency, has ever made such thoroughgoing concrete studies of methods of achieving lower rents through long-term economy and sound operation. This fact, quite as much as the Federal and local subsidies provided, explains why the USHA is going to reach far lower rents for decent housing than have ever before been reached in the cities of this country, even with subsidized housing programs.

These time-consuming efforts also represent accomplishments which cannot be measured in terms of weeks. They, too, are building themselves into the structure of the housing program and will last as long as the projects stand.

At the present date plans and specifications are in the final stages on about 20 projects, involving a total of some 12,000 dwelling units. Demolition of slum dwellings has commenced. The construction of the first 5,000 new dwelling units has begun in New York City. Before the end of the year construction will have started for several thousand additional new houses in many different States. This will provide work for thousands of men during the winter months.

New loan contracts are being executed at the rate of about $50,000,000 a month, and not only new cities but also the older cities in the program who have had a chance to work with the USHA are eagerly requesting additional earmarkings and additional loan contracts. A number of cities have already entered into their second series of loan contracts with the USHA.

It is hard for those outside the USHA program to realize the detail involved in the development of public housing, not as an emergency relief measure, not without regard to costs, not by overriding local responsibility through Federal authority, but by developing for the first time standards of local responsibility and strict economy in an entirely new field.

To my mind, a striking example of the time required to develop sound projects is afforded right here in the City of Washington. For a number of years the Alley Dwelling Authority, with considerable funds from Congress, has been studying and exploring the slum problem of the Capital. For these reasons, the Alley Dwelling Authority was far ahead of the vast majority of housing authorities in its knowledge and experience.

Nontheless, although the statute enabling the Alley Dwelling Authority to come under the USHA program became law on June 25, 1938, the intervening two and a half months have been devoted by the Alley Dwelling Authority to the first step of preparing its formal application for a loan. Obviously this could not be due to delay on the part of the USHA, because the responsibility for making application must rest with the local authority. There is nothing for the USHA to hold up or turn down before then.

Nor do I mean to imply that any fault rests with the Alley Dwelling Authority. This example is cited merely to show how long it takes for even the most competent and experienced housing authority to initiate a really well-planned public housing program. After the application is received from the Alley Dwelling Authority, then for the first time the USHA will know what kind of houses are proposed, what levels of rents are contemplated, what degree and kind of local financial aid is contemplated. Only then will we be able to commence on the second and most important stage in the drive for economy and low rents which must precede the signing of actual loan contracts.

Reds And The War

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The holocaust of 1914-18 was merely to make the world safe for Democracy. The coming carnage will be doubly sanctified. It will be carried on to make the world safe for both Capitalist Democracy and Stalinist Bureaucracy, against Fascist Capitalism.

Already, the Kremlin's Nuncio in the United States, Earl Browder, has come out 100 per cent in support of New Deal Imperialism, conveniently camouflaged under the cloak of quarantining the aggressor nations. The aggressors who threaten Wall Street's special rackets in Latin America, Asia, and elsewhere. The Red Czar's cohorts in the United States, have so effectively muscled in on Doctor Roosevelt's numerous profitable setups that they have a lot to lose by not going along with him. The blood which is shortly due to be so torrentially spilled will not be their blood but, as in Loyalist and Franco Spain, the blood of the disinherited.

Manhunt

ALL that afternoon the bloodhounds led the posse through the pine woods after the stubby little man who had escaped from the road gang.

Now and again the baying seemed far away, then again it was relatively close at hand, the harsh notes tumbling on the eardrums like awkward children falling from high-chairs.

A light, dry snow covered the ground, but there were no tracks because the flakes still came spinning down giddily. The trees huddled together grew whiter and whiter. Soon they would resemble senators of ancient times in snow togas.

"We'll get that little guy if it takes a week," said the sheriff. He warmed his hands over a fire and fingered his gun. It was getting late now, and he was thinking how pleasant it would be if he were home before the roaring fire, inhaling the odors of dinner in the making.

"He can't be far away, and this snow ought to drive him to cover. By God, he's a foxy one, though."

The possemen were divided into three groups. They were trying to close in around the little man who had run away before he had paid his debt to the law. They did not know whether the fugitive had a gun or not. They hoped not, because then they might have to shoot him and carry him back. That would be a lot of trouble, and they were tired.

They carried sawed-off shotguns and revolvers. Their shouts echoed through the woods, in the depths of which the hunted man was hiding.

Late in the afternoon the sun emerged from behind the clouds. Its reflection glittered on the snow like a huge pair of golden handcuffs.

The man they sought was known as Willie the Weeper. He had come to town to knock on householders' doors and ask for a bite to eat. He had remained too long by the railroad station in the vain hope of hopping a freight back to the deeper South, where he had once been a dishwasher in a resturant.

"I just wanted to get one of those PWA jobs," he had told the judge.

"I couldn't get one. I want to go where its warmer, you see."

But the judge had solved his problem by giving him two months on the road gang for vagrancy—and the road gang was working one day near the railroad tracks, where Willie the Weeper could see the trains speeding south.

The passenger trains proved Willie the Weeper's undoing. The people framed in the windows seemed so comfortable. They had destinations, and maybe they were going to homes, or jobs as dishwashers in restaurants in pleasant little Carolina towns.

Once the express stopped for a minute at the crossing, not far from where the road gang was repairing a highway. The dining car was not far from Willie. He could see lovely ladies eating dinner with plump men—and he was certain every plump man he saw ran a cafe and every lovely lady with him was a cashier on a holiday.

When the road gang moved on, away from the railroad, Willie missed the trains. So, when the guard became careless, he slipped away into the forest.

For days he had been seen here and there. Once he went into a farmhouse in the dead of night and stole a sweater. Another time his face, grizzly beneath stubble, had been seen peering through a window, and the woman had screamed while her husband got down the shotgun and fired into the darkness.

He stole a ham and three cans of beans at another place, and a chocolate cake from a matron's kitchen. He slid through a barn window and caught a chicken.

So he became the terror of the countryside, a dread sort of phantom who might strike down the innocent at any moment.

And the possemen, led by the sheriff, were going to get Willie the Weeper, dead or alive.

They caught Willie about dusk.

The bloodhounds got the scent, and led the posse to the brink of a little valley. Below, shielded from the winds, was Willie, holding a skillet over a blaze. In the skillet was a bit of fatback.

Shots rang from the guns of the sheriff and his deputies. The bullets whizzed over Willie's head, and he stood up and raised his hands toward the darkening sky.

"Don't shoot, fellers," he said. "It's cold and I'll come along."

They left the skillet and the remnants of the chocolate cake behind, but they let Willie wear the ragged sweater he had stolen. They snapped handcuffs on him and led him through the woods and down to the village jail. Housewives gathered around and identified him.

"He won't prowl and steal around here any more, the bandit," some said.

The sheriff was late for dinner. The bloodhounds got an extra ration of meat.

Next day the judge gave Willie two years in the State penitentiary—and peace returned to the pine trees, heavy beneath a fresh snow.

Costly Tributes

By Westbrook Pegler

The Daily Progress

New York, Sept. 12.—There has been another outpouring of the proper spirit in the columns of the Daily Progress, of Hammond, La., originally the official organ of Huey equivalent of Mussolini's Il Popolo d'Italia in the regime of Gov. Leche. The Progress has issued a special edition of 60 pages to solemnize the second anniversary of the reign of Mr. Bob Maestri as conqueror and mayor of New Orleans. Since the anschluss of New Orleans and the happy compromise with President Roosevelt, Jim Farley, the Treasury and the Department of Justice, known as the second Louisiana purchase, the Progress has smoothed out many of its earlier technical journalistic crudities and is now qualified to goose-step with its contemporaries in the Rome-Berlin axis.

The tribute to Mr. Maestri fittingly maintains a modest position two paces to the rear of that which was published some time ago to celebrate Gov. Leche's first anniversary as Governor. On that occasion the Progress obtained whole page advertisements of Louisiana State University, a State insane asylum, the Charity Hospital of New Orleans and the Shreveport Charity Hospital, none of which seemed to require the stimulus of paid advertising.

There also were page advertisements of the Louisiana Congressional delegation, the Louisiana Supreme Court, the New Orleans Board of Levee Commissioners, the State Conservation Commission, the New Orleans Port Commissioners, the State Highway Commission, the State Board of Health and the cities of Baton Rouge, Hammond and Lake Charles. In one municipality wrong-minded citizens struck a note of disharmony in the paean by legally enjoining the payment of $500 out of local taxes for a note in the chorus of praise in the Progress. But otherwise the edition was a joyous and unmitigated homage to the heir to the Kingfish.

The advertisements and text in the Maestro memorial edition are a melodious blending of obvious cause and inevitable effect. The text tells of great material achievements in New Orleans, which consumed vast quantities of steel, gravel, roofing, restaurant and hotel supplies for the kitchens of public institutions, hardware and building equipment, drainage tile, concrete and machinery. The advertisements convey hearty greetings from many admiring individuals and by no means soulless corporations dealing in such commodities. There are tributes, in the truest sense of the word, not only from the well-advised in all such lines of commerce but from the State Prize Fight Commission, the policemen and firemen of New Orleans, the State Conservation Department, the public service corporation, the power and light company, the State Board of Health, the River Pilots, the State Tax Commission and the levee board, among many others.

Bankers, members of a group often accused of unwisdom, ingratitude and lack of generosity, refute these foul aspersions with lavish purchases of space next to not necessarily pure reading matter in which to make obeisance to the lower-case duce. And the loan sharks of New Orleans, those ever-ready altruists who tided over the city employes in spells of payless pay days when blood was on the moon at Baton Rouge, express no less endearingly their homage to a man than whom.

Hammond, the home of the Progress, is a town of rising 6,000 people, but the advertising staff of this journalistic prodigy is the envy of the whole profession. It takes but a hint from a Progress man to sell a page or half-page of space to certain types of clients at times when flattery is in the wind. The circulation branch, too, displays something akin to wizardry. The subscription list might be used as a roster of all those drawing pay from the State, parish and municipal governments of Louisiana, the school and highway systems and the Federal personnel.

That it costs money to praise Mr. Maestri in the Progress goes without saying. But it also goes without saying that it costs more not to.

Nominee Sees Roosevelt Aiding Ohio Pensioners

By the Associated Press.

A suggestion President Roosevelt might intervene in the threatened withdrawal of Federal aid for the aged in Ohio came yesterday from Stephen M. Young, Democratic nominee for Congressman-at-large from that State.

"One hundred and ten thousand aged citizens of Ohio must not be permitted to suffer hunger and cold because certain officials seem to have lost their tempers," Young said in a statement.

"Surely President Roosevelt will intervene, if necessary, before innocent victims suffer hardship."

After a hearing last week, at which Ohio officials failed to appear, the Social Security Board took under consideration its own charges of maladministration of the State's old-age pension program. The hearing was called to determine whether further Federal aid for the program should be withdrawn.

Two More Tests

By Mark Sullivan

THE course and the probable fate of the New Deal in the current primaries and election would be clearer if the New Deal itself were clearer.

If the New Deal were one specific issue, if it were one clearly outlined institution, if it were a thing having one plain color and one definite shape—in that case we could find precedents for the way a majority of the voters would be likely to act on it after a certain length of acquaintance with it.

Rarely in recent American politics does any innovation as novel as the New Deal get approval of the voters for a period long enough to insure permanent adoption of it as a whole. In certain states of the public mood we welcome the novel almost for novelty's sake. But rarely do we keep the whole of it after the novelty wears off and the public mood changes.

IN THE early 1890's a proposal having to do with currency was brought forward. It was called, loosely, "free silver." It attracted many persons, at one stage almost certainly a majority.

It was pushed by William Jennings Bryan into the Democratic platform of 1896. In August of that campaign it was the common judgment of observers that Bryan and free silver would win the election. But in November they were defeated and the issue disappeared.

In late 1919 President Woodrow Wilson brought forward a novel proposal called the League of Nations. At first it met widespread approval, practically universal approval, it was taken for granted. But in the Presidential election of November, 1920, it was overwhelmingly rejected.

In 1920 the innovation of complete prohibition on a national basis came forward with such strength that the requisite three-fourths of the States ratified it as amendment to the Constitution.

Because it had got imbedded in the Constitution it lasted 12 years, with constantly diminishing approval. In 1933 it was overthrown with such speed that 36 States rejected it within 10 months.

• • • •

The advantage, in a political sense, of the New Deal, is that it is not one thing but many things. It is not easy for the public to see it clearly nor pass upon it as a single issue.

It has several major parts, some of which contradict each other. It comes from different sources and rests upon differing principles.

Some of it, especially the control of crops and farmers, AAA, is a feature of the authoritarian state as exemplified in Europe. On the other hand, the benefits paid to farmers are a simple subsidy of a sort not unfamiliar to America.

The attack upon monopoly is completely American. On the other hand NRA ran in the opposite direction, was protection of monopoly and was very much like fascism.

The attempt of the Executive to make over the Supreme Court, and the later attempt to reduce Congress to subordination, were direct steps toward authoritarian government.

Some of the minor innovations of the New Deal, such as the Civilian Conservation Corps, are simple humanitarian measures of a sort familiar to America and approved by America. In all this there is no consistency and no pattern.

If the parts of the New Deal were carefully separated, if each of them were embodied in a simple question, and if all the questions were laid before the voters for separate voting upon each, as is done in the referendums carried on in California and some other States—in that event the country would keep some of the innovations, strongly reject others.

• • • •

BUT THE public has not this opportunity. It is obliged to come to its final state of mind on the New Deal as a whole. Indeed, the public does not even have the opportunity.

The only opportunity to pass on the New Deal as a whole is to pass on the symbol of the New Deal, President Roosevelt.

Mr. Roosevelt has given this opportunity, at a time before he needed to, by injecting himself into State primaries.

The results of these primaries, in the States in which Mr. Roosevelt intervened, are the first expression of, the public mind about the New Deal as a whole.

Why Railroad Train Newspaper Readers Go Mad

"Daddy."

"Yes, dear."

"When will this train start?"

"In a few minutes."

"Why don't it start now, daddy?"

"It isn't time yet."

"Why isn't it time yet?"

• • • •

"What?

"When will we see things out the window?"

"Pretty soon, dear. You can see all the people out the window now and the man who runs the train."

"I want to see houses and trees and doggies."

"You'll see them in a little while."

"Why?"

"Why what?"

"Why do we have to wait a little while?"

"Here's your rag doll, honey. Papa wants to read."

• • • •

"What are you reading, daddy?"

"A newspaper."

"Why?"

"Hush. Papa's tired."

"Daa—a—addy."

"Yes, precious."

"Which end of this train has the choo-choo?"

"The end up ahead."

"Ahead of what, daddy?"

"Ahead of us."

"Why?"

"Here, eat your apple."

• • • •

"Daddy. Will this train go by the water?"

"No, dear."

"Why?"

"Because there isn't any water where we go."

"The other time we went on a train where there was water. Why don't we go where there is water this time, daddy?"

"This time we go by hills and mountains, dear."

"Why?"

"Because, well, because we are going a different way."

"Daddy. It's moving now. Will it keep moving?"

"Daddy."

"What?"

"Could this train hit another train?"

"Yes dear, I suppose it could."

"If it hit another train, what would happen?"

"WOULD IT BREAK, DADDY?"

THE EXCEPTION

It might be possible for the world to starve Germany into submission, but it would hardly be possible in the case of Gen. Goering, judging from those newspaper photos.

Mr. Roosevelt says there are two types of people in this country, represented by "Mr. A" and "Mr. B." How about "Mr. I" and "Mr. U?"

Mr. William Randolph Hearst is to sell his castle in Wales. Nothing can be spared by Mr. Hearst more than another castle or two.

"England Still Wavers as Europe Wonders What Next."—headline. It is clearly a case of "What are the wild waverings saying?"

'Phenomena' in Effects of Democracy Called Disgusting; Lack of Sincerity Charged.

By the Associated Press.

Nuremberg, Sept. 12.—Following is a partial text containing the important portions of the speech of Chancellor Adolf Hitler of Germany at the Nuremberg Party Congress today:

Fifteen years have passed since the first 'German day' (forerunner of the annual Nazi Party rally).

If today the question still is asked why national socialism in Germany fights so fanatically the Jewish element and still insists upon its removal, the answer can only be:

Moral Authorization Claimed for Stand

Because this community possesses moral authorization and existence only if the necessary construction in leadership and followers is accomplished in accordance with incontestable ethnological and factual viewpoints.

Because, since we are national socialists, we can not permit that above our working people a foreign race which has nothing in common with us shall thrust itself as leaders.

Now we are experiencing on a greater scale exactly the same thing as in the long years of internal struggle.

The solid front of others has faced us since the day of our assumption of power.

Conspiracy of Democracy And Bolshevism Cited.

It is the same conspiracy of democracy and bolshevism against the national socialist community.

It fills us with repulsion when we see how so-called international democrats, while advocating liberty, fraternity, justice, self-determination of peoples, et cetera, work hand in hand with Moscow bolshevism.

One may ask why we take so much notice of democracies and treat them so invidiously.

Firstly, it is because we as the attacked party have to do so.

Second, because these phenomena in their effects are so disgusting.

Insincerity begins at the moment when democracies call themselves the rule by the people and decry authoritarian states as dictatorships. I believe I can truly say that in all the world today there are only two great powers who have a government backed by 99 per cent of the people.

Says Other Nations Hoodwink the People

What is posing as democracy elsewhere is mostly nothing but hoodwinking of public opinion through artful press, money, manipulations, cunning and utilization of results.

We see that inevitable despotisms of small countries are lauded to the skies when they fit into the democratic program; they even declare their readiness to fight for them when necessary; whereas, on the other hand, the greatest popular demonstrations of confidence in states that are unpalatable to democracies are passed over in silence, or else distorted or even turned into the contrary.

When the national socialist state, surfeited with continuous suppression and mishandling, finally re-established equality through its own power, others complained with bitter hypocritical reproach that all this could have been done by way of reciprocal understanding.

Without regard for the opinion of the natives, they conquered continents by bloody force. But when Germany demands return of her colonies, they declare, bewildered over the fate of poor natives, they can under no circumstances deliver them to such a destiny. In the same moment they do not hesitate to call the subjects in their own colonies to order with airplanes and bombs.

These democracies complain about the unbearable and horrible measures with which Germany and now also Italy are trying to rid themselves of Jewish elements.

In all these great democratic countries only a few people live within one square kilometer. In Italy and Germany, on the other hand, more than 140 live within the same area. Nevertheless, Germany without batting an eyelash once accepted for decades hundreds of thousands upon hundreds of thousands of these Jews.

Now when complaints finally are growing bigger and bigger and when the nation is no longer willing to permit herself to be bled by these parasites they (the democracies) begin to wail about it. These democratic countries, however, do not substitute a helpful act for their hypocritical attitude but on the contrary assert icily that naturally there is no room in their countries.

Declares Attitude Becomes Unbearable

This attitude (of words instead of deeds) becomes unbearable for us in that moment when a great portion of our people, seemingly defenseless, is subjected to unheard of mishandlings, when the babble of democratic phrases is raised in threats against our fellow citizens. I am now speaking of Czechoslovakia.

Conditions in this state are, as is well known, intolerable. Here, politically over 7,500,000 people are being robbed of their right to self-determination under the self-determination slogan of a certain Mr. (Woodrow Wilson).

Economically, these people are being systematically ruined and doomed to slow extinction. The misery of Sudeten Germans is nameless misery. They want to annihilate them. Humanly, they are oppressed and humiliated in an intolerable manner.

When 3,500,000 members of a people of nearly 80,000,000 are not permitted to sing a song that the Czechs disapprove, when they are bloodily beaten just because they wear stockings Czechs dislike to see and when they are ill-treated because they use a salute that displeases the Czechs—although they only use it among themselves—when they are chased and persecuted like helpless animals for every manifestation of national life—it may all be to the worthy representatives of our democracies a matter of indifference. Possibly they may sympathize with it all because it is only a matter of 3,500,000 Germans.

I can, however, tell the representatives of these great democracies that it is not a matter of indifference to us and that if these tormented creatures cannot find justice and assistance themselves, they shall get both from us. The outlawry of these people must cease.

Recalls His Speech Of February 20

In my Reichstag speech February 20 I stated that the Reich no longer would tolerate further oppression and persecution of these 3,500,000 Germans and I beg foreign statesmen to be convinced that this is not a mere phrase.

We have voluntarily assumed the heaviest sacrifices in renunciation so as to preserve the peace of Europe and smooth the path of reconciliation for nations. We have acted more than loyally.

It was our will to end the everlasting fight with France once and for all.

In the same spirit I have made other offers to solve European tensions. They were rejected for reasons which to us remain incomprehensible. We have voluntarily limited our powers in an important region hoping we shall never again have to cross swords with the state concerned.

Germany has today on all sides completely pacified frontiers and is determined—and has said so—that she will accept these frontiers as final so as to give Europe a feeling of security and peace.

This self-limitation and self-restriction seems however to have been interpreted by many as weakness. I would correct this error here and now.

I believe it cannot serve European peace if the impression is allowed to prevail that the Reich is disinterested in all European questions and especially that Germany is disposed to remain indifferent to the sufferings and lives of 3,500,000 Germans and pay no heed to their misfortunes.

We understand it when England and France represent their interests in the whole world.

But I should like to assure the statesmen of Paris and London that there are German interests, too, which we are determined to take care of, and that in all circumstances.

Prague Is Accused Of "Brutal Intimidation."

As you are aware, in Czechoslovakia after endless postponements of a plebiscite, at least communal elections were held. Even in Prague the untenability of the Czech position was recognized.

They were afraid of the unity of Germans and other nationalities. It therefore was believed special measures were needed to influence election results by the exercise of pressure.

The Czech government's notion was that the only effective means would be brutal intimidation. For this intimidation a display of the material strength of the Czech state seemed called for.

In order to make this display plausible in the eyes of the world, Benes (President Eduard Benes of Czechoslovakia) invented the lie that Germany mobilized troops and was preparing to march into Czechoslovakia.

Only the Prague government needed this deception as a pretext for its own terrorist blackmailing and influencing of elections. Here I can only additionally assure that:

Firstly, at that time not a single German soldier more was drafted beyond those actually serving.

Secondly, that not a single regiment nor any other unit marched toward the border; that during this period not even one soldier was outside his peacetime garrison and that, to the contrary, orders were given on our part to avoid even the slightest impression of pressure upon Czechoslovakia.

"Military Pressure" Put Upon Election?

In spite of this, a base campaign started in which all Europe organized to serve the criminal aims of a government which intended to put an election under military pressure in order to intimidate citizens and cheat them of their right to vote.

This campaign, which needed some moral justification for its aims, in its unscrupulousness did not even shrink from casting suspicion upon a great state, to alarm all Europe and if need be tumble it into bloody war.

As Germany had no designs and on the contrary was convinced that communal elections would confirm the rights of the Sudeten Germans, the Reich's government on its part did nothing.

This, however, was taken as an inducement to assert that, after nothing had happened, Germany had retreated owing to the determined stand of the Czechs and firm interventions by England and France.

Says They Can't Take "Insult" Second Time.

You will understand, my party comrades, that a great power cannot accept for the second time such base interference. Therefore I have drawn the necessary consequences as a precaution.

I am a National Socialist and as such accustomed to strike back immediately against any attack. I know quite well that through leniency such an irreconcilable enemy as Czechdom cannot be reconciled but instead it will be incited to even greater arrogance.

The old German Reich can be a warning for us. In its love for peace it went to the limit of self-surrender and yet in the end it could not prevent war.

In recognition of these facts I decided May 28 on very severe measures:

Firstly, on my orders the strengthening of the army and an extensive increase in the air force was begun immediately and executed.

Gigantic Fortifications Under Construction

You may rest assured that since May 28 the most gigantic fortification works of all times have been under construction.

Behind this front of steel and concrete which has partly three lines and at certain points four, and up to 50 kilometers (about 30 miles) in depth, the German people stand armed.

I have made this the most tremendous effort of all times in order to serve peace. But I will under no circumstances look idly on continuance of oppression of German nationals in Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Benes uses tactics, he talks and says he will organize negotiations, clear up questions of procedure after the Geneva pattern and make small concessions for the sake of quiet.

Things can not go on like this. This is not a matter of mere words but of rights—violated rights. What Germans demand is the right of self-determination which every other people possesses, and no phrases.

Suppression of Germans Will Have Serious Results

Mr. Benes has no business to make presents to the Sudetens—they have a right to their own lives the same as all other peoples. If democracies, however, should be of the conviction that in this case they must protect the suppression of Germans with all means, if necessary, then this will have the most serious consequences.

I hope to serve peace more if I leave no doubt about this. I never put a demand that Germany may suppress 3,500,000 Frenchmen, or that perhaps 3,500,000 Englishmen be submitted to us for oppression, but I make the demand that suppression of 3,500,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia is to cease and that the free right of self-determination take its place.

On the whole it is a matter of the Czechoslovakian government to arrange affairs with authorized representatives of the Sudeten Germans and come to an understanding one way or other.

Resents Demands By Miniature State

When we think of unheard of demands which in the past months even a miniature state dared to make upon Germany, we can only explain it by inadequate willingness to recognize the German Reich as a state which is more than a pacific upstart. . . .

The new Italian-Roman empire is just the same as the new Germanic-German Reich is, in reality a very old phenomena. One need not love them. But no power on earth can remove them.

Fellow party men and women! National Socialists!

Your national pride and confidence have been fortified by this demonstration of strength and unity of our people. Go home with that faith and trust which you have been carrying within your hearts for nearly two decades.

Once more you have the right to carry your German heads proudly and high. But we all have a duty never to bend again under foreign will, this be our solemn pledge!

So help us, God!

'All Right So Far'

By Barnet Nover

THERE is a story about a man who, having fallen from the roof of a skyscraper, cried out as he hurtled past the twentieth floor: "I'm all right so far!"

Europe today may not be precisely in the position of that unfortunate. The disaster which for so long has threatened that unhappy continent is, perhaps, not inevitable. It may be averted in the future as it has been averted thus far—this week for the second time since May. But the Old World's sense of relief at having so narrowly escaped a catastrophe is somewhat premature. The general crisis continues even if the immediate threat to peace has been removed. There is to be no war in Europe today or tomorrow. But real peace remains as far off as ever.

IN HITLER'S speech of Monday night there was one interesting revelation. Discussing the tremendous efforts that have been and are being made to build a wall of steel and cement along Germany's western border, he informed his followers and the world that by winter this gigantic barrier will be completed.

In other words, it is not yet complete. This being so, the presumption is that Germany cannot yet be sure of holding back the French should they seek to come to Czechoslovakia's aid in the event of an attack on that nation by the Third Reich.

Why did the Fuehrer make this fact known? Two related explanations are possible. One is that it offered a convenient excuse for holding off a military attack on Czechoslovakia at this time. The other is that it was designed to assure the more bellicose Nazis that it will not be long before Germany will be impregnable against attack.

In this particular Hitler's revelation regarding the state of Germany's defenses in the west contrasts with much of what was said at Nuremberg during the past week. Hitler, Goering, Goebbels and the minor Nazi leaders all had emphasized how fully prepared Germany was, both with respect to armed might and also with respect to raw material and food supplies. Why, then, put those matters off any longer? Nazis favoring an immediate military thrust in the direction of Czechoslovakia might ask. Hitler's statement gives the answer.

But in saying what he did the Fuehrer also showed an awareness of the state of preparation of the other side. During the weeks that have elapsed since Germany's test mobilization was put into force, France has steadily added to the number of its men under arms; Great Britain has kept its home fleet in waters close to the Third Reich and bit by bit a formidable combination of powers, great and small, has been brought into being.

If Germany possessed a margin of power three weeks ago this margin was steadily whittled away in the meantime.

IT WOULD be a tragic mistake, however, to suppose that the events of the past week constitute a real rebuff for Hitler. They do not. All the military and diplomatic maneuvers of the democratic powers have not succeeded in getting him to moderate his demands on Czechoslovakia by one iota. On the contrary he has not stiffened these demands. And if, as he recognized, the moment was not opportune for a military adventure against the little republic he is in a position to extract every ounce of benefit out of his retreat from war.

Under Hitler Germany has become a completely militarized state, with every other consideration subordinated to the building up of the nation's armed strength. She can mobilize her forces speedily and with relative ease and that applies not only to the war machine but also to the apparatus of persuasion.

Democracies cannot easily follow suit. They are slow to act; unity of mind is for them a difficult accomplishment. This unity of mind, to a very large degree, obtained this week both in France and Great Britain as well as between these two nations. But it took months to achieve this state of affairs and now that the immediate crisis is over it may take months before these nations may again find it possible to screw their courage and determination to the sticking point.

• • • •

THAT WOULD not matter so much if Hitler showed any inclination to compromise on the Czechoslovak issue. But he does not. "The Almighty has not created 7,000,000 Czechs," he said, "to act as the guardians of these (Sudeten) Germans." Which means that, acting as vice regent of heaven, the Fuehrer is determined to free the Sudetens and destroy Czechoslovakia by whatever means are necessary.

What these means will be he does not say. But this very uncertainty is designed to keep the Prague government on tenterhooks. From now on it may more and more be faced by a state of internal revolt in the Sudeten areas encouraged by and fomented by Berlin. But how long its nerves can stand the strain without cracking is uncertain and should disorders within Czechoslovakia become widespread Germany may claim the right to intervene.

• • • •

HIS EXPECTED military foray against that nation having been postponed, Hitler now undertakes to subject Czechoslovakia to a state of siege from without coupled by guerrilla warfare from within. In the meantime he plans to wage a peace offensive against Czechoslovakia's actual and potential allies.

In again renouncing any Germany claim to Alsace-Lorraine, in emphasizing friendship with Poland, in citing the Anglo-German naval accord of 1935 as proof of his peaceful intent and in practically abandoning the campaign for the return of the colonies, the Fuehrer hopes to split public opinion in the democracies.

There are elements both in Great Britain and France that are prepared to take him at his word. And the very circumstance that this week Europe appeared on the very brink of war may intensify their predisposition in this regard. The fact that Hitler's solemn pledges regarding Austria, his earlier assurances of his determination loyally to fulfill the Locarno pact, to cite but two of his solemn commitments, were treated as scraps of paper, may not deter them from this belief.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl's Fiance Tells Friends in Her Hearing That He Doesn't Wish to Marry; What Is She to Think?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Last spring I met a young man in his early thirties. (I am a few years his junior.) He seemed to like me very much from the first. After that meeting, he telephoned me often long-distance. (We live 150 miles apart.) Occasionally he would write (which he hates to do). On his third week-end visit to me, he asked me to marry him. I accepted, for I really liked him very much, although I may not have seemed overly enthusiastic, because I felt at the time that we hadn't known each other long enough to know our minds definitely.

• • • •

Since that time, we have been together a couple of days every month this summer and I have visited his home. But several times lately he has told friends (in my presence) that he doesn't want to get married. From his remark, what is one to think? I had supposed we were engaged. I have learned to love him and his remarks hurt me very much. Should I ask his meaning or just ignore his remarks? Please answer soon. PUZZLED GIRL.

• • • •

DEAR PUZZLED GIRL: One can only suppose that the young man has lived to regret the impulse which prompted him to propose marriage to you, and that he is trying in a round-about fashion to acquaint you with his change of heart. I think you have no alternative to inviting an explanation of his remarks made to friends that "he doesn't want to get married." If you would be fair to yourself and to him, there is no other course open to you. Surely you aren't so lacking in pride and self-respect as to be willing to try to railroad him into keeping a bargain so prematurely entered into, and one that he already appears so clearly to regret.

• • • •

As a matter of fact, his proposal was probably a slip of the tongue in the first place—a suggestion more histrionic than sincere. It is not uncommon for a thirtyish beau to accompany his gestures at love-making with stereotyped, superficial and essentially meaningless talk of marriage to his romantic partner of the moment; and while he may even, for the moment, think—or choose to believe—that the idea may be in order, the last thing on earth he anticipates or desires of the woman is a literal interpretation and prompt acceptance of the suggestion. Any woman of average social experience has come up against this type of man time and again, and if she is the sort of woman who, with humorous detachment and some understanding of masculine nature, allows him enough rope to hang himself, she is usually complimented in the end with an honest confession of his amusingly and confusingly mixed motives.

• • • •

Some men employ a proposal of marriage with the idea in mind of achieving a momentarily desirable point (and this is despicable expediency); others because their particular and peculiar sense of the dramatic fitness of things, their awareness of the theatrical demands of the specific occasion, prompts them to authenticate the sentimental picture with an apropos declaration; and others because they have developed to the nth degree a talent for living fully in the moment, playing the translent role to the hilt without taking the slightest thought of what the morrow may bring in the way of reckoning.

• • • •

Still others propose in a spirit of sheer spendthrift gallantry, eager to pay their delightful companion of the hour the ultimate compliment, as they conceive it and as they suppose she conceives it—viz, an offer to place their heart and hand, and name and fame, and life and fortune at her disposal. In any event, and with such men in such situations, it is play-acting purely, and the woman who takes it seriously does so at her own risk and usually to her own dismay.

• • • •

By all means clarify this situation, for your own protection. Don't act the ostrich by ignoring his remarks. Find out which side of the fence he belongs on. You can arrive at the truth by either direct or indirect methods, as you choose. Either you may ask him pointblank if he was only fooling when he suggested marriage (and if indeed he was, he may find your naivete so appealing and refreshing as to touch off a new and deeper interest in you); or you may fence with him until he is forced to take the initiative in trying to discover who has been misleading whom. In following the latter course it would mean that you would treat him henceforth as friend and admirer, but definitely not as your fiance; that you would refrain from any mention of marriage, and that you would clearly indicate that it was not your assumption that you were engaged. You would show a lively and normal interest in other young men, and generally conduct yourself as a girl whose heart and whose hand was as yet neither spoken for nor pledged. M. H.

Body's Ability To Adapt Self Emphasized

Dr. Clendening Points to the Development of Barrier to Disease as Example of Defense Mechanism.

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Yesterday we undertook a philosophic view of the human body placed in the universe. We pointed out the intricacy of its mechanism and the many dangers to which it is exposed.

Today I want to emphasize the ability the body has to adapt itself to dangers from without and within. Much as one might depreciate the way the body is put together in some ways—Helmholtz, the geratest scientist of all time, said that if an optical maker had sent him the human eye, he would have returned it as the most imperfect instrument he ever saw, and the ear is a botch—still one must admire this alert and uncanny ability on the part of the body to make the best of things.

Imunity Developed

The development of immunity to infectious diseases is probably the best example. With the enormous number of bacteria in the world and their rapid power of reproduction, and their tendency to invade the human body, they would destroy every vestage of human life on the planet if it were not for the natural defenses the body has against them. It can throw up a wall defensive against their onslaught in the form of a ring of white blood corpuscles, it can develop chemicals in the blood which will dissolve the bacteria completely, or render their activity innocuous. Certainly this function of the body is the one that preserves health the most.

Defense Mechanism

But this is only the beginning of the body's defense mechanisms. When you injure your finger or have rhematism is your finger you have pain. You may regard the pain as a disadvantage, as a symptom, even as the disease itself. But, as a matter of fact, it is a defensive mechanism, which prevents your moving your finger, makes you protect it, so that it can have rest and heal.

Every once in a while a patient comes in great perturbation to the doctor and says his heart is enlarged. It may be perfectly true, but that is an adaptave reaction. The heart had more work to do for some reason, and, like all muscles, when it has more work to do, it enlarges.

High Blood Pressure

High blood pressure is another adaptive measure. Peaple speak of high blood pressure as if it were a disease and as if it should be reduced. What happens is that the arteries and blood vessels have gotten stiff with age. It is easier to keep fluid circulating in a closed set of tubes if the tubes are elastic. The fluid can keep circulating in them at lower pressure. When they get stiff, you have to have a higher pressure to maintain the circulation at all. If you did not have high blood pressure, the organism would die.

These are only a few examples o fthe wonderful power of the body toadapt. We are inclined to think of fever and pain and enlarged heart and high blood pressure as enemies. They are really friends.

Art of Writing Is No Secret

LET'S interview the happy author—who turns her idle time into money by writing. How does she do it?

"You've caught me at the start of my idea," she says. "I'm jotting down notes about my subject—a mystery house nearby which has always fascinated me.

"It's been boarded up ever since I can remember, but day and night a light burns over the doorway. People say that long ago, after a family quarrel over her love, the daughter of the house ran away and never came back. Is this old story the clue to the perpetually burning light?

"An exciting subject, isn't it? Now I must decide the form I shall write it in. I may dig up the truth of the tale, write it as an article. Or I may say pooh! to facts and turn it into a dramatic short story.

"Style's my next thought. Article or fiction. I'll want to dress it up in picture words, give the flavor of the past. 'The whisper of petticoats, the flicker of gaslights, the clop-clop of horses' hooves, the rattle of hansoms over cobbled streets.'"

Nothing mysterious, you see, about successful writing. By an orderly plan you turn things you've seen and heard into lively, readable form.

The thing to do is to start! If those first words come hard, pretend you're talking to a close friend. To get the knack of picturing character, jot down descriptions of people you know, "peppery Mrs. A, amiable Miss B."

Smartness Is Keynote of Fall Fashion

Oversized Carry-All Handbag Combines Chic With Great Capacity, Having Room for Books, Stationery.

By Marshall Adams.
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE CHARACTER of the newest and smartest bags seems very much at variance with the millinery trend for diminutive hats. Bags this season are bulky, the more so the better. New tricks of stitching, trimming and metal adornment are evident, but the most characteristic note for the chic woman to keep in mind while scanning the handbag market is to buy a purse as capacious as an overnight bag and as comfortable as her last year's suit of tweeds.

Plaids Popular

Collegians, particularly, will dote on the comfort that the oversized bags will afford their whatnots and books of prose or verse. Many of the newest bags have special compartments for letters, make-up, tooth brushes, and the usual overnight requirements. The town and country bags of tweed or checks are handsome and suit the fashionable expansive mood to excellent advantage. Plaid bags have taken hold of the younger set's fancy, and they are finding them perfect foils for their trig little suits of cheviot or monotone tweed.

Catches Are Intricate

Quilting, feather stitching, tucking and shirring carry out the current trend for soft womanly fashion. Along with this femininity evident in accessories everywhere is the mechanical gadget co-ordination of zipper and automatic device. One very smart handbag seen recently, boasts a gold clasp which works by pushing a large ball from one end of a short slide to the other, releasing a spring. The system is hidden under a flap of fabric so that nothing is seen by the puzzled onlooker but the large ball placed sometimes at one end and sometimes at the other. Another cleverly designed bag, viewed locally, is an underarm model of antelope with the handle made in one with the bag, both cut from the same soft skin.

Jacqueline Cochran Reveals Proper Use of Lotions Protects Complexion Against Dehydrating Effects of Upper Air; Finds Upswept Coiffure Can Be Kept in Place, Even When Piloting Big Racing Plane.

IN THE course of her epoch-making flight from Burbank, Calif., to Bendix, N. J., last week, when she snatched the coveted Bendix trophy from under the noses of a field of masculine competitors, Jacqueline Cochran took occasion to test and prove her own particular theories concerning the care of the skin and hair.

MISS COCHRAN

Miss Cochran used her plane as a sort of flying laboratory and herself as her guinea pig to establish the fact that the undeniably dehydrating effects of the upper air on a sensitive skin can be counteracted by foresighted use of the proper emollient creams.

As a staunch believer in every woman's keeping within hailing distance of fashion, she further experimented with the possibilities of keeping an upswept top knot of curls in place, while flying through the air with the greatest of ease. More, even, than that, she welcomed her cross-continental flight as an opportunity for reducing her already slim waist an inch or two.

These strictly-of-interest-to-women facts were disclosed to The Post fashion writer by Miss Cochran Sunday, in a brief tete-a-tete managed during a tea time reception given in her honor, when the feminine contingent of the local press appeared virtually en masse.

"Before leaving Burbank I had my hair carefully coiffed in the most extreme pompadour I could achieve," Miss Cochran confided. "After 10 hours' flying, occasionally through ice and storm, my upswept hair-do was still upswept and as neat as when I started. This proves to me that there is no foundation for the popular notion that a woman aviatrix has to look like a man, either as to hair dress or pants or leather jerkin."

Speaking of her cosmetic experimentation, she explained: "Nothing so quickly dehydrates a sensitive skin as exposure to wind and altitude. Rarefied air is drying and aging to even the sturdiest complexions. Knowing this, I fortified my own skin with lotions, creams and cosmetics as much for my own protection as to prove for the benefit of other women that with right treatment the skin can survive the ordeal of air travel. I have learned that for my type of skin there are certain nourishing creams and lotions that offered excellent protection against dehydration.

"I usually lose from five to ten pounds weight on very important flights," she continued. "It may be the nervous tension of the competition, or the physical exhaustion of pitting one's self against the elements, but anyway, it's possible to lose that much weight and still keep fit. On this trip, I took along tomato juice as my principal sustenance, and arrived at my journey's end six pounds lighter yet feeling fine."

Paris Gowns Encourage Reducing

Wardrobe Inspires Singer to Take Off 2 Inches From Hip and Waist in Two Weeks.

By Ida Jean Kain.

WHAT WOULD you do if you had a flock of new Paris gowns you couldn't get into? Why, you'd slim right down to specifications so you could wear those clothes! And that is just what Jean Tennyson, the lovely lyric soprano, did in such a contingency. Maybe all that any of us needs to keep our figures is a Paris gown or two!

But to give Miss Tennyson due credit, she went to work and took off 2 inches from her hipline and 2 from her waist with the loss of only 7 pounds of weight and in less than two weeks. That is plenty of weight to lose in so short a time, but it is very little weight reduction in comparison with the improvement in measurements . . . which goes to show what exercise can do for you.

The Results Count

If you will work as hard in the three weeks you are taking off 10 pounds as Miss Tennyson did in reducing 7, there is practically no limit to your streamlining. She did not exercise for the joy of it. She does not like exercise, and my guess is that neither do you. But if you will make yourself twist and bend and stretch for 45 minutes a day, as she did, you will certainly like the results.

One of the mainstays of Miss Tennyson's program was a rod which she had installed in a doorway. It was just a plain rod, put up to stay and high enough that, while it could be reached easily in high heels, she had to stretch to reach it with her shoes off. The rtick is to stand on tiptoe, grasping the rod firmly in each hand, and then try to work the heels down to the floor.

A stretching rod is one of the finest things in the world for your waistline, and Miss Tennyson became so enthusiastic about hers that "every time I go through that door I take a swing at it!" Exercising on the bar not only takes down the waistline, but by reflex contraction it strengthens those tummy muscles. For additional abdominal exercise, raise alternate knees while holding the bar.

Stretch Your Midriff

You can give your midriff almost as good a stretch by facing a wall and pushing the hands up the wall as high as they will go, standing on the toes to do it. Then try to keep the hands in place while you lower the heels. The principle is the same as when you areo n the bar. It works better, however, if you can persuade someone to grasp you firmly under each shoulder and hold you up as you work the heels down.

You can see that this famous singer really put time, thought and energy into streamlining her figure. Since she never wears a girdle, her figure—as well as the success of those gowns—depends entirely upon muscle tone. What do you think of her measurements? Waist, 27 inches; hips, 37 inches; bust, 35 inches. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, and weighs 125 pounds.

Soft Dust Cloths Will Deepen Wood's Polish.

THE MAKERS OF modern furniture go to much trouble and expense to reproduce in the better pieces as nearly as possible the polish that makes antique furniture such a joy to the owner. It is up to you and your dust cloth to keep and deepen that polish.

Take care then how and with what you dust it. Rough dust cloths and those that have become gritty through ingrained dust and dirt particles can do much to mar the shining surface of your new furniture. Choose cloths with a soft and pliable texture and wash them thoroughly at least once a week in hot water in which you have stirred up a generous amount of suds.

A Woman's New York

New York, Sept. 12.

HARVEST TIME approaches here. The leaping neon lights of Broadway are taking on that ruddy autumn look; Uncle Seth, the traffic constable at Forty-fifth and Broadway, is digging around for his stylish beaver earmuffs, and within the next few weeks several of the shows which ripened in the hay-barn theaters last summer will be cut down and shocked by the critics.

ALICE HUGHES.

This is the correctly involved way of saying that our theater season teeters on the brink. Listening at various keyholes in a ladylike way, I have learned what some of the ladies of show business will be up to in the next few weeks. Twelve exhibitions, more or less, will be pushed at us in the next month.

I suppose the opus that tops the lot in interest is "Kiss the Boys Good-bye," written by that crafty and clever Clare Boothe Brokaw Luce, who penned "The Women" and made pots of money for herself and fun for many thousands. The best known person in Clare's troupe is that big, blonde Benay Venuta, known, up to now, as a warbler on the wild air waves. Win, lose, draw, this show whips our curiosity.

• • • •

Dorothy Gish, darker and peppier of the two immortal Gish sisters from Massilon, Ohio, will have the lady-lead in a show called "Split the Wind," by one Elizabeth B. Ginty. Guthrie McClintic, Kit Cornell's spouse, directs it. Two musical shows are due very promptly. One is a fun-poking affair called "Sing Out the News," in which the best-known girls are Mary Jane Walsh, stunning last year in "I'd Rather Be Right," and Dorothy Fox, clever young dance satirist. The other, "You Never Know," will toss out to us those shy little woods violets, Libby Holman and Lupe Velez, provided, of course, they live through the rehearsal battles. Well, there it is. Not an exciting lot, but it will start us off, anyway.

• • • •

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The same day I saw Mary Pickford lunching at the Savoy-Plaza in a beauteous white crepe gown, I received an enormous cellophane-wrapped box of the gal's cosmetic products, just making their season's debut at the Fifth avenue general store. Evidently it was National Mary Pickford Day, at least for Aunt Alice.

• • • •

Just before the kids started pouring in from camp, I got a quick look at a famous one in the Adirondacks. It was once the 1,000-acre estate of Richard Hudnut, the perfume king, and there a little Italian named Rudolph Valentino honeymooned, 16 years ago, with Winifred Hudnut, who called herself "Natacha Rambova." Their honeymoon room is now the camp infirmary—and over those beautiful acres gallop 60 kids from our sidewalks. What a beautiful place, and how packed with memories, and how much more useful it is today than then.

• • • •

The brushed-up hair-do hasn't bothered the little chicks of Broadway yet. Roaming the Times Square streets yesterday, I saw that the little chorines were still going for white platinum locks that brush the shoulders, and look, if you'll pardon me, something terrible. But they seem to like it just as much as their big sisters did in the days when poor Jean Harlow made us all conscious of the super-bleach.

• • • •

I suppose a few million of us will be reading novelist Edna Ferber's self-story these next few months. "A Peculiar Treasure," she calls it. It seems to me that lady authors have never been so active before.

• • • •

June Lang, the pretty movie girl, paused just long enough to say hello, good-by and sail for England, where she'll face the camera. A. C. Blumenthal, the tiny promoter famous along Broadway the past decade, got in nearly every picture, she being his current crush. "What a surprise to see Blumey," cooed June. "Bah," bahed the press. If that's a surprise, earthquakes are expected for months!

Homes pop up in strange places here in the midst of Manhattan. Right near me, on strictly commercial East Thirty-fourth street, is that of Mr. and Mrs. Edward H. Wright, and they operate it oddly. That is, they sleep on the first floor, have their living room on the second, and enjoy a terrace garden on the third, whence they can peer at the Empire State Building, and even see a few trees. They even have a small garden, where Wright cuts fireplace wood in the winter. All this, in the midst of the racket and jam and hullabaloo of midtown. And it's mighty nice.

Cuban Embassy Host To Bar Delegates

First Big Party of the Month Marks Start of Social Season; Capital Lawyers, Judges and Officials Among Guests at Lavish Buffet Supper; Charge Acts for Ambassador.

By Hope Ridings Miller.
The Post Society Editor.

GUESTS OF HONOR at the first big party of the month, 30-odd Cuban lawyers last evening helped to start the new social season on its merry whirl. Arriving in Washington yesterday afternoon, the visitors spent their first few fours calling on dignitaries and seeing sights. Later, they assembled for the informal buffet supper at the Cuban Embassy, where they met a number of Washington lawyers, including officers and board members of the District Bar Association, and a sprinkling of other Capital residents.

HOPE RIDINGS MILLER.

After issuing invitations for the event, the Cuban Ambassador, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga, was called to Havana on business. Since the Minister-Counselor of the Embassy, Dr. Jose T. Baron, is also away, Dr. Vicente Valdes Rodriguez, Charge d'Affaires, was host for the occasion. Receiving with him in the music room were the Ambassador's sister and niece, Senora Ann Martinez Fraga de Carabia and Sennorita Ana Maria Carabia Martinez. The former wore a street-length frock of vintage crepe, cut on simple lines, while Senorita Ana Maria Carabia was turned out in a smart black frock, fashioned with a full skirt and a smocked girdle.

In the drawing room, where cocktails were served, the Cuban visitors and other guests mingled for fully half an hour before the doors were opened to the dining room, where the supper was served. Receiving special attention in the group was Mrs. Bolitha J. Laws, wife of the Associate Judge of the District Court. Justice Laws was late, being delayed by a case that kept him on the bench longer than he had expected.

LOOKING UNUSUALLY young to be the wife of a full-fledged justice, Mrs. Laws was trimly turned out in a black frock trimmed with a white organdy bow at the throat, and an off-the-face black felt hat. Her husband arrived a few minutes after most of the company had assembled and guests who had not met him before had a chance to glimpse the youngest associate judge ever to be sworn in to the District Court. Some one in the crowd remarked on his youthful appearance and Mrs. Laws observed that their 16-year-old daughter, Nancy Lee Laws, had said recently, "Oh, Daddy's always the youngest in everything he goes into."

Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey L. Munter—the former soon will succeed Mr. Laws as president of the District Bar Association—also were among guests at the party, as were Wilbur L. Gray, secretary of the bar association, and Mrs. Gray, who seemed to know everyone present, including most of the Cuban delegation. David A. Pine, United States Attorney for the District, also was on hand for the party, as were Mr. and Mrs. William P. McCracken, John J. Sirica, Dr. L. S. Rowe, director of the Pan-American Union; Mr. and Mrs. Louis G. Caldwell, the latter of whom returned Saturday from a vacation in California; Dr. Oscar Albertini and Ralph Snowden Hill, of the State Department.

From the drawing room guests proceeded to the dining room, where a long table was spread lavishly with dainties designed to please both American and Latin-American tastes. Flames flickering from tall yellow tapers in silver candelabra fell on a huge wooden bowl of arroz y frijoles (beans and rice), the dish so frequently served at the Cuban Embassy; sliced ham and chicken, potato salad, sandwiches, cakes and ice cream. Coffee and champagne topped the supper, which was a success from first to last and had guests still lingering at the embassy until after midnight.

GLIMPSED IN THE CROWD, in addition to the Havana and Washington lawyers and their wives, were several diplomats, including the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, and the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza, who seemed to have many acquaintances in the Cuban group. Another especially outstanding guest was Dr. Fernandez Lopez, of Havana, who is a delegate to the International Goiter Conference.

A center of attention was Dr. Manuel Fernandez Supervielle, head of the Havana Bar Association. Also in the group, which could be identified by white ribbons, bearing the words "Cuban Band" were a number of women, some of whom were wives, others who were lawyers, and still others who were both lawyers and wives of lawyers.

The Havana visitors, who will spend several hours today sightseeing, will be feted this afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel by officers and board members of the District Bar Association. The group leaves at 8 o'clock tonight for New York, where it will be widely feted on a 6-day stay. From New York City, it will go to Niagara Falls and then return to Cuba by way of New York and Washington.

En route here, the group stopped at Jacksonville, Fla., and Raleigh, N. C., where it was entertained at a number of functions. Most members of the group are visiting this country for the first time but most of them speak English fluently.

To Enter School Here This Month

Harris & Ewing.

MISS NANCY LOUISE HALL, daughter of Maj. Elmer E. Hall, U. S. M. C., and Mrs. Hall, is completing plans to enter Gunston Hall School here this September. Her father, who has been stationed in Washington for the last three years, was transferred last June to Quantico, where he is attached to the Marine Corps School.

Medical Club Luncheon For Diplomats

Envoys From Argentine and Mexico to Be Guests of Honor Today at the Mayflower.

The Argentine Ambassador, Felipe A. Espil, and the Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Francisco Castillo Najera, will be ranking guests at the luncheon to be given by the International Medical Club of Washington at the Mayflower today. The event has been arranged in compliment to the third International Goiter Conference, of which Dr. F. B. Dorsey, of Kekokuk, Iowa, is president-elect.

Other diplomats to be there are Miguel Lopez Pumarejo, Minister of Colombia; Radu Irimescu, Minister of Rumania, and Dr. Hans Thomsen, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy.

Honor guests for the event will include Dr. Theodore Lang, of Muncie; Dr. Arnold Loesser, of Greiburg; Dr. J. Engster, of Zurich; Dr. H. Eggenberger, of Herisau, and Dr. C. Wegelin, of Berne, Switzerland; Dr. Henry Welti, of Paris; Dr. Fernandez Lopez, of Havana; Dr. Herbert H. Stackpoole, of Mexico City; Dr. S. Tubisz, of Warsaw; Dr. Francisco Mozo, of Bogota; Dr. Pedro Cossio, of Buenos Aires, and Dr. Andrew Szana, of Timisoara, Rumania.

L. M. Riverses, Of Charleston, S. C., Are Feted Here

Mr. and Mrs. L. Mendel Rivers, of Charleston, S. C., who were married recently, have come to Washington for a visit. Mr. Rivers, a former member of the South Carolina Legislature, is now in charge of the bond and tax unit of the Department of Justice in New Orleans. Mrs. Rivers, the former Miss Margaret Middleton, of Charleston, is a member of the Junior League there and was formerly society editor of the Charleston Evening Post.

Judge Joseph Fromberg, a special assistant to the Attorney General, and Mrs. Fromberg entertained at the Metronome Room of the Wardman Park on Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Mahlon Kiefer. Mr. and Mrs. W. Marvin Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Simpson, Mr. and Mrs. Jack B. Love, Miss Mary Quigley, Miss Virginia Wright, Miss Ruth Warwick, J. H. Doxtater, William Garbose, Dr. Benjamin M. Parker, Charles Hatton and Philip Sutker.

Mme. Coutinho's Pupils in Recital

Mme. Louise Coutinho will present a group of music pupils in a program this afternoon at headquarters of the American Association of University Women. Following the recital, which is scheduled for 3 o'clock, tea will be served. Mme. Coutinho will be assisted at the tea tables by Mrs. George O. Gillingham, Mrs. Arthur J. Seaton, Mrs. Henry R. Pyne, Mrs. Milton E. Lowry, Miss Louise Green and Miss Mary Park Clemens.

About a dozen children will take part in the program, which was to be heard by a number of prominent persons.

Uniontown, Pa., Girl Bride of D. C. Resident

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Harford, of Uniontown, Pa., announce the marriage of Mrs. Harford's daughter, Maxine Wanda Butler, and Elwood E. Yowler, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert F. Yowler, also of Uniontown.

The ceremony took place Thursday at the home of the Rev. Donald Wood, Hyottsville, Md., at 3:30 in the afternoon. The couple will make their home in Washington.

Maj. Harloe Is Joined By Wife and Children

Maj. Bartley Harloe, U. S. A., who came to Washington in July, has been joined by Mrs. Harloe and their son and daughter, John and Anne, who had been at Princeton, N. J., during the summer. The Harloes have taken a house in Foxhall Village.

About the Town

By Dudley Harmon

NOT EVEN the approach of autumn can keep Mrs. Robert Brennan, wife of the newly appointed Irish Minister, from weeding, digging or whatever it is you do, in a garden in the fall. Gardening is her chief hobby and she resolved that the grounds of her new home at 2425 Kalorama road should be put in order even before the furniture inside was arranged. The Brennans moved last week into the large, gray fieldstone house, formerly the home of Richard B. Griffin, Mrs. Paul Bastedo's son.

DUDLEY HARMON

The new Minister, as most persons know, now that he has emerged from comparative obscurity of legation secretary into the limelight of envoy, was a leader in the Sinn Fein movement and was even sentenced to death for his activities. Subsequently released by a general amnesty, he organized the Sinn Fein publicity department and in 1929 founded the Dublin Daily, the "Irish Press" organ of the Fianna Fail, and until he came to Washington was general manager of that paper.

The three Brennan daughters, named for early Irish queens, are as interesting as their parents. Maeve has been playing important roles in old-fashioned American "mellerdrammers" with the Vagabond Players at Deale, Md., on Chesapeake Bay. She went to shcool with the manager, who offered her a part. Deirdre, who is 21, goes to art school.

THE RUMOR that Harold Hinton has been summoned back by his boss, the New York Times, from his temporary post as aide to Ambassador Joseph Kennedy may or may not be true. The Times office saws noncommittally that it hasn't heard when he's returning. But gay, dark-haired Mrs. Hinton, the life of many a Capital party, is returning the first of next month and will occupy her house in Georgetown again. Eva is expected to be gone until January when she sailed last June with her son, Harold, jr. In her absence her house here was occupied by Capt. John Towers, Navy aviator, who now is in the throes of shifting his belongings to a new residence on Thirty-sixth place. Mrs. Towers, who is French, is expected shortly from her homeland, where she spent the summer.

TWO minor burglaries have given Capital society something interesting to talk about recently. James Clement Dunn, political advisor to the State Department, returned a few days ago to find that someone had broken into his garage and stolen a radio and all his chauffeur's uniforms. Why they took the uniforms, and left other clothes which were also in the garage, nobody has been able to figure out.

The former Austrian Legation, which now is completely empty except for a caretaker, was broken into recently and the occupant's money taken. Several legations are reported interested in taking over this attractive building, which was appropriated last March by the German government and now is on the market. The new German Embassy, the cornerstone of which will be laid next month, is to be completely air-conditioned and will have parking space for 50 cars.

THE LAMBETH WALK made a big hit out at the dignified Chevy Chase Club the other evening. Older people who had shuddered at the writhings and stampings of the Big Apple joined enthusiastically in the sedate measures of the new dance. The latest craze, "peeling the peach," does not seem to have hit Washington yet.

COMINGS AND GOINGS: Hugh Cumming, jr., has returned from six weeks at Sheridan, Wyo., where his brother-in-law and sister have a ranch. He is completely sold on life in the wide open spaces, even if it has gotten to be a little like Long Island, he says. Mrs. Cumming, on a pack trip in the mountains, will join her husband here Saturday . . . The secretary of the Netherlands legation, A. F. H. van Troostenburg de Bruyn, will meet his wife in New York when she returns Saturday from a vacation in Holland. They will then go to the White Mountains for a week's stay . . . Miss Elsie Ekengren is again in Washington after visits to Long Island and Bar Harbor and is apartment hunting.

R. E. Kelsos To Reside Here

After October 1, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Edward Kelso, who were married last Saturday, will be at home at 1824 Massachusetts avenue.

The bride, the former Miss Anne Blair Hill, is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Edward Hill and the late Dean Hill of George Washington University. Mr. Kelso is a senior at the university, and Mrs. Kelso is a graduate.

The ceremony took place at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Hill, 1303 Floral avenue, the Rev. Henry K. Pasma officiating. The bride wore a white taffeta dress with a full skirt and a finger-tip veil and carried a Colonial bouquet of white and pink chrysanthemums and tube roses. Her attendants were her two sisters, the Misses Jane Engeborg and Mary Richards Hill, and the bridegroom's sisters, the Misses Dorothy Kathleen and Mary Kelso. They wore frocks in shades of rust, gold, blue and green, and carried matching Colonial bouquets.

A reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Hill was assisted by Mrs. Hans A. Hochbaum, Mrs. Frank W. Moroman and Mrs. E. Melvin Williams.

Mrs. Kelso is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, and Mr. Kelso a member of Acacia fraternity.

Among out-of-town guests at the wedding were Miss Anna Pickle, of East Orange, N. J.; Mr. and Mrs. William Howard Pickle and William H. Pickle, jr., of Phillipsburg, N. J., and Mrs. Donald L. Nixon, of Phillipsburg.

Visit Parents

Mrs. A. W. Johnson, wife of Capt. Johnson, U. S. A., and her sister, Mrs. Henry Luebbermann, wife of Capt. Luebbermann, U. S. A., are in Richmond to spend the remainder of this month with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles C. Reed, at their home, Sanford Hills. Their children, Reed and Millie Johnson and Janice Luebbermann have been with their grandparents for two weeks since the families completed their summer vacation at Virginia Beach.

Miss Thompson Is Engaged

Mrs. John M. Thompson, of 2437 California street, announces the engagement of her daughter, Miss Lorraine Janet Thompson, to John Martin Cuddy, of 143 Drake avenue, New Rochelle, N. Y.

Miss Thompson is a daughter of the late Dr. John M. Thompson, of Webster, Mass. She was graduated from the Immaculate Junior College and Seminary here and later took special courses at the Katharine Gibbs School in New York. She is a member of the secretarial staff in the Secretary's office of the Treasury Department.

Mr. Cuddy has studied art in New York and is now associated with the Max Fleischer Art Studios of New York and Miami. He is a member of the Gamma Eta Kappa fraternity.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Miss Naomi Love Becomes Bride of Cyril Ted Fisher

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Ted Fisher, who were married on Sunday afternoon, will make their home in Elkins, W. Va.

Mrs. Fisher is the former Miss Naomi Love, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Love of Washington and Mr. Fisher is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Morris Fisher, of Jamesburg, N. J. Their wedding took place at Stansbury Lodge, Rabbi Solomon Metz officiating.

The bride wore a gown of pale blue lace and a cap and veil of matching tulle. She carried a shower bouquet of mixed flowers. Mrs. Anne Lefkowitz was matron of honor and Miss Gladys Noon served as maid of honor. Eugene Love was best man, Bertram Lefkowitz groomsman, and the ushers were Maurice, Solomon and Stanley Love, brothers of the bridegroom; Harold Friedman, Charles Abraham and Charles Kousen.

Irene Watkins Becomes Bride

After a wedding trip, Lieut. Marius De Martino, U. S. C. G., and Mrs. De Martino, who were married on Saturday, will reside temporarily in Cleveland, Ohio.

The bride, the former Mss Dana Irene Watkins, is the daughter of Mrs. Russell Allen Conn, of Washington. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. O. R. De Martino, of Marseilles, France.

Their wedding took place at the National Universalist Church, the Rev. Frederic W. Perkins officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her stepfather, wore an ivory lace dress over satin with a juliet cap holding her illusion veil, and carried gardenias.

Mrs. J. Arthur Thomas was matron of honor, and Miss Alice L. Haney served as maid of honor. They wore lilac blue satin gowns with matching juliet caps and carried pink roses. The bridesmaids, Mrs. William Boswell, and Mrs. James C. Bradley, jr., were attired in electra blue satin with caps of the same shade and carried American Beauty roses.

Commander Alfred C. Richmond was best man, and the ushers were Lieut. Comdr. Edward Fritzsche and Lieuts. George Nelson, F. E. Pollio, E. H. Thiele, G. H. Bowerman and R. R. Curry.

A reception for members of the family and close friends followed the ceremony. Among out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wetter, of Bryn Mawr, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Gartland Horan, of Haverford, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. D. D. Chidsey, of Haverford, Pa.

Miss Matthews Has Guests

Mrs. Pavenstedt And Daughters Go To N.Y. From Here

Mrs. Edmund W. Pavenstedt, who, with her daughters, the Misses Anne and Constance Child, arrived last week from Europe, returned to Washington the past week-end and then went back to New York.

She will be there for several days completing arrangements for the October wedding of Miss Anne Child and Charles Barstow Wright Dick, which is scheduled for October 15. For the past few days Miss Child has been the guest of the prospective bridegroom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Langhorne E. Dick, of Chestnut Hill, Pa. The bride-elect is the daughter of the late Richard Washburn Child, former United States Ambassador to Italy.

At the Carlton

French Envoy Returns to U. S.

With its passengers including Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, French Ambassador, the liner Normandie docked yesterday in New York. The French envoy returns to Washington a month earlier than he expected, his government having ordered all its ambassadors back to their posts in the tension over Czechoslovakia.

Jesse Jones, Reconstruction Finance Corporation director, and Stewart McDonald, head of Federal Housing, also were aboard the Normandie. Mr. McDonald, like Ambassador Doynel de Saint Quentin, came back sooner than he expected owing to the pressure of work. He was to have been chairman of a housing conference in Switzerland.

The French Military Attache, Lieut. Col. Emmanuel Lombard, will join his wife, Mme. Lombard, at their home here, having arrived on the Normandie. Mme. Garreau-Dombasle, wife of the French commercial attache in New York, was a passenger on the Normandie.

Home Teaching Theme Of Parents' Congress

Educators Gathered Here Discuss Problems Involved in 'Teaching Parent-Teacher Leaders to Teach' and Establishing Closer Relationship Between Home and the School.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

"Teaching parent-teacher leaders how to teach" is the theme of the annual meeting of the board of managers of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers which opened at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday. Mrs. J. K. Pettengill, president of the national organization, is presiding at the sessions which are being devoted to the problems of parent-teacher relationship and training for leadership throughout the organization.

"We hope to develop new services from the National Congress to the States," said Mrs. Pettengill, indicating that a general re-organization was in progress to accomplish this and increase the effectiveness of the National program.

Both parents and teachers are represented among the officers here for the conference. Mrs. George E. Calvert, of Oklahoma City, State president of the Oklahoma Congress, is a recognized authority in home economics and vocational education as well as an author of note. She is now president of the State Presidents' Club, which will have a dinner this evening at the Mayflower.

Prominent Educators Here for Meeting

The National committee chairmen here for the conference, include many distinguished educators. Among them is Dr. Lillian R. Smith, M. D., of Michigan, who heads the committee on the summer round-up, and is director of the Michigan Bureau of Child Hygiene and Public Health Nursing.

Miss Ellen C. Lombard, national chairman on home education, is associate specialist in parent education at the United States Office of Education. John Edward Anderson, who heads the committee on the exceptional child, is director of the Institute of Child Welfare at the University of Minnesota.

Elizabeth Wells Robertson, chairman for art, is director of art in the public schools of Chicago. She is a sister of David Allen Robertson, president of Goucher College.

Miss Evelyn Eastman, chairman for mental hygiene, is director of parent education in the Toledo schools. Dr. Joseph M. Artman, chairman for character education since 1932, is a professor of religious education and a widely known lecturer. Miss Julia Wright Merrill, chairman of the committee on library service, chief of the Public Library Division of the American Library Association; Dr. Ada Hart Arlitt, parent education chairman, head of the department of child care and training in the School of Household Administration, University of Cincinnati.

Dr. William McKinley Robinson, chairman of rural service, is a member of the faculty of Western State Teachers College, Kalamazoo, Mich.

Mrs. Mary T. Bannerman, of Washington, national chairman of legislation, has had long experience in legislative work with various organizations. B. H. Darrow, of Buffalo chairman of radio, has been interested in educational broadcasting since 1928, and taught the first course in education by radio at Buffalo State Teachers College this summer.

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne.

A DOLL, purchased in 1900 as a gift for her niece by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, just after she had become president of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, came back to her a few days ago.

It was one of several dressed by prominent women throughout the country, to be sold at a bazaar sponsored by the suffrage association in Madison Square Garden. This was the first event of which Mrs. Catt had charge after being elected to the presidency.

Mrs. A. B. Shaw, whose husband was then governor of Iowa, Mrs. Catt's native State, dressed the doll the suffrage leader chose for her niece, Ruhe Linn. Its pink organdy dress was made in the fashion of the day, with a pleated ruffle around the skirt and black velvet ribbon and lace trimming the waist. Its underclothes included a chemise, long drawers and three petticoats, one of which was pleated white taffeta.

Mrs. Catt's niece lived in Colorado as a child and, this summer on a trip there from her present home in New York City to attend the golden wedding anniversary of her parents, she found the doll in an old trunk. Cherishing it as a memento of the suffrage campaign, she brought it back with her and gave it to her aunt.

The return of the doll brought memories of the bazaar. Mrs. Catt recalled that the event netted $10,000 to the association as well as affording opportunity for Nation-wide publicity for the suffrage movement. Women all over the country contributed.

Among them were those in Iowa who sent a carload of hogs to the Chicago market, where they were sold for the benefit of the bazaar and the car, with its banner urging woman suffrage, went on to New York. Kansas women sent a car of flour and butter and other States were similarly represented.

The golden-haired doll, when I saw her a day or two ago, occupied a chair in the library of Mrs. Catt's home in New Rochelle, N. Y., and was introduced to friends who came in for tea.

Now Some Vacation Notes:

Miss Luella P. Chase, regent of Susan Reviere Chapter of the D. A. R., who has been in England for the summer with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, sailed with them for America last Wednesday aboard the Aquitania.

They spent ten days at Ripon, for which Rippon Lodge, the Ellis' country place in Virginia, was named, and from there motored to cathedral cities. They also motored to Salisbury and Stonehenge and, before returning to London, took a ten-day motor trip to Bournemouth, Plymouth, Torquay, and Truro.

• • • •

MRS. DANIEL A. REED, wife of Representative Reed, of New York, and president of the Congressional Club, and her daughter, Ruth, are in Maine, with Mr. Reed, who has been speaking in the Republican campaign. They motored north from their home in Dunkirk, and were guests last Thursday of Representative and Miss Ralph O. Brewster.

• • • •

• • • •

MRS. LEON E. TRUESDELL, past president of the Rubinstein Club, recently returned from Cole Farm, Percy, N. H., in the White Mountains, where she spent the summer. Her daughter, Constance, leaves September 23 to resume her work at Mount Holyoke College, and Miriam will return to Cathedral School in October.

MYRL RHINE, publicity chairman for the local A. A. U. W., arrived home Sunday night from a two weeks' vacation which took her to St. Lois, Paragould, Ark., where she visited her parents; New Orleans, where she said she was "practically buried by history and heat" but loved the romance of the city, and from there, aboard the Dixie, to New York.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess

The Home Builders.

A house is not a home. You see,
A home much more than house must be. —Jerry Muskrat.

What Jerry says is true. There are very many houses that are not homes. People may live in them but this does not make them homes. When you think of home you think of more than just a house, much more. You think of surroundings, of the furnishings, and more important than these, the atmosphere.

Jerry Muskrat and Mrs. Jerry were starting to build a new home. They were beginning with a new house. Of course. They must have a house and there was none in these new surroundings. Anyway there was none that would do for Muskrats. So the first thing to be done was the building of a house. Until that was done they could get along with a bed of grass, an open nest, hidden among the rushes.

They had carefully chosen the site. It was where three big clumps of cattails grew very near together. First those cattails had to be cut. Each plant was cut down near the base. Thus both food and building material were obtained at the same time. You see, the tender heart of the plant was good eating, very good eating indeed to Jerry and Mrs. Jerry. So as they worked they ate and the work gave them a good appetite. The plants were left floating. They would be used later.

When all the plants on the three clumps had been cut level with or slightly below the level of the water, the digging of a sort of ditch around the three clumps began. The mud brought up was piled on and between the three clumps so as to make a sort of island. The bottom was neither sand nor soft mud nor stiff clay. It was what might be called peat, black and firm. For the purposes of the builders it was perfect.

"Are you going to stay here?" he asked on his first visit.

"It is hard to dig but it is worth the labor," declared Jerry. "Just see how it packs down! It couldn't be better. And where we have dug doesn't keep filling up with water. That is going to be the best house we've ever had."

Now and then they had to stop to rest. Such hard work was tiresome. Every day Longlegs the Heron dropped around to watch them. "Are you going to stay here?" he asked on his first visit.

"What do you think we are building a house for?" replied Jerry.

Longlegs made no reply, but speared a small Frog and when the latter had made his last journey down that long throat drew up one long leg, settled himself to stand comfortably on one foot, and watched the two builders. After that he came every day. He seemed to get a sort of satisfaction just from watching Jerry and Mrs. Jerry work. Perhaps you've noticed peole like that. There are many of them. They gather to look on wherever work is being done. The harder and more difficult the work the more they seem to enjoy watching other people do it.

It took many days to make that island. Of course they didn't work all the time. They rested and explored and looked for food and planned what they would do when the house was finished, but most of the time when they were not asleep they worked. So the island grew and at last it was above water. They sat on it to rest and they brought their food there to eat. Around the base of it was a wide and deep channel. So they had done two things at once, both important. They had made an island on which to build their house and they had deepened the water around it.

Now they gathered all the cattail plants they had cut and piled these on the island. They cut rushes and brought these. They cut long grass. They would take a bundle of this by the middle and with it dragging on each side of them would swim with it to the island, sometimes from a long distance. There it would be added to the growing pile. Some roots and other material were added but mostly they used rushes and the cattail plants. And so the pile grew until it was a low mound. The time had come to consider an entrance and exit. This was important, very important. It wouldn't do to have one above water. No indeed, that wouldn't do at all. The entrance must be from below. Then no one who was not a good swimmer and diver could possibly find it. It must be reached from under water. That meant a tunnel.

Daughters Of Army In Luncheon

Fifty Attend First Fall Meeting of Organization at Army and Navy Club; Mrs. Roberts Is Present.

The first fall meeting of the Daughters of the United States Army was a luncheon yesterday at the Army and Navy Club with more than 50 members attending. Among them were both local and national officers from the national headquarters of the organization, maintained here at 1831 Nineteenth street northwest.

Mrs. Charles Roberts, founder and honorary national president, was there as were Mrs. Seth Williams, national second vice president; Mrs. L. M. Grant, national treasurer; Mrs. James Bogman, national registrar, and Miss F. Elizabeth Wilcox, national secretary. Mrs. Paul Stanley Bond, national president, and Mrs. George Cocheu, national first vice president, were unable to be present. Mrs. Bogman, who recently returned here from Chicago, is former president of the local branch.

There was a discussion of the possibility of organizing a class in handicraft under the direction of Mrs. George Strong who, with her mother-in-law, Mrs. George B. Strong, wife of Gen. Strong, attended as a guest of Mrs. Grant. She has had wide experience in teaching handicraft and brought to the luncheon a display of her work, in which the women were much interested.

Mrs. John Herr, wife of Maj. Gen Herr, new chief of cavalry, was among those at the luncheon, the first meeting of the local branch she has attended. She is a member as the daughter of Gen. Eli Hoyle and her daughter, Miss Fannie Herr, who was with her, is one of those who has the distinction of being both an Army daughter and an Army granddaughter. Membership is open only to daughters and granddaughters of the Regular Army.

Mrs. Claud Dudley, president of the Washington branch, presided at the luncheon. Other local officers present were, Miss Virginia Coleman, Mrs. E. L. Florance, Mrs. John Donovan, Mrs. R. E. D. Hoyle, Mrs. Beale Bloomer and Miss Ann G. Hawkins.

Other members at the luncheon were: Mrs. Charles Western, Mrs. William Pence, Mrs. Joseph A. Gaston, Mrs. John K. Rice, Mrs. John E. Hunt, Mrs. Charles T. Harris, Mrs. Bessie Taylor Morrison, Mrs. John Herr, Miss Fannie Herr, Mrs. Harry T. Cavanaugh, Mrs. William D. Wrightson, Mrs. Roger P. Gabriel, Miss Verna Perry, Miss Jane Garber, Miss Ruby Miller, Miss Margaretta Hazzard, Mrs. Arthur Pence, Mrs. Floyd E. Galloway, Mrs. Bowman Stevens, jr., Miss Sarah Cushing, Mrs. Morris K. Barroll, Mrs. Wilhelm Freudenthal, Miss Myra Rivers, Mrs. Mary Logan Tucker, Mrs. Frederick A. Henney.

Alpha Phi Alumnae Meet At Chevy Chase

Mrs. John R. Fleming was hostess last night to the Washington Alumnae of Alpha Phi Fraternity, at her home, 216 Rosemary street, Chevy Chase, Md., for their first fall meeting.

The program was devoted to a report on the national convention of the fraternity, held last July in Pasadena, Calif., given by Miss Minna Gill, delegate from the local chapter.

Among the guests at the meeting were new members from Beta Xi chapter of American University. They included the Misses Isabelle Noble, Virginia Christie, Jane Brough, Mildred Paddock, Betty Reed, Pauline Schloesser and Josephine Brashears. The chapter at American was instituted last season.

Meeting Planned By Curley Club

The executive body of the Curley Club will meet at the home of Miss Elizabeth Davis, 109 Sixth street northeast, Thursday evening, at 8:30, with Roland J. Hyland, chairman, presiding.

The club will hold its first big event of the coming fall-winter season on September 22, in the Continental Hotel, an "open house," to which members may bring their friends interested in joining. James Corbett, chairman of membership committee, and Miss Gertrude Connor, chairman of the entertainment committee, are collaborating in arrangements for the party. There will be music for the dancing, as well as outstanding talent for entertainment.

Chevy Chase Gardeners Hear Howard Watkins

The Chevy Chase (D. C.) Garden Club met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Newman Little, 3701 Oliver street, with Howard Watkins, flower show judge, discussing the planting and care of peonies.

Mrs. Paul S. Anderson, president of the club, presided, and a tea followed the program. The Chevy Chase group meets the year around and 40 were present yesterday. The members brought specimens and flower arrangements from their fall gardens.

U. S. Workers Ask Five-Day Work Week

Government Unionits Demand Merit System Be Extended to Apply to Promotions.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—The American Federation of Government Employes in annual convention here today included in a tentative program of legislation for proposal to the next Congress demands for a five-day week, optional retirement after 30 years' service, and a court of appeals to hear employe grievances.

Also, they will seek automatic promotions and extra pay for night work. The appeals board, long sought by the employe organizations, would function in a manner similar to the National Labor Relations Board in private industry. The five-day week will be proposed for the entire Federal civil service.

Forty District Delegates.

As the convention opened today, approximately 250 delegates were in attendance, about 40 of these from Washington. They heard President Charles I. Stengle defend the organization's refusal to support the now-defeated reorganization bill on the grounds that the measure contained so many unwanted provisions that "we had no choice but to reject it."

The convention began with an address by Lawson A. Moyer, executive director and chief examiner of the Civil Service Commission, who, in discussing merit system legislation, said:

"One further step is sure to be taken, namely, that the President will renew his recommendation to Congress that those positions which by legislation were placed specifically outside the classified service, shall with certain necessary exemptions be brought by act of Congress into the classified service."

This second step, he said, is a logical and inevitable supplement to the Executive orders of June 24.

The A. F. G. E. was the one employe organization which opposed the reorganization bill.

Not All of Bill Bad

Stengel's views were contined in his annual message to the delegates. He said:

"The connection between the Executive orders and the defeat of the reorganization bill is a great deal more direct than might appear at first glance. We cannot deny, nor do we wish to do so, that there were a great many highly desirable features in the reorganization bill. We opposed it only because there were certain other features that we considered utterly detrimental to the service and to Government employes, and it was impossible to separate the good aspects of the bill from the bad. It had to be taken or rejected in toto, and we had no choice but to reject it."

"I do not believe it is feasible for the training program to include as adequately from schools and colleges to which the workers have courses which can be obtained just ready access," the civil service commissioner told the delegates. "In other words, I believe that the Government agencies should not compete with private institutions of learning."

The commission, he declared, is much interested in the emphasis placed on competitive promotions by the new civil service rules. He pointed out that little had been done toward competitive selection with the idea of promoting to higher grade positions those employes best qualified for advancement.

This has been experimented with in the Civil Service Commission and the results have been "found well worth while to the employes and to the organization," he said.

Under the June 24 rules, it is proposed that a system of competitive promotion be established in the departments and agencies, under direction of the Civil Service Commission.

"The commission will insist that in making promotions competitive, consideration be given to all persons who may be in line for promotion. This will give the rank and file of employes a greater opportunity for promotion on merit," Moyer asserted.

Gen. Frank T. Hines, administrator of veterans' affairs, told the convention by letter that the question of promotions in his administration was being studied.

"Consideration is presently being given to the extension of this program, and aside from this, to the development of an equitable promotion program which we may use as a guide as funds are available for this purpose," he stated. Gen. Hines recently recommended civil service status for approximately 12,000 employes in the veterans' hospitals and facilities, affecting a group previously and specifically exempt from status.

The proposal that A. F. G. E. vice presidents be elected on the basis of the civil service districts they represent—an old point of controversy—seemed capable of brewing a small storm. The move was defeated at the Philadelphia convention in 1937, but adherents of the plan see added support this year.

Charter President David R. Glass loomed as another subject for controversy when a move was seen to deprive him of voting power. Glass is associated with the national office in Washington.

Police Set to Guard 93,000 Pupils From Traffic Dangers

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Plans for an elaborate city-wide program to safeguard Washington's 93,000 school children returning to classes next Monday were outlined yesterday at a conference of school, police and traffic officials in the office of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent.

A detailed report by principals of the various high and elementary schools, covering 74 specific recommendations to combat child casualties, was submitted to the police and traffic heads with appeals for concerted action.

Police Pledge Best.

Maj. Brown pledged support of the proposed safety steps and said every available member of his command would be thrown behind efforts to protect youngsters on their way to and from schools.

The principals' report, result of a summer survey of conditions in the vicinity of school buildings, included requests for more rigid enforcement of speed laws on streets used by children; additional warning signs at school approaches, and uniformed policemen to instruct students in safety habits.

The Police Department agreed to assign one man in each precinct to visit daily classes and keep the subject of traffic safety constantly before teachers and pupils.

Richard Ham, safety director of the American Automobile Association, announced that 5,000 schoolboy patrolmen, trained in safety rudiments, are ready to swing into action when the school bell rings Monday morning.

School authorities, represented at the conference by Dr. Robert L. Haycock, first assistant superintendent of schools; Robert W. Eavers, chairman of the public school safety committee, and A. R. Savor, of the colored schools, stressed the importance of parking restrictions on streets near schools.

"One matter of considerable concern," the school officials reported, "is that of children stepping into the path of oncoming but unseen traffic. Parked cars should be kept as far as it seems necessary from the front of school buildings and school property."

The educators asked also that weather-beaten and illegible warning signs be replaced with new ones, or repaired, so that protection might be afforded school zones.

Individual school problems, as outlined in the principal's report, will be submitted to the various precinct commanders for study and action, said Maj. Brown.

"We are going to do all within our power to make this the safest school year on record," he told members of the school delegation.

Meanwhile yesterday, Brig. Gen. Albert Cox, chairman of the citizens advisory committee on traffic safety, sent to the Commissioners a final set of recommendations for "long-range" safety planning in the District.

Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen promised immediate steps would be taken to launch the program and indicated a meeting of city officials would soon be called to "start the ball rolling."

Company Signs Pledge

Another safe driving pledge was signed yesterday in The Washington Post-Junior Board of Commerce permanent accident prevention movement.

The Colonial Ice Cream Co., operating six light delivery trucks, enrolled under The Post-Junior Board safety banner, and Barge Hartz, president, agreed to display the new safety emblem on all its vehicles.

Hartz agreed also to send his drivers to sessions of The Post-Junior Board safety institute scheduled to open next month.

A progress report on institute plans will be made tonight at a committee meeting of Junior Board members. Applications for enrollment in the safety program are being received in Room 200 of The Post. An enrollment blank appears in today's paper.

Straight Wave Waved, Woman Wins $20 Claim

A "wave" that left her hair straight was ruled no wave at all when Mrs. Ethel P. Blesi, of 2817 Connecticut avenue northwest, yesterday obtained a $20 verdict from Judge Nathan Cayton in the small claims court.

Mrs. Blesi testified she had often "pushed up" her hair, a procedure recommended by the beauty parlor she patronized, but that her locks remained incorrigibly straight.

$25,000 Is Given To Fight Syphilis

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Plans for an expanded program of education in syphillis control and social hygiene, ultimately to reach $35,000,000 young men and women throughout the Nation, were announced today by Dr. William F. Snow, chairman of the administrative committee of the American Social Hygiene Association.

He said the program, made possible by an anonymous contribution of $25,000, would attempt also to provide biological information and guidance in preparing young men and women for more enduring marriage and family relations.

'Weasel' Strikes Again, Stocks Up on Pants

"The Weasel Has Struck Again!"

Thus leaving his trademark behind, scribbled on a piece of paper, "The Weasel" for a second time in two weeks ransacked a District store and escaped.

This time the thief entered the tailor shop of Louis Morrow at 247 Eleventh street northeast, via the front door transom, and left with three suits and six extra pairs of pants.

"The Weasel" made his first foray last week, raiding a dry goods store in the 200 block of Fifteenth street northeast.

CIO Sea Union Hits U. S. Hiring Units

Camden, N. J., Sept. 12 (AP).—Resolutions assailing the United States Maritime Commission's seamen's employment agencies, but praising the commission's ship construction program were adopted today at the conclusion of the three-day National convention of the Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America (C. I. O.)

The union re-elected John Green of Camden president; Benjamin Carwardine, San Francisco, vice president, and Philip H. van Gelder, Camden, secretary-treasurer. It named to its executive board George Borland, Hoboken, Thomas Gallagher, Richard Benson and Michael Smith, all of Camden; Ivar Parrish, San Pedro, Calif.; Frank Draminski, New London, Conn.; George Wright, Kearny, N. J., and C. Palmer, Quincy, Mass.

Communist to Speak

William Weinstone, member of the Communist Party's national committee, will discuss the "Great Battle for Democracy" at an open meeting at 8 p. m. Thursday in Unity Hall, 509 C street northwest.

Plow Ties Up Streetcars

Trouble shooters for the Capital Transit Co. labored for over a half an hour last night at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue to free a trolley plow wedged between the tracks. Streamlined street cars were tied up for almost a block and a half on Pennsylvania avenue.

SOMEDAY You too WILL USE... Flameless Cooking

Back in the stone age, prehistoric man prepared his food over open fires. Meats and fowl were often under-cooked . . sometimes burned to a crisp. The cave man, with primeval methods, could not control the amount of heat from flame.

Modern times demand improved methods. Electric Cooking . . . Flameless Cooking . . . gives you everything. Cleanliness, speed, economy, safety, and . . . a cool kitchen!

More than 15,000 homemakers in and near Washington are using Flameless Cooking. They tell us, "I bake perfect biscuits in ten minutes, starting from a cold oven"..."I used to think electric cooking would be slow, but I was agreeably surprised when I bought my Electric Range." For the ultimate in cooking perfection, use Flameless Electric Cooking. "Matchless Service" rates are notably low.

*X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1938 15

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Hyde Park, Sept. 13.

Since the President will reign from his old homestead here mostly the next five or six weeks, as his plans now stand, I set out on foot to explore the countryside for a "look-see." Traffic is so heavy on this road, and the shoulders of No. 9 so narrow, that a pedestrian is in some peril, or at least anxiety.

Welcome Lawrence . . . neighbor of FDR

* * * *

FDR's surroundings in Dutchess County are not like the glossy country estate region further south in Westchester, the homes of the millionaires. Here the estates wear their acres more informally, like farms, and Hyde Park is like a Western village, but calmer, yet not so starchy and austere as New England villages.

* * * *

There's a sort of roadhouse or beer tavern on the road about a mile from Mr. Roosevelt's place. The low stone walls border the highway for miles, beneath the tall old trees. Here and there is a rural mailbox, but some of the country people go to the little postoffice in slumbrous, wide-lawned Hyde Park, a shirtsleeve village.

"—no paths to the river"

In front of the Roosevelt wall someone has imbedded an old milestone in a sort of stone shrine. It says, "86 miles to New York," but now the road has been straightened and shortened to about 75 miles. It seems a thousand, so remote.

* * * *

So far as I could see, fishermen's rights, so long cherished by Anglo-Saxons, have been abandoned to the squires of the region. You can walk for miles, as I did, without seeing a sideroad or a path leading to the Hudson's banks—unless you trespass.

* * * *

Except for the whirling wheels on the paved highway, there's scarcely a more peaceful or rural scene to be found anywhere. Technically the President is a resident of Hyde Park, 2½ miles away, but actually his neighborhood is a suburb of Poughkeepsie, 4½ miles away, the metropolis of the county, with a population of 41,944.

* * * *

Most of his neighbors must be very prosperous, but I doubt that any of them are millionaires. They are a little bothered by the curious tourists who try to invade their driveways for a profile close-up of the President's house, which is scarcely visible from the road, a furlong away. Some of them have hung chains across their entrance gates with "no trespassing" signs.

* * * *

There's speculation about which of the four Roosevelt sons will eventually occupy the old mansion . . . Young Franklin, jr., is the likeliest guess, should he settle down to practice law in New York, or perhaps John, should he leave Boston for New York. Elliott seems to have taken root in Texas, and Jimmy is a citizen of Boston . . . When they were little they must have enjoyed the big Roosevelt barns and the river banks.

"—a peek is for trespassers"

In this bucolic atmosphere it's no wonder FDR relaxes. Here some of the White House pests find it difficult to reach him. His mood is more jovial, his humor less caustic. Once a journalist asked him if he planned to go to South America this fall, a writer who might have accompanied him. The President replied that he was sorry he wasn't going, because he knew many a girl in South America would miss the journalist's visit, heart-broken.

* * * *

Usually there's a guest or two every day. One day it was a great publisher, and perhaps for his entertainment FDR paid his respects to "the tory press," rolling the pet phrase over his tongue several times with relish. Occasionally there's a retort well veiled in fancy lingo.

* * * *

Downstream the Poughkeepsie Bridge is visible from the river side of the house. Each day the white-galleried day and night boats of the Albany line pass, two each way. Sometimes there's a shabby freighter, or a small, glistening yacht, where once the roly-poly caravels of Hendrik Hudson passed their pot-bellied way. In the still of midnight you can hear the fast trains roar up and down the shores. Occasionally an open car jammed with high school or college youngsters rolls past with a shout of "Hello, Prexy!"

Former Newsie Works At Old Spot for Day

Richmond, Va., Sept. 12 (AP).—A Richmond newsboy of 30 years ago, now part owner of four Bermuda department stores, will be back at his old stand selling papers tomorrow.

He is Myer M. Malloy, vacationing here and homesick for old friends and customers. He figures that the best way to contact them will be to sell papers.

The News Leader gave him permission to work at the same corner he used in 1908. Profits will go to the newsboys.

Civic Leaders Tell District Officials How They Want Tax Money Spent

D. C. Parochial Schools Await 10,000 Pupils

Enrollment This Morning; Increase Is Expected Over Last Year Total of 9,588.

Ten thousand Washington school children bade farewell to vacation yesterday as they prepared for opening of parochial schools at 9 o'clock this morning.

Dr. John I. Barrett, superintendent of education of the archdiocese of Baltimore, told The Post last night that he expected some increase over last year's figure of 9,588 boys and girls attending the 27 Catholic schools of the Dirtict. He said the exact number of children—who range in age from 6 to 14—was not yet available. Washington's Catholic high schools opened last week.

High School Instructions

Meanwhile, the District public school administration yesterday issued the following instructions for pupils who wish to enroll in a senior or junior high school September 19 and who last attended a private or parochial school in Washington or a public, private or parochial school outside the District:

Those desiring admission to seventh or eighth grade of junior high schools should apply directly to the principal of the school serving their residence area.

Ninth grade pupils may enter Central or Western High School, providing they live in the territory served by those schools; all others should apply to the principal of the junior high school serving the home residence. However, some pupils who live outside the Central High School area but have access to it may be permitted to go there.

Nonresident Rules

Tenth, eleventh and twelfth grade pupils should apply to the principal of the senior high school in the territory where they live, except that pupils in or above grade 11-A who have the necessary preparation and want an intensive business course should apply to the principal of Roosevelt High School and those desiring a major shop course should apply at McKinley High School. This rule applies also to white nonresident pupils of divisions 1-9 in or above grade 11-A.

Nonresident pupils from the Takoma-Silver Spring area may attend Central High; those from Virginia will go either to Central or Western High. Woodrow Wilson High School will accept pupils only from the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area.

New nonresident pupils living in Maryland who ordinarily would attend Taft Junior High, will be admitted to Langley Junior High; those who ordinarily would attend Anacostia Junior-Senior High will attend Eliot or Hine. Senior high school pupils will attend Eastern High.

Rep. Snyder Opens Army Post Tour

Chairman Snyder, of the House Military Appropriations sub-committee, yesterday began a tour of inspection of Army posts at Fort Knox, Ky., where he was guest of honor of Maj. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the Second Army, at a review of the mechanized Seventh Cavalry Brigade.

Other members of the party are John C. Pugh, assistant clerk of the House Appropriations Committee, and Maj. Arthur R. Wilson, general staff.

On the tour visits also will be made to Barksdale Field, La.; Scott Field, Ill.; Jefferson Barracks, Mo.; Chanute Field, Ill.; Fort Snelling, Minn., and Selfridge Field, Mich.

Burglar Not on Diet

A burglar apparently bent upon throwing a party in the grand manner got his supplies yesterday from a Sanitary Grocery Store at 2315 Eighteenth street northwest. Police were told that his loot included 18 pounds of cooked ham, 35 cartons of cigarettes, four boxes of chewing gum and a case of ginger ale.

District Heads Warned That Taxpayers' Revolt May Follow Increase in Real Estate Levy in the Next Fiscal Year

Clayton Challenges Board to Trim Departments' Budget Requests or Face Collection Strife.

A warning to prune proposed increased municipal expenditures to prevent an increase in real estate taxes was given to the District Commissioners yesterday.

Speaking at public hearings on the 1940 fiscal year budget for which department heads have requested $66,365,282, an increase of $16,601,230 over present appropriations, William McK. Clayton, veteran civic leader, rapped the table and said:

"If you men don't watch closely, expenditures will mount so that the real estate tax rate will go up to $2. Then we'll get open revolt among taxpayers. To be sure other methods of taxation will be considered, but it always has happened that higher appropriations mean higher real estate taxes.

Present Rate Too High

"The present $1.75 rate is too high. I hope you gentlemen can get the rate to $1.60 if you can't get it back to the former $1.50 rate. A rate of $1.60 is high enough."

Clayton said that the Brightwood Citizens Association, which he represented, asked for no new neighborhood improvements. The association deliberately refrained because it was on record for a budget of $45,000,000 or no larger than $47,000,000 for municipal expenses, he said.

Clayton was one of more than a score of spokesmen for civic organizations, most of whom urged upon the Commissioners necessity of improvements in their communities. Throughout the day-long hearing there was an audience scarcely more than half a dozen.

Playground Link Urged

Recommendation for legislation to put all recreational facilities and personnel in the District under one board, similar to the Board of Public Welfare, came from Samuel J. Flickinger, president of the Friendship Citizens Association.

The suggestion came upon questioning from Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen during a discussion of improvement of the Janney Playground. Flickinger said that inefficiency resulted from having the District Government, Federal Government and Board of Education responsible for play areas, as well as a co-ordinating committee without authority.

Flickinger also requested a $135,000 branch library be built at Wisconsin avenue and Albemarle street; an increase of school appropriation to allow for night school classes at Woodrow Wilson High School; completion of Reno Parkway, and opposed an increase over the present budget.

Libraries Seek Aid

Requests for keeping branch libraries open full time came from several sources. Mrs. James A. Hall, of the Woodridge Book Club, urged appropriation of $6,000 to keep the Woodridge branch open, full time. Mrs. James E. Underwood, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, urged more money for the Woodridge and Chevy Chase branches.

Requests for splitting of the Eleventh Police Precinct to provide more police protection to Northeast residents came also from several sources. W. A. Driggers, of the Northeast Conference of Citizens Associations, pointed out that the precinct covers 17½ square miles, nearly one-quarter of the District.

G. Arthur Fuller, vice president of the Kenilworth Citizens Association, appealed for a new precinct to be located on District-owned land at Forty-second street and Benning road. The area north of Pennsylvania avenue has been the victim of an increase in housebreakings and felonies, making more police and the new precinct desirable. The precinct stationhouse is located 6 miles from his territory, he said.

Anacostia Asks School

Adelbert W. Lee, president of the Randle Highlands Citizens Association, joined in the plea for more police in the precinct. Lee also requested an additional school in the Anacostia section to care for overcrowding of the junior-senior high school opened a few years ago.

Other improvements he asked for were a branch library in the area; additional fire fighting equipment to care for the rapidly growing community; prevention of landslides at Twenty-fifth street and Pennsylvania avenue southeast; service sewer in the 2300 block of S street southeast; a storm sewer in the vicinity of Twenty-seventh and R streets, and a traffic light at Pennsylvania and Minnesota avenues and Twenty-fifth street.

Declaring that a majority of pollution in the Anacostia River comes from Maryland communities, he asked District officials to obtain utmost possible co-operation from Maryland officials to prevent it.

Temperance Fund Urged

An appeal for a $350 appropriation to conduct an annual series of 110 lectures on effects of alcohol and narcotics on health was made by three officials of the Allied Organizations of the District. William V. Mahoney, executive secretary, asked that $5 for each lecture be made available so that 68,000 children in schools having auditoriums could be instructed on the evils.

The money was asked because volunteer speakers can no longer be secured. Upon questioning by Budget Officer Daniel J. Donovan, Mahoney admitted no overtures had been made to the District Medical Society to furnish speakers. Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, of the Federation of Women's Clubs, and the Rev. Thomas E. Boorde, Anacostia Baptist Church, also spoke.

John J. Hurley, president of the Michigan Park Citizens Association, said that so much had been done for his section in the past year that he was embarrassed to ask further improvements. He asked a traffic light at Twelfth street and Michigan avenue northeast and improvement in street lighting. Col. Harry Coope asked improvement of the Turkey Thicket Playground.

Playground Asked

Mrs. Belle Cutler Parker, secretary of the First Ward Citizens Association, declared the area west of the White House had been neglected as to play space for children, and urged "as one step for the prevention of crime and traffic safety" additional play space near the Grant School. She said that 1,700 children between the ages of 6 and 16 were without adequate playgrounds in the area.

Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, of the Washington Housing Association, urged appointment of additional building inspectors. Many homes are becoming menaces to health, she said. Unfortunately, she added, many of the houses now occupied by four or five families should be torn down, but they would have no place to move because of the housing shortage.

Improvements requested by the Congress Heights Citizens Association are extension of the Oxon Run sewer from Second and Wahler place to Thirteenth street southeast; construction of a storm sewer along Alabama avenue southeast from Nichols avenue to Fifteenth street, and paving of Nichols avenue from Fourth to Upshur streets. J. Louis Gelbman spoke.

Fort Davis Sewers Asked.

The need for service sewers in the Fort Davis area was presented by James F. Baxter and T. J. Lynch, of the citizens association. They declared that 72 property owners would do construction work totaling $400,000 if the sewers were put in.

A plea for consideration of colored per diem workers in the District service was presented by Edgar G. Brown, president of the United Government Employes, Inc.

He asked a $1,000,000 increase in the budget to increase wages of the per diem workers, and to give them a regular status on the annual pay roll with sick and annual leave. He specifically asked that 3,000 workers being paid $1,080 a year be given a $60 raise. Similar workers in the Federal Government earn $1,200 a year, he pointed out.

Martin Chancey, spokesman for the Communist party in the District, advocated a profits tax which would exempt only incomes of less than $5,000 a year; a $4,000,000 relief appropriation; a $3,400,000 appropriation for the Health Department; and an 8-hour day for firemen, with half the additional number to be hired to be colored.

Carruthers Appears

In the morning session, L. A. Carruthers, president, presented the recommendations of the Federation of Citizens Associations. He read a resolution adopted by the executive committee which said:

"We approve a budget the amount of which will approximate the anticipated income from the present aggregate taxation yield. Provided that in the adoption of the preceding motion, it is expressly understood that it carries no approval of any specific rates or form of taxation."

He said that because of population growth his organization recognized that there might be need for a slightly larger budget, but added that increased revenue from the same source should mean no increase in taxes.

He suggested the budget might be decreased because the PWA has already approved approximately $13,000,000 in construction projects for the District which are to begin no later than January 1 and continue through the 1940 fiscal year.

He explained his group felt free to act later on any proposed tax changes which might come from the survey of the District's tax structure now under way by the Congressional Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation.

Police Increase Urged

A. J. Driscoll, president of the Midcity Citizens Association, argued for the reopening of the Second Police Precinct at Fifth and N streets northwest. He also urged addition of numerous policemen to the force partly to bring about increased traffic safety. He approved heartily the $50,000 increase asked by the Community Center Department. This, he said, would make possible the operation of more playgrounds in the summer time and open 21 additional grounds.

Opposition to the diversion of gasoline tax funds to general funds was voiced by George E. Keneipp, of the Keystone Automobile Club, saying "the District finally is about to get its share of Federal road aid money for the reason that in the District there has been no diversion of funds."

He backed the request of Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, for more police, saying that strict enforcement of traffic regulations has been proved the only major available means of reducing the traffic toll.

Dupont Tunnel Recommended

Washington I. Cleveland, of the American Automobile Association, urged the Commissioners to seek funds for an automobile underpass at Dupont Circle and a grade separation structure at Fourteenth and Water streets, to reduce traffic congestion, and urged steps be taken to provide municipal parking areas. He also opposed diversion of the gasoline tax fund and urged more policemen for traffic regulation.

William A. Maio, chairman of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, presented a 16-point program, but urged slashing of the $66,000,000 budget requests.

He urged a new junior high school in Anacostia; extension of the Oxon Run sewer; paving and widening of Nichols southeast from the 3200 to 3700 blocks; paving of Minnesota avenue southeast and northeast from Pennsylvania avenue to Benning road; paving of Naylor road from S street to Good Hope road; widening of Independence avenue from Second street southeast to Fourth street southwest; extension of Virginia avenue from Eleventh street along Anacostia River to Benning road; continued development of park areas in the Southeast.

Highlights of D. C. Budget Hearing

Highlights of citizens' recommendations to the District Commissioners yesterday at public hearings on the $66,365,282, 1940 fiscal year budget requests were:

Keep expenditures down so that real estate taxes can be reduced to $1.60.

Keep expenditures within revenue expectations from existing tax sources.

Increase the number of policemen for strict enforcement of traffic regulations as the "only available means of reducing the traffic toll."

Provide additional or enlarged playgrounds open full time to keep children off the streets.

Provide additional police protection in central and Northeast sections, with establishment of new precinct or substation at Forty-second street and Benning road northeast.

Oppose diversion of gasoline tax money to general fund.

Provide new schools, particularly in Northeast and Southeast sections.

Provide numerous new sewers, traffic lights and street improvements.

Thyroid Extracts Avoid Knife for Maryland Goiter

Successful treatment of the type of goiter found in Maryland and along the Atlantic seacoast by conservative methods was outlined to the Third International Goiter Conference, opening at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday a three-day meeting.

Dr. William Francis Rienhoff jr., associate professor of surgery, Johns Hopkins University, said thyroid extracts had been very successful in reducing certain types of goiter, particularly the "colloid" type found in the Maryland area.

Eight years of experiments on dogs, guinea pigs and on 36 humans have proved the value of thyroid extracts, which he said, is a more conservative treatment than surgery.

Tri-Lingual Swindlers Get $500 for Fake Gems

An elaborate confidence game carried on in Polish, Russian and Yiddish yesterday deprived Mrs. Lena Aronowitz, of 802 Farragut street northwest, of $500 in return for 10 Russian "diamonds."

Mrs. Aronowitz told police she was stopped on Georgia avenue and Gallatin street northwest by a heavy middle-aged man who asked in Polish for assistance in locating an address. He was soon joined by a second man, representing himself as an attorney, who volunteered to translate into Russian or Yiddish, since Mrs. Aronowitz speaks very little Polish.

The older man, he explained, wanted to leave the country at once and had to dispose of valuable jewels at a fraction of their worth to buy his steamer ticket.

Mrs. Aronowitz told them she could draw out $500 in postal savings to buy half the gems, but first demanded a jeweler's appraisal.

At this point a third man stepped up, said he was a jeweler himself and examined the stones on the street, setting their value at several thousand dollars. The three men adjourned to a restaurant across the street from the postoffice at Georgia avenue and Concord avenue northwest, while Mrs. Aronowitz drew out her money.

The "attorney" told her, when she rejoined them, that he had already put up $500 for half the jewels, as proof of his confidence, and Mrs. Aronowitz then handed over her $500 for the other 10 stones. Then men scattered in different directions, she told police.

Civic Group Urges Rein on 1940 Budget

Manor Park Association Also Suggests New Crosstown Bus Line; Hillcrest Group for Gallinger Inquiry.

The Manor Park Citizens' Association, one of a half-dozen associations to hold their first meetings of the season last night, voted to urge the District Commissioners to keep the District budget for 1940 "reasonably" close to the 1939 figure.

At the same time, the association asked that the new Calvin Coolidge School, upon which bids will be opened today, be constructed with a cupola and pitched roof. Members also asked that the building be of the design submitted by the municipal architect and approved by the Board of Education.

Urge New Bus Route

In other resolutions, the Manor Park group went on record as favoring a larger appropriation for the Public Utilities Commission to provide for increased personnel; asked that a crosstown bus route be established to run from Michigan avenue northeast to Connecticut avenue northwest and urged that the National Capital Parks begin a program for improvement of Fort Slocum. A committee was appointed to confer with the Chillum Heights Association on rezoning an unimproved area along Blair road north of Sligo Mill road.

Committees to investigate working conditions at the District Jail and at Gallinger Hospital were appointed last night by Hillcrest Citizens Association, meeting at the Church of Christ, Twenty-eighth and Douglas streets northwest.

A special committee composed of George Absher, C. L. Scott, and R. C. Darnell was named to look into complaints that hours and conditions of employes at the District Jail are unsatisfactory. This committee was instructed to make a preliminary investigation and report to the executive committee, headed by Charles F. Foster, association president, September 29.

To Push Gallinger Quiz.

A separate inquiry into working conditions at Gallinger will be conducted by the executive committee, Ricker said. He said reports were that about 40 attendants at the hospital were working 70 to 77 hours per week. Foster will appear before the District Commissioners conducting budget hearings in the District building today at 10:30 a. m. to push the association's request for purchase of an elementary school site at Pennsylvania avenue and Alabama street northeast, Ricker said.

The West End Citizens' Association, after commending the Commissioners for their efforts to reduce traffic accidents, urged that no parking be permitted in the area west of North Capitol street, south of Florida avenue and east of Rock Creek between 1 a. m. and 6 p. m.

In another action the association asked that trees be replaced in the 700 and 800 blocks of Nineteenth street northwest, that a fence be constructed around the triangle at Twentieth street, Pennsylvania avenue and I streets northwest and that trees be planed both in that triangle and in a similar one at Eighteenth street, Pennsylvania avenue and H street northwest.

Officers Nominated

The Stanton Park Citizens' Association nominated Curtis Chadwick for president of their organization. Elections will be held at the October meeting.

Others nominated were William E. Monroe and Mrs. William M. Bartle, vice presidents; William J. Bartle, secretary; August H. Panzer, treasurer; Paul W. Moores, financial secretary, and Harry Stull and A. H. Gregory, delegates to the Federation of Citizens' Associations.

The organization adopted a resolution asking that the abandoned car tracks from Union Station to Eighth and F streets northeast be removed and the street resurfaced.

The Bladensburg Citizens' Association outlined a program for street and sewage improvements in its section of Northeast Washington. The program will be presented to District officials today. Six new members were admitted to the association. They were A. E. Harning, H. W. Keithley, Carl A. Lundberg, Marie C. Nold, D. Spahn, and George Enz.

Leper Stigma Hinders Cure, Expert Says

Biblical Association With Uncleanliness Hampers Scienitfic Development, Visitor Declares.

Scientists seeking to stamp out leprosy in various parts of the world are handicapped, as in the case of syphilis, by stigma attached to the disease.

MRS. WEAVER

Mrs. Eunice Weaver, Brazilian social specializing in work for lepers, declared yesterday

One of the big problems confronting leprologists, she declared, is to divest leprosy of the Biblical association of uncleanliness and give it the status of a disease.

"The public attitude toward the disease, growing out of the traditions in which it is rooted, cause many people to try to conceal the fact that they have it," she said. "As a result, they are in the advanced stages before medical treatment it obtained."

Mrs. Weaver, who, with Dr. Anderson Weaver, are guests at the home of W. G. Slappey, 4500 Chesapeake street, has visited all the principal leper colonies in the world and has talked with hundreds of lepers.

"I take no special precautions," she said, "except that I am careful not to touch anything.

"When you go into a colony, a leper who is in good condition and has not been deformed by the disease goes ahead of you and opens all doors. The lepers themselves take care to tell you not to touch a wall or anything, explaining that they have touched it.

"No one knows how the disease is transmitted. It is contagious, all right, but it is quite clear that it can be transmitted only by direct contact.

"A few brave experimenters have made injections into their own blood and have not developed the disease."

Dr. Weaver, who acted as an interpreter—Mrs. Weaver, a native Brazilian, does not speak English well—explained that the association of uncleanliness was bad because of the state of mind it incites in the victim.

"If the horror of disgrace could be wiped out," he said, "it would be a great help to the leper psychologically. He would not be so prone to commit suicide."

Mrs. Weaver was the only woman delegate at a recent congress of 500 persons engaged in work with lepers at Cairo, Egypt. The dominant sentiment at these meetings, she said, was that the state of mind of the leper was highly important in effecting a cure.

"The disease can be cured in a high percentage of the cases," she explained, "if taken in the early stages. Even in the advanced stages it can be arrested, although deformities cannot be removed or lost hands, feet or ears restored.

"Leprosy does not kill. It is, without doubt, the most dreadful disease in the world."

and the first day the ad appeared a Post reader called and bought the car. If you have anything to sell, you, too, can get quick results through Post ads. They're inexpensive . . . only 38 cents for a 2-line ad. Call

Skelton Tells All On Doughnut Act

'Red' Is Trying to Avoid Being Typed as a Dippy Dunker, Wants to Learn More About Acting Technique; Jimmy Lake Leaves a Gayety Bulletin.

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

SO MANY people have been asking this pro tem columnist such questions as, "How many doughnuts does he consume a day?" and "Doesn't he ever get indigestion?" that, purely in self defense, the aforementioned p. t. c. slipped backstage at Loew's Capitol yesterday and drew that Skelton out of the closet to get the answers.

"When I launched the act about two years ago," said Richard, the hole-hearted, making himself comfortable in his dressing room after another arduous performance, "I ate a dozen at each show. Then, however, the bit ran close to half an hour. Three doughnuts a show is the present quota.

"Not bad, not bad at all. One time, though, I got hold of some that contained too much soda or something and doggone if they didn't eat away the roof of my mouth."

Red is trying to get away from the routine, notwithstanding the fact that it has become associated with him as closely as Amos is with Andy, the silk topper with Ted Lewis. Reason is not only that he's getting tired of doughnut dunking—though his enthusiasm belies that attitude—but he thinks audiences are becoming a bit fed up with it, too.

Up to and including yesterday's first show he had committed the dunking ritual only three times since the current bill opened last Friday. He asks his audience whether it prefers the drinking, dunking or stair-climbing bits and the first named seems most popular on this visit.

The doughnut delirium had its origin in Montreal when Red was playing there in vaudeville, billed in small letters. He and Edna—more about the missus anon—were in a restaurant when Edna called Red's attention to a man attempting to negotiate the surreptitious type of dunk. From that germ of an idea they worked out the act that's been laying 'em in the aisles from Hollywood to Washington ever since.

He'd like to forget about his work in the Rogers-Fairbanks picture, "Having Wonderful Time." In it he spoke lines and had a real part but after the film came out of the cutting room there was Skelton doing nothing but a couple of specialty inserts. Even the memory of the $2,000 he got each week doesn't console him.

Red wants to be an actor, a full-fledged comedian, not a specialty artist all his life. And he hasn't soured on pictures. He is going to make a series of shorts for Warner Bros. and is confident that he'll learn much about screen technique.

Edna is a charming young woman without whom, one suspects, Skelton would not have advanced as far as he has. When her husband's on stage she can be found in the wings taking notes on audience responses to his gags. He was 17 and she 15 when they were married. Red is now 25 but it isn't nice to tell a lady's age. Mrs. Skelton is a graduate mortician from Kansas City but she hasn't—er—practiced her profession since her marriage. She is Red's severest critic and he, wise chap that he is, loves it.

Returning helter-skelton from the apitol, I found this note on the desk:

Good old Col. (Jimmy) Lake dropped in to see us and inform that the quietude of Ninth street has been caused by the suspension of hammers, steam drills and the creaking painting scaffolds which the colonel has kept busy throughout the summer. The colonel states that 10,000 real American dollars has been spent to make the "Old Gayety" live up to its reputation as the leading burlesk house of the U. S. A.

All new carpets and furnishings plus interior decorations and new soft lighting that will please the most skeptical. The colonel further states that the customers will see this coming season the cream of burlesk as the scouts of burlesk have combed the entire country during the summer months.

The colonel announces his opening this coming Sunday, the eighteenth, with a cast announcement later in the week.

To the Hardy, Jones and other film families that have gained a foothold is now added the Hedley family. "Shooting" on the first of the Hedley series begins this week, with Ralph Morgan heading the cast. All of which is a reminder that the male duo of another famous family is still doing very nicely, namely, the Barrymore boys. With John currently at the Capitol in "Hold That Co-ed!" and the Palace in "Marie Antoinette" and due soon at the Palace in "Spawn of the North," and Lionel cast as Martin Vanderhof in "You Can't Take It With You," coming to the Earle in a few weeks, well, one begins to think he can go down to the National and collect Ethel's autograph.

The Roadside

From a grimy bookstall in London's Charing Cross Road to a notable production in the Roadside Theater is the story behind W. T. Moncrieff's 100-year-old melodrama, "Eugene Aram," which opened its second and final week last night in the old Red Barn on Rockville pike.

Financial impresario Dick Creyke uncovered the play on a genuine "barnstorming" trip in the old country, discovered that it had been unplayed in this century, that Henry Irving himself played it in another acting version, and that it is based on a famed case in British criminal history.

It is not the coincidence of the same first name which makes Eugene Kressin an apt Eugene Aram. His thoughtful stance, his rolling delivery give many a moving moment. In the briefly seen but thoroughly heard part of the ailing Squire Courtland, Harry Westcott delivers just about the finest supporting work of the summer season. Howard Wierum, Larry Lawrence, Richard Walsh, Milton Freedman, Betty Gray, Leslie Crawford and Lois Alexander are among the supporting players.

Honors, too, for Henry C. Pearson's superb settings, in particular that ghoulish spot, the Devil's Crag at Parricide's Gibbet, and to that amazing quartet: Misses Applegate and Gray, and Beethoven and Wagner for their genuinely fine score.

The waits of the opening night have been speeded up with the cars streaking down the cowpath by 11:10. As for this reviewer he could listen to Miss Margaret Osterwald's entr'act singing of "And Her Golden Hair Was Hanging Down Her Back" until the rightful strollers of said cowpaths come home. R. L. C.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

DAVID FREEDMAN, the script writer, died on the night before he was to sign a Hollywood contract . . . His 18-year-old son, Ben, was graduated from Columbia in June and was rated the best mathematics student ever produced by that institution. While still an undergrad, Ben wrote a book on mathematics, in association with Prof. Ginsberg of Teachers College . . . The youngster then secured a job with one of America's foremost actuaries. He resigned yesterday, and now is en route to Hollywood . . . Ben, who never before had written a radio script, heard that Al Jolson wanted a new writer. He had submitted his script and, against a field of veterans, won the job.

JUDGE WILLIAM BLEAKLEY, who was the Republican candidate for Governor in '36, dined at Leone's yesterday . . . "No, I won't be a candidate again," he stated . . . Bleakley then tried to phone his wife, but the line was busy . . . "Y'know," he sighed, "that wife of mine is just like Gov. Lehman—dynamite. They're both dynamite. Only Lehman is silent dynamite."

THIS WEEK eight models will file complaint against a man associated with a major theatrical chain. Two of the girls will charge assault . . . The defense in the Hines case has amassed evidence showing that Magistrate Capshaw's percentage of dismissals in policy cases was less than that of any of the other magistrates . . . Armand Denis, producer of "Dark Rapture," has offered to present his 5-year-old African elephant to the Brooklyn Zoo, to replace the slain Hilda . . . Sophie Tucker, who first was signed and then released from Vinton Freedley's new musical, was rehired yesterday.

THE BEST PUBLICITY stunt in Moviedom this year was in connection with the movie "You Can't Take It With You," which was shown to the jurors in the Hines case . . . When the arrangements were being made, the civic officials demanded complete secrecy—and the Columbia Film executives, at whose offices the picture was to be exhibited, agreed . . . It would have remained a secret except that the officials who demanded secrecy brought the jurors uptown—in a huge bus, riding up Broadway with a screaming motorcycle escort of four armed cops.

ESME O'BRIEN, the debutante, will follow the suit of her blue-blooded colleagues who have been joining the ranks of entertainers. Esme will sing at a hotel supper room next month . . . The Italian government is pondering the recall of another of its diplomats here—one of the most important and popular men in the service. He's non-Aryan . . . Deal's Hollywood Golf Club will go carnival tonight, for a World's Fair costume preview. Charles Barber's band and Lucille Linwood will entertain the customers . . . The dancing Hartmanns were signed yesterday, to be featured in the new Webb-Holman-Velez show, "You Never Know."

LAST WEEK Ben Bernie was signed to broadcast for the Amer. Tobacco Co., sponsoring Half-and-Half tobacco . . . To celebrate this new enterprise, Bernie advertised the event in Variety. The ad, announcing that he had been signed to promote the sale of pipe tobacco, included a picture of Bernie, but in his customary pose—smoking a cigar . . . George Washington Hill, head of Amer. Tobacco Co., saw the ad. Hill immediately registered complaint—by sending to Bernie, via special messenger, six cans of tobacco and six pipes.

THE CAPITOL now is featuring "Boys' Town," one of the year's best pictures. Horace McMahon, the movie tough guy, was summoned to the studio while the picture was being cast and was told to stand against the wall, for inspection by Director Norman Taurog. Taurog shook his hand and said: "I know your work. You're very good. But you're too old for the part" . . . The next day McMahon again was summoned to the studio, again was placed against the wall and again Taurog shook his hand, repeating, "I know your work. You're very good. But you're too old for the part" . . . Woody Van Dyke, the director, had observed all these proceedings. He turned to the puzzled McMahon and to Taurog and asked: "Boys—what time's the matinee tomorrow?"

JOHN KENNEDY, son of Ambassador Kennedy, just returned on the Bremen, after visiting his parents in London . . . John enjoyed himself there and had a better time than did his older brother—who has joined the embassy staff . . . "John goes to the 400 Club," the brother lamented, "so why can't I?" . . . "Because," the Ambassador explained, "John hasn't an official job—and you have."

Cross Roads

If "The Old Soak" keeps on packing them in, it's going to be the "Tobacco Road" of the countryside theater in these parts. Now going into its third week, it continues to draw big and happy houses.

The bull's-eye hit made by the show seems to be based on three factors, a play combining homely and sophisticated humor, a supporting cast offering acting comparable to the professional, and Arch McDonald's conception of "The Old Soak" himself. Believe us, Mr. McDonald is concealing half of his talents under the bushel of the microphone. When television really comes in, Arch McDonald's gift for amiable comedy should place him atop of the heap.

The play is as American as corned beef and cabbage. "Paw" is always in the doghouse, either for something he's actually done or for something that never entered his head. There's a bootlegger of prohibition vintage, the hired girl takes a drop too much, even the parrot gets crocked. No wonder "Maw" is in a state of perpetual annoyance. But it's all great audience fun. And the audiences are right on hand and making the show the big success of the summer theater hereabouts.

Even Cobras Are Made Up In 'Gunga Din'

But They Are Only Harmless Gopher Snakes and Lash Welts Are Made of Liquid Chocolate.

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Some of the most dastardly villains ever to apply the lash to a hero's back today dragged the Messrs. Cary Grant, Vic McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., into a Hindu torture chamber and after appropriate punishment, tossed them to the writhing cobras in the snake pit.

The picture was R-K-O's "Gunga Din," and the set was so realistic it made our hair curl to watch the horrid goings-on. The day's action started when those doughty sergeants of the British army, McLaglen and Fairbanks, discovered their crony, Grant, tied to the wall in the torture room, while East Indian thugs applied the lash.

After each application of the whip, the make-up man streaked liquid chocolate—like the corner drug store uses in sundaes—on Grant's bare and throbbing back.

McLaglen and Fairbanks tried to rescue him, but they too fell into the hands of the villains, who, fighting desperately, inched them toward the snake pit and finally pushed them in.

At the bottom of this damp and slimy hole wriggled half a dozen vicious cobras. Boy! The man explained the methods of operation in the nick of time; we'd nearly passed out in sympathy for the victims of the thugs.

The deep stone pit, from which green slime oozed, was made of papier mache. The slime was glue which had been allowed to drip before hardening, and then painted a shiny green.

"But how about the cobras?" we insisted.

They turned out to be real rentiles, all right, but they were only gopher snakes, made up to look like cobras. This make-up consisted of rubber bumps on their heads.

All we can say is "whew," report that the victims escaped with their lives, and add—for the assurance of prospective audiences — that the snake pit scene will be only one quick flash in a magnificent and moving pictorial rendition of Rudyard Kipling's poem.

Some notes on some movies which won't need any $50,000 prizes to draw cash customers: The mad Marx brothers, about to appear on the screen for the first time in a year, are funny in "Room Service," funnier than they were in "A Day at the Races," and almost as funny as they were in "Horse Feathers." They play straight parts in the movie version of the stage hit. That gives Harpo no chance to plunk a harp; Chico no opportunity to tickle a piano. You'll miss those interludes, but the fact remains that the Marxes are the top comics now functioning in Hollywood.

"Hold That Co-Ed:" This too is an exceptionally funny picture about a rip-roaring Governor, who Twentieth Century-Fox insists bears no resemblance whatever to the late Huey Long. John Barrymore is the Governor. His wife, Elaine, played a part in the filming of the show, but at the preview, there wasn't even a glimpse of her. She sat in the audience with her husband, though, and managed not to look disappointed.

"Too Hot to Handle:" This is the action-packed movie which M-G-M has been working on for months, with Clark Gable as the intrepid adventurer who plunges gayly from one wild-eyed adventure to another, all over the world. The studio even built the city of Shanghai on its back lot—and then wrecked the whole works with Japanese bombs—made in America. Take particular note of the sequence where Gable falls flat on his face in a puddle of mud. We watched him fall—and later watched the nurse try to clean the mud out of his eyes. He had forgotten to close 'em when he hit.

About to be previewed is Warner Brothers' color epic, "Valley of the Giants." This is a drama of the mighty forests where the trees are so big the owners chop holes in 'em so tourists can drive their cars through. We don't know much about this picture, but we are the proud possessor of a chunk of wood from a Warner Brothers redwood tree. The brothers sent it to us for a souvenir. We're going to put it in the same drawer with our package of moonflower seed. They sent that to us, too, so we'd have something to recall their picture, "Garden of the Moon."

We also have an arrow they gave us in connection with their film, "Robin Hood" and we have a gadget that barks which they sent to commemorate a picture wherein Errol Flynn bit a dog. All this is leading up to the fact that not many months ago they made a picture called "Gold Is Where You Find It."

We waited home all afternoon in anticipation of our souvenir of that, but our vigil was in vain. The brothers sent no gold, not even a divining rod.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 12.—The latest news from Jesse James' home town, Pineville, Mo., is that the townsfolk are taking up a subscription to buy the sets so they won't be wrecked. The company was only too willing to leave them there without pay. But the townsfolk wouldn't accept, saying, "We're so grateful to you for putting our city back on the map."

So Twentieth HEDDA HOPPER Century-Fox, not to be outdone, is equipping their little theater for sound, and Tyrone Power will probably go back for the opening of "Jesse James." Scores of residents gave up their houses and are living in tents to make the actors comfortable. Shades of Jesse James!

Cesar Romero certainly gets around. Spent two whole days with Joan Crawford on the set of "Shining Hours," and he wasn't teaching her a new dance routine, either.

• • • •

In spite of planning vacations with five different men, Clark Gable is loath to tear himself away from Hollywood these days. We don't have to wonder why.

• • • •

Jeanette MacDonald's fan clubs are on the march again and have sent M.-G.-M. a petition signed with the thousands of names demanding she and Gene Raymond be starred together. I'd like to see that, too.

Joe E. Brown is back in the hospital for another slight operation, to be ready for that new air show. But this time the maternity ward didn't get him. The birth rate is picking up in Hollywood.

Abner, partner of Lum, is boasting of that gold button from the Tuna Club for that 201-pound swordfish he caught. Andy Devine's only weighed 175, so he switched partners and has gone off with Bing Crosby to see if he can't better his record. Jack Benny caught three fish in three days. Used every kind of bait he could find—that is, everything but Hedy LaMarr. She was busy.

During added scenes in "If I Were King," with 200 extras in armor, Director Frank Llyod shouted "cut" when one of the boys started beating his chest with his fist. They ran over to him thinking he'd been overcome with the heat. He yelled "Get this thing off me!" He had a sand flea under it.

Studio officials wondered why so many noses had been injured during the making of that picture. Discovered the visors had a habit of falling down on them without warning.

When Jack Benny said "no likee" about "Never Say Die," Bob Hope said: "That's for me," and he'll make it.

George Cukor says actors would rather get a laugh and starve to death than play a scene dramatically and be well fed.

Every time Alma Lloyd, Frank's daughter, does a good deed, her father buys her five new pearls. She'll soon have a string reaching to the knees.

Chico Marx has telephonitis. Never dines without one at his elbow, which he uses between bites, and has a phone in every room. Maybe he's the reason they call them the mad Marx Brothers. "Room Service" got plenty of laughs. But I still think their material must be written specially for them. Donald McBride came darned near stealing the show. He was grand, even though he had to say: "Jumping butterballs" instead of the oath he used in the play.

The quintuplets have their furrier right here in Hollywood. Schwartz made them their first fur coats. Each year he makes new ones for them. This season they're two sizes bigger than last. Give them a few years and they'll be out in their backyard trapping 'em.

That wasn't a reception they gave Morton Downey at the Cocoanut Grove the other night, but an ovation. He was terrific. As good as when I heard him first in London ten years ago. I brought back some of his records and nearly wore them out on the boat . . . everybody wanted to hear them.

Archibald Beats Dupre; Will Claim Crown

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Among the army of unemployed now is Frankie Frisch, in case you hadn't heard. His job as manager of the Cardinals was snatched from him, ironically, on the very day that it began to loom as much more pleasant. On that day that Paul Dean came back from the minors, joined up with the Cardinals and beat the league-leading Pirates with his refurbished fast-ball, striking out seven, Frisch was fired.

POVICH.

All season, Frisch had been operating with a pitching staff comprised of Lon Warneke, an infield comprised of Johnny Mize and an outfield comprised of Ducky Medwick. The various other position on the Cardinal Club were tenanted by men in uniform. The Cardinals were running sixth, a deep breath away from seventh, and Frisch had reason to be uneasy.

He had reason to be uneasy because the Cardinals' front office had been inured to four consecutive years of first-division ball clubs and a second-division club was hard to take. The Cardinal owners had fired pennant-winning managers when the whim struck them. As a manager of a sixth-place club, Frisch probably was not unaware of his managerial fate.

The Cardinals, in fact, have been famous for firing their managers. Since 1924 six different men have been given the job and none of them quit. All were fired. Rogers Hornsby's reward after winning the pennant for the Cardinals in 1926 was his discharge. Bill McKechnie led the Cardinals to the championship in 1928 and was fired in mid-season of 1929. Gabby Street won pennants in 1930 and 1931 and was given the heave-ho in 1932.

Frankie Was Kidding

Frisch, at one point this season, answered rumors that he would be fired by saying, "My job is safe. The Cardinals only fire pennant-winning managers!" But he was kidding. He knew that the Cardinal front office, having tasted often of the financial sweets of successful pennant races, would not bear with a second division club.

There never was any thought of course that the Cardinals would fire their ball team and retain their manager. That might have been a good idea, but it is never done in the big leagues. In Frisch's case, however, he might have been given more consideration. Let's look at the facts.

In his first year as manager of the Cardinals, Frisch brought the club a pennant and led it to a world series victory over the Tigers. That was 1934. In 1935 he finished second with the Cardinals, in 1936 he tied for for second and last year he finished fourth. Not a bad record; in fact a very good one. Of Frisch's managerial talents there can be little doubt.

What has happened to the Cardinals has not been anything attributable to managerial skill. It has been the breakdown of the Cardinals' organization. The Cardinals' farm system which used to send up so many acceptable ball players has bogged down badly. Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon over-reached themselves in extending their farm system. Too many of their minor league clubs lost money and represented a terrific drain on the pappy club.

Even Owens Flopped!

And the Cardinals were unable to bear the strain. They lost a superb catcher when Bill DeLancey took ill and they were hard hit when sore arms removed "Me 'n Paul" Dean from the win columns. Pepper Martin simply grew too old, and Frisch, a bulwark at second base for years, finally had to hang up his spikes. Mickey Owen, the $100,000 catcher from the minors, didn't pan out at all.

To meet the terrific expense of their minor league farms, the Cardinals had to sell Dizzy Dean and trade away Leo Durocher for the cash he would bring, in addition to players. The drain on the club's treasury made it impossible to go into the market for proven players despite the $185,000 check received in the Dean deal, and the Cardinals continued to function as a second division club. When they gave up Dizzy Dean, the Cardinals may have parted with only a sore-arm pitcher, but at least he was a gate attraction and, in the absence of a first-division club, the Cardinals needed a gate attraction no less than Hitler needs his Brownshirts.

But the Cardinals' front office, with that peculiar logic known to swivel-chair baseball men, has decided to remedy the situation by firing the manager. The thought probably didn't occur to them to fire the ball team, as we were saying, and keep the manager. It might have been more effective.

Won't Be Idle Long

That Frisch will be jobless for long is hardly probable. There are two many clubs in the big leagues which could use pennant winning managers. Of Frisch's talents there never was much doubt. Back in the 1920's, when the late John McGraw entertained ideas of retiring, he had tabbed Frisch as his successor. McGraw had brought the Fordham Flash out of college, saw him make good instantly as a big leaguer, and was grooming him for bigger things. Suddenly, however, McGraw cooled toward Frisch, and traded him to the Cardinals in 1927.

But it is not too far-fetched to believe that some day, perhaps soon, Frisch will get the job as the Giants' manager. Bill Terry has indicated frequently that he will be happier when he steps out of the Giants' managerial role. Terry and Frisch are long-time friends and old teammates.

Terry would not be stepping down. As vice president and general manager of the Giants he would simply be stepping out of the manager's job to apply himself to what he believes more important administrative duties. Terry can retire with three pennants and three first-division clubs to show for his six years as manager of the Giants. It is one of the finest managerial records in all baseball history.

High in the confidence of Horace Stoneham, Terry has little to gain by continuing as manager of the Giants. He has proved himself in that post and would merely be exposing himself to a loss of prestige if he failed to maintain his remarkable managerial record. He likes the kind of job Eddie Collins has as the general manager of the Red Sox. General managers are rarely fired, especially when general managers are in strong with the boss, like Terry is.

Cards to Cut Farm System in Half

St. Louis, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Globe-Democrat says that in the wake of Frankie Frisch's release as manager of the Cardinals comes the word that the Cards' vast farm system will be cut almost in half this winter.

The report is that Sam Breadon, president, and Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager, have "decided they do not need so far-flung a chain of minor links and will take steps to eliminate a dozen farms before another season."

Hank Leads Babe's 1927 Homer Pace

Tiger Slugger Is Now Four Games Ahead of Bambino's Record With 20 More to Go This Season.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 12.—The Tiger's one-two punch, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, accounted for another victory today as the Tigers edged out the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 3, in the major league's only game.

GREENBERG.

Greenberg drew closer to Babe Ruth's home run record of 60 by slamming No. 50 into the upper deck of the left field stands in the third with the sacks empty. York batted home the winning run when he doubled to center in the sixth to score Greenberg.

The homer put Hank four games ahead of the Babe's standard in games played. In his gala year of 1927 Ruth hit No. 50 in his 138th game on September 11. Greenberg played his 134th game today, and with 20 games remaining must hit better than one homer every two games to better the mark.

The siege guns' hits counted, for Pitchers Jack Knott and John Whitehead limited the Tigers to seven hits, while young Al Benton, of Detroit, was allowing nine. Joe Kuhel drove in two Chicago runs in the third when he rapped a homer with a man on base.

The Sox flared briefly in the ninth when, with two out, Meyer tripled but Christman threw out Mike Kreevich, a pinch hitter, to end the game.

Cobb Fails Again In Speed Attempt

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 12 (AP).—Hampered by a slushy track, John R. Cobb, of England, failed today by a narrow margin to shatter the world's land speed record of 345.49 miles per hour.

Cobb's shark-shaped automobile, "Railton," averaged 342.53 miles per hour for two runs.

Acutely disappointed, Cobb said he would make minor mechanical repairs on his 7,000-pound, 24-cylindered car and try again "perhaps by the week-end," for the record held by his fellow Briton, Capt. George E. T. Eyston. Cobb's first attempt, August 30, also failed.

Feather Title Vacated by Armstrong

Henry Armstrong abdicated his featherweight throne early last night, almost as Tony Dupre and Joey Archibald climbed through the ropes at Griffith Stadium for a 10-round bout to determine the No. 1 challenger for the title.

ARMSTRONG.

The Dusky Dynamo's action came as no surprise. It had been predicted months ago, after he slugged Barney Ross from beneath his welterweight crown, by this writer as well as others. When he challenged Lou Ambers for the lightweight crown it was apparent that he had no thought of ever defending the 126-pound diadem.

Portly Eddie Meade, the colored boy's manager, hinted that Armstrong intended to cling to the throne only until he had won three championships—a feat never before accomplished in the ring. And after Henry successfully performed that Herculean task, Meade bluntly stated that his fighter would relinquish the featherweight crown unless a sizable sum was offered him to defend it.

Armstrong had difficulty making the weight for his bout with Petey Sarron, in which he won the featherweight belt—despite reports to the contrary, and later found his best weight to be approximately 133 pounds. It was this problem

Miss Meckley Wins Medal In Tourney

Indian Spring Golfer Shoots a Brilliant 83 Over Water-Logged Manor Country Club Course.

For the second straight year, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, yesterday captured medal honors in The Washington Post women's golf tournament, shooting a brilliant 83 over the water-logged Manor Country Club course. She added an incoming 42 to a 41 on the first nine to lead the field by two strokes.

MRS. WALPER.

Bunched at 85 were three players—Mrs. Howard Simons, of the home club; Mrs. Jack Scott, unattached, and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Capitol Country Club. An 87 was turned in by Mrs. George Hussey, of Army and Navy, and the rest of the field was strung out at 90 and above.

Considering that there were five players with gross totals under 90 this year, and only two under that aggregate last year, when an 87 won the medal for Mrs. Meckley, the tournament promises a brand of golf as good as this section has seen.

Heavy water on the greens proved a distinct handicap to players, Mrs. Meckley and others three-putting time after time. The holder of almost every local ladies' golf crown at one time or another was only able to crack regulation figures on one hole, the eleventh, when her tee shot hit the green and she laid down a 20-footer for a deuce. The rest of the time Mrs. Meckley was

Miss Jacobs Is Defeated

Gil Hunt, D. C. Ace, Defeats Bobby Riggs

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The most stunning double-barreled upset in the history of the national singles tennis championships occurred today when Helen Jacobs, America's top-seeded woman star, and Bobby Riggs, the Nation's second-ranking men's player, were eliminated from the tournament.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The most stunning double-barreled upset in the history of the national singles tennis championships occurred today when Helen Jacobs, America's top-seeded woman star, and Bobby Riggs, the Nation's second-ranking men's player, were eliminated from the tournament.

Miss Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., favorite to recapture her fifth singles crown, was surprisingly beaten by Margot Lumb, a brown-haired girl from England who is seeded only sixth among the foreign women in the tournament. Miss Lumb won in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2.

This upset came after the elimination of Riggs, of Chicago, who is ranked and seeded right under Donald Budge, the defending champion. Riggs was beaten in five sets by Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., of Washington, D. C., ranked nineteenth and winner of only two minor tournaments this year. Hunt, a stoop-shouldered mathematics student at George Washington University, eliminated Riggs, 6—2, 0—6, 9—7, 0—6, 6—4.

Performance Brilliant.

Miss Jacobs' defeat occurred in the women's third round, and the Riggs catastrophe came in the men's fourth round.

From start to finish the amazing speed of her forehand, her magnificent volleying and smashing service virtually routed the Californian who had been in top-flight tennis for 14 years.

Miss Lumb never allowed "Husky Helen" to get set for a shot. She pressed Helen continuously and attacked with such severity that Miss Jacobs' methodical, crafty game melted.

Jacobs Like a Novice

The English girl was so superior in the second set that she might have been playing a novice. She broke Helen's service every time by racing in close and smashing the ball for placements. Helen, beaten back on her heels from the start, never had a chance to attack. She couldn't get away from the baseline.

Miss Lumb's victory advanced her into the fourth round where Wednesday she will meet Nancye Wynne, of Australia.

Meanwhile, Gil Hunt had triumphed over the highly-touted Bobby Riggs by using virtually the same tactics. Riggs, like Jacobs, had been a 10-1 favorite when he took the court. He was fresh from Davis Cup play and a season of brilliant victories.

But the frail Washington mathematician constantly out-maneuvered and pressed the husky Chicago "play boy." Again and again he stormed the net to overwhelm Riggs, who is essentially a crafty, defensive player and who has virtually no net game of his own.

At other times he broke Bobby's

'Big Train' Wins In the Primary For Commissioner

JOHNSON.

It was the "Big Train's first venture into politics.

Johnson piled up a 1,718 to 95 lead over his opponent, James M. Mount, of Gaithersburg, in returns from the first 20 precincts reporting out of a total of 35. In one precinct he polled 104 votes to 1 for Mount, and in another, 100 to 1.

Mount conceded his defeat in the early part of the evening, saying, "I am ready to take off my hat and work night and day for Walter's election next November."

Johnson, who runs a dairy farm near Gaithersburg, has been active in organizing boys' clubs and athletic teams in the community. This was a large factor, his supporters said, in the popularity which he showed today at the polls.

Joey Given Unanimous Ring Verdict

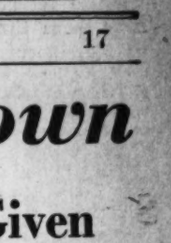
By Lewis F. Atchison.

Joey Archibald staked a convincing claim to the world featherweight championship at Griffith Stadium last night when he pawed and punched his way to a unanimous 10-round decision over Tony Dupre.

A disappointingly small audience of 3,500 fans saw the sleek and smiling Providence kid outgeneral the blond Italian from the first bell to the last. The issue was in doubt, however, until they swung into the latter stages of the bout, when Archibald opened up and chased his opponent from corner to corner in a futile attempt to land a knockout punch.



ARCHIBALD.

Archibald's victory came only a few hours after Sepia Henry Armstrong announced in Los Angeles that he had vacated the title, and Al Weill, Joey's pilot, announced after the verdict was rendered that he is filing a claim with the New York State Boxing Commission for the championship.

Dupre took the play away from Archibald, a 7-5 favorite, in the earlier rounds, moving in cautiously and scoring with a short left hook to to the body. But he varied his style enough to keep Joey at a a safe distance, and the eventual winner appeared a little puzzled by these tactics. Dupre came in one minute then stood off and waited for Archibald to make a move. And when Joey did leap in Dupre usually tied him up in a clinch, or ducked out of the danger zone.

Archibald Penalized

Archibald was penalized two points for heeling and hitting on the break in the first round and drew another warning from Referee Ray Bowen for hitting low in the fourth. During the minute's rest between rounds Weill walked over to the referee to protest the strict manner in which he called the blows, and Bowen waved him back to the corner, threatening to disqualify his fighter.

On the official score sheet, Dupre was given the first two rounds, the third and fourth were called even, and Archibald won the remainder. On The Post's score sheet, the first fourth and tenth were even, and Archibald won the rest.

Dupre was distinctly out of it after the fourth and seemed to realize that fact. He clinched and held continually and the effective blows he landed could almost be counted on your thumbs. Both fighters were entirely too cautious for the fans, who clamored for action with throaty bellows after the fifth round. Archibald tried to make a fight of it, but happened to be in with the wrong man.

Start Is Slow

They were off to a slow start, moving around gingerly, pawing half heartedly at one another, and peering vainly for an opening. Dupre stabbed Joey with two light lefts before Archibald chased him across the ring, literally running after him, and peppering him with lefts and rights on the chin. Near the end of the session, Archibald caught Dupre in a corner, and tried to blast him at the midsection, but Tony tied him up. Joey wrestled him to the canvas, trying to break away.

They spent most of the second round in statuesque poses, waiting in cat-like postures for the other to move. Archibald's best shots were rights to the head and body—one each, while Dupre's efforts consisted

By Gerald G. Gross,
Substituting for Nelson B. Bell.

SO MANY people have been asking this pro tem columnist such questions as, "How many doughnuts does he consume a day?" and "Doesn't he ever get indigestion?" that, purely in self defense, the aforementioned p. t. c. slipped backstage at Loew's Capitol yesterday and drew that Skelton out of the closet to get the answers.

"When I launched the act about two years ago," said Richard, the hole-hearted, making himself comfortable in his dressing room after another arduous performance, "I ate a dozen at each show. Then, however, the bit ran close to half an hour. Three doughnuts a show is the present quota.

"Not bad, not bad at all. One time, though, I got hold of some that contained too much soda or something and doggone if they didn't eat away the roof of my mouth."

Red is trying to get away from the routine, notwithstanding the fact that it has become associated with him as closely as Amos is with Andy, the silk topper with Ted Lewis. Reason is not only that he's getting tired of doughnut dunking—though his enthusiasm belies that attitude—but he thinks audiences are becoming a bit fed up with it, too.

Up to and including yesterday's first show he had committed the dunking ritual only three times since the current bill opened last Friday. He asks his audience whether it prefers the drinking, dunking or stair-climbing bits and the first named seems most popular on this visit.

The doughnut delirium had its origin in Montreal when Red was playing there in vaudeville, billed in small letters. He and Edna—more about the missus anon—were in a restaurant when Edna called Red's attention to a man attempting to negotiate the surreptitious type of dunk. From that germ of an idea they worked out the act that's been laying 'em in the aisles from Hollywood to Washington ever since.

He'd like to forget about his work in the Rogers-Fairbanks picture, "Having Wonderful Time." In it he spoke lines and had a real part but after the film came out of the cutting room there was Skelton doing nothing but a couple of specialty inserts. Even the memory of the $2,000 he got each week doesn't console him.

Red wants to be an actor, a full-fledged comedian, not a specialty artist all his life. And he hasn't soured on pictures. He is going to make a series of shorts for Warner Bros. and is confident that he'll learn much about screen technique.

• • • •

Edna is a charming young woman without whom, one suspects, Skelton would not have advanced as far as he has. When her husband's on stage she can be found in the wings taking notes on audience responses to his gags. He was 17 and she 15 when they were married. Red is now 25 but it isn't nice to tell a lady's age. Mrs. Skelton is a graduate mortician from Kansas City but she hasn't—er—practiced her profession since her marriage. She is Red's severest critic and he, wise chap that he is, loves it.

Returning helter-skelton from the apitol, I found this note on the desk:

Good old Col. (Jimmy) Lake dropped in to see us and inform that the quietude of Ninth street has been caused by the suspension of hammers, steam drills and the creaking painting scaffolds which the colonel has kept busy throughout the summer. The colonel states that 10,000 real American dollars has been spent to make the "Old Gayety" live up to its reputation as the leading burlesk house of the U. S. A.

All new carpets and furnishings plus interior decorations and new soft lighting that will please the most skeptical. The colonel further states that the customers will see this coming season the cream of burlesk as the scouts of burlesk have combed the entire country during the summer months.

The colonel announces his opening this coming Sunday, the eighteenth, with a cast announcement later in the week.

To the Hardy, Jones and other film families that have gained a foothold is now added the Hedley family. "Shooting" on the first of the Hedley series begins this week, with Ralph Morgan heading the cast. All of which is a reminder that the male duo of another famous family is still doing very nicely, namely, the Barrymore boys. With John currently at the Capitol in "Hold That Co-ed!" and the Palace in "Marie Antoinette" and due soon at the Palace in "Spawn of the North," and Lionel cast as Martin Vanderhof in "You Can't Take It With You," coming to the Earle in a few weeks, well, one begins to think he can go down to the National and collect Ethel's autograph.

The Roadside

Financial impresario Dick Creyke uncovered the play on a genuine "barnstorming" trip in the old country, discovered that it had been unplayed in this century, that Henry Irving himself played it in another acting version, and that it is based on a famed case in British criminal history.

It is not the coincidence of the same first name which makes Eugene Kressin an apt Eugene Aram. His thoughtful stance, his rolling delivery give many a moving moment. In the briefly seen but thoroughly heard part of the ailing Squire Courtland, Harry Westcott delivers just about the finest supporting work of the summer season. Howard Wierum, Larry Lawrence, Richard Walsh, Milton Freedman, Betty Gray, Leslie Crawford and Lois Alexander are among the supporting players.

Honors, too, for Henry C. Pearson's superb settings, in particular that ghoulish spot, the Devil's Crag at Parricide's Gibbet, and to that amazing quartet: Misses Applegate and Gray, and Beethoven and Wagner for their genuinely fine score.

The waits of the opening night have been speeded up with the cars streaking down the cowpath by 11:10. As for this reviewer he could listen to Miss Margaret Osterwald's entr'act singing of "And Her Golden Hair Was Hanging Down Her Back" until the rightful strollers of said cowpaths come home. R. L. C.

Seeing Double on Set of 'Sweethearts'

EN ROUTE TO LOEW'S AND GAYETY.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

DAVID FREEDMAN, the script writer, died on the night before he was to sign a Hollywood contract . . . His 18-year-old son, Ben, was graduated from Columbia in June and was rated the best mathematics student ever produced by that institution. While still an undergrad, Ben wrote a book on mathematics, in association with Prof. Ginsberg of Teachers College . . . The youngster then secured a job with one of America's foremost actuaries. He resigned yesterday, and now is en route to Hollywood . . . Ben, who never before had written a radio script, heard that Al Jolson wanted a new writer. He had submitted his script and, against a field of veterans, won the job.

JUDGE WILLIAM BLEAKLEY, who was the Republican candidate for Governor in '36, dined at Leone's yesterday . . . "No, I won't be a candidate again," he stated . . . Bleakley then tried to phone his wife, but the line was busy . . . "Y'know," he sighed, "that wife of mine is just like Gov. Lehman—dynamite. They're both dynamite. Only Lehman is silent dynamite."

THIS WEEK eight models will file complaint against a man associated with a major theatrical chain. Two of the girls will charge assault . . . The defense in the Hines case has amassed evidence showing that Magistrate Capshaw's percentage of dismissals in policy cases was less than that of any of the other magistrates . . . Armand Denis, producer of "Dark Rapture," has offered to present his 5-year-old African elephant to the Brooklyn Zoo, to replace the slain Hilda . . . Sophie Tucker, who first was signed and then released from Vinton Freedley's new musical, was rehired yesterday.

THE BEST PUBLICITY stunt in Moviedom this year was in connection with the movie "You Can't Take It With You," which was shown to the jurors in the Hines case . . . When the arrangements were being made, the civic officials demanded complete secrecy—and the Columbia Film executives, at whose offices the picture was to be exhibited, agreed . . . It would have remained a secret except that the officials who demanded secrecy brought the jurors uptown—in a huge bus, riding up Broadway with a screaming motorcycle escort of four armed cops.

ESME O'BRIEN, the debutante, will follow the suit of her blue-blooded colleagues who have been joining the ranks of entertainers. Esme will sing at a hotel supper room next month . . . The Italian government is pondering the recall of another of its diplomats here—one of the most important and popular men in the service. He's non-Aryan . . . Deal's Hollywood Golf Club will go carnival tonight, for a World's Fair costume preview. Charles Barber's band and Lucille Linwood will entertain the customers . . . The dancing Hartmanns were signed yesterday, to be featured in the new Webb-Holman-Velez show, "You Never Know."

LAST WEEK Ben Bernie was signed to broadcast for the Amer. Tobacco Co., sponsoring Half-and-Half tobacco . . . To celebrate this new enterprise, Bernie advertised the event in Variety. The ad, announcing that he had been signed to promote the sale of pipe tobacco, included a picture of Bernie, but in his customary pose—smoking a cigar . . . George Washington Hill, head of Amer. Tobacco Co., saw the ad. Hill immediately registered complaint—by sending to Bernie, via special messenger, six cans of tobacco and six pipes.

THE CAPITOL now is featuring "Boys' Town," one of the year's best pictures. Horace McMahon, the movie tough guy, was summoned to the studio while the picture was being cast and was told to stand against the wall, for inspection by Director Norman Taurog. Taurog shook his hand and said: "I know your work. You're very good. But you're too old for the part" . . . The next day McMahon again was summoned to the studio, again was placed against the wall and again Taurog shook his hand, repeating, "I know your work. You're very good. But you're too old for the part" . . . Woody Van Dyke, the director, had observed all these proceedings. He turned to the puzzled McMahon and to Taurog and asked: "Boys—what time's the matinee tomorrow?"

JOHN KENNEDY, son of Ambassador Kennedy, just returned on the Bremen, after visiting his parents in London . . . John enjoyed himself there and had a better time than did his older brother—who has joined the embassy staff . . . "John goes to the 400 Club," the brother lamented, "so why can't I?" . . . "Because," the Ambassador explained, "John hasn't an official job—and you have."

Cross Roads

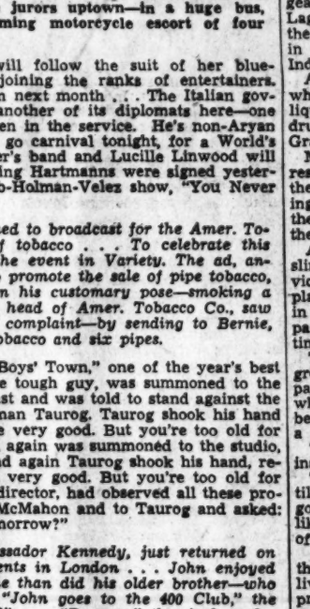
If "The Old Soak" keeps on packing them in, it's going to be the "Tobacco Road" of the countryside theater in these parts. Now going into its third week, it continues to draw big and happy houses.

The bull's-eye hit made by the show seems to be based on three factors, a play combining homely and sophisticated humor, a supporting cast offering acting comparable to the professional, and Arch McDonald's conception of "The Old Soak" himself. Believe us, Mr. McDonald is concealing half of his talents under the bushel of the microphone. When television really comes in, Arch McDonald's gift for amiable comedy should place him atop of the heap.

The play is as American as corned beef and cabbage. "Paw" is always in the doghouse, either for something he's actually done or for something that never entered his head. There's a bootlegger of prohibition vintage, the hired girl takes a drop too much, even the parrot gets crocked. No wonder "Maw" is in a state of perpetual annoyance. But it's all great audience fun. And the audiences are right on hand and making the show the big success of the summer theater hereabouts.

MARY HARRIS.

Abe Lincoln?



RAYMOND MASSEY, but not as "Abe Lincoln in Illinois," which he brings to the National next month, but as a villainous maharajah in "Drums," coming soon to Palace or Capitol.

Even Cobras Are Made Up In 'Gunga Din'

By Frederick C. Othman.

Hollywood, Sept. 12 (U.P.).—Some of the most dastardly villains ever to apply the lash to a hero's back today dragged the Messrs. Cary Grant, Vic McLaglen and Douglas Fairbanks, jr., into a Hindu torture chamber and after appropriate punishment, tossed them to the writhing cobras in the snake pit.

The picture was R-K-O's "Gunga Din," and the set was so realistic it made our hair curl to watch the horrid goings-on. The day's action started when those doughty sergeants of the British army, McLaglen and Fairbanks, discovered their crony, Grant, tied to the wall in the torture room, while East Indian thugs applied the lash.

After each application of the whip, the make-up man streaked liquid chocolate—like the corner drug store uses in sundaes—on Grant's bare and throbbing back.

McLaglen and Fairbanks tried to rescue him, but they too fell into the hands of the villains, who, fighting desperately, inched them toward the snake pit and finally pushed them in.

At the bottom of this damp and slimy hole wriggled half a dozen vicious cobras. Boy! The man explained the methods of operation in the nick of time; we'd nearly passed out in sympathy for the victims of the thugs.

The deep stone pit, from which green slime oozed, was made of papier mache. The slime was glue which had been allowed to drip before hardening, and then painted a shiny green.

"But how about the cobras?" we insisted.

They turned out to be real rentiles, all right, but they were only gopher snakes, made up to look like cobras. This make-up consisted of rubber bumps on their heads.

All we can say is "whew," report that the victims escaped with their lives, and add—for the assurance of prospective audiences — that the snake pit scene will be only one quick flash in a magnificent and moving pictorial rendition of Rudyard Kipling's poem.

Some notes on some movies which won't need any $50,000 prizes to draw cash customers: The mad Marx brothers, about to appear on the screen for the first time in a year, are funny in "Room Service," funnier than they were in "A Day at the Races," and almost as funny as they were in "Horse Feathers." They play straight parts in the movie version of the stage hit. That gives Harpo no chance to plunk a harp; Chico no opportunity to tickle a piano. You'll miss those interludes, but the fact remains that the Marxes are the top comics now functioning in Hollywood.

"Hold That Co-Ed:" This too is an exceptionally funny picture about a rip-roaring Governor, who Twentieth Century-Fox insists bears no resemblance whatever to the late Huey Long. John Barrymore is the Governor. His wife, Elaine, played a part in the filming of the show, but at the preview, there wasn't even a glimpse of her. She sat in the audience with her husband, though, and managed not to look disappointed.

"Too Hot to Handle:" This is the action-packed movie which M-G-M has been working on for months, with Clark Gable as the intrepid adventurer who plunges gayly from one wild-eyed adventure to another, all over the world. The studio even built the city of Shanghai on its back lot—and then wrecked the whole works with Japanese bombs—made in America. Take particular note of the sequence where Gable falls flat on his face in a puddle of mud. We watched him fall—and later watched the nurse try to clean the mud out of his eyes. He had forgotten to close 'em when he hit.

About to be previewed is Warner Brothers' color epic, "Valley of the Giants." This is a drama of the mighty forests where the trees are so big the owners chop holes in 'em so tourists can drive their cars through. We don't know much about this picture, but we are the proud possessor of a chunk of wood from a Warner Brothers redwood tree. The brothers sent it to us for a souvenir. We're going to put it in the same drawer with our package of moonflower seed. They sent that to us, too, so we'd have something to recall their picture, "Garden of the Moon."

We also have an arrow they gave us in connection with their film, "Robin Hood" and we have a gadget that barks which they sent to commemorate a picture wherein Errol Flynn bit a dog. All this is leading up to the fact that not many months ago they made a picture called "Gold Is Where You Find It."

We waited home all afternoon in anticipation of our souvenir of that, but our vigil was in vain. The brothers sent no gold, not even a divining rod.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 12.—The latest news from Jesse James' home town, Pineville, Mo., is that the townsfolk are taking up a subscription to buy the sets so they won't be wrecked. The company was only too willing to leave them there without pay. But the townsfolk wouldn't accept, saying, "We're so grateful to you for putting our city back on the map."

So Twentieth HEDDA HOPPER Century-Fox, not to be outdone, is equipping their little theater for sound, and Tyrone Power will probably go back for the opening of "Jesse James." Scores of residents gave up their houses and are living in tents to make the actors comfortable. Shades of Jesse James!

Cesar Romero certainly gets around. Spent two whole days with Joan Crawford on the set of "Shining Hours," and he wasn't teaching her a new dance routine, either.

• • • •

In spite of planning vacations with five different men, Clark Gable is loath to tear himself away from Hollywood these days. We don't have to wonder why.

• • • •

Jeanette MacDonald's fan clubs are on the march again and have sent M.-G.-M. a petition signed with the thousands of names demanding she and Gene Raymond be starred together. I'd like to see that, too.

• • • •

Joe E. Brown is back in the hospital for another slight operation, to be ready for that new air show. But this time the maternity ward didn't get him. The birth rate is picking up in Hollywood.

• • • •

Abner, partner of Lum, is boasting of that gold button from the Tuna Club for that 201-pound swordfish he caught. Andy Devine's only weighed 175, so he switched partners and has gone off with Bing Crosby to see if he can't better his record. Jack Benny caught three fish in three days. Used every kind of bait he could find—that is, everything but Hedy LaMarr. She was busy.

• • • •

During added scenes in "If I Were King," with 200 extras in armor, Director Frank Llyod shouted "cut" when one of the boys started beating his chest with his fist. They ran over to him thinking he'd been overcome with the heat. He yelled "Get this thing off me!" He had a sand flea under it.

• • • •

Studio officials wondered why so many noses had been injured during the making of that picture. Discovered the visors had a habit of falling down on them without warning.

• • • •

When Jack Benny said "no likee" about "Never Say Die," Bob Hope said: "That's for me," and he'll make it.

George Cukor says actors would rather get a laugh and starve to death than play a scene dramatically and be well fed.

Every time Alma Lloyd, Frank's daughter, does a good deed, her father buys her five new pearls. She'll soon have a string reaching to the knees.

• • • •

Chico Marx has telephonitis. Never dines without one at his elbow, which he uses between bites, and has a phone in every room. Maybe he's the reason they call them the mad Marx Brothers. "Room Service" got plenty of laughs. But I still think their material must be written specially for them. Donald McBride came darned near stealing the show. He was grand, even though he had to say: "Jumping butterballs" instead of the oath he used in the play.

• • • •

The quintuplets have their furrier right here in Hollywood. Schwartz made them their first fur coats. Each year he makes new ones for them. This season they're two sizes bigger than last. Give them a few years and they'll be out in their backyard trapping 'em.

That wasn't a reception they gave Morton Downey at the Cocoanut Grove the other night, but an ovation. He was terrific. As good as when I heard him first in London ten years ago. I brought back some of his records and nearly wore them out on the boat . . . everybody wanted to hear them.

Archibald Beats Dupre; Will Claim Crown

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Among the army of unemployed now is Frankie Frisch, in case you hadn't heard. His job as manager of the Cardinals was snatched from him, ironically, on the very day that it began to loom as much more pleasant. On that day that Paul Dean came back from the minors, joined up with the Cardinals and beat the league-leading Pirates with his refurbished fast-ball, striking out seven, Frisch was fired.

POVICH.

All season, Frisch had been operating with a pitching staff comprised of Lon Warneke, an infield comprised of Johnny Mize and an outfield comprised of Ducky Medwick. The various other position on the Cardinal Club were tenanted by men in uniform. The Cardinals were running sixth, a deep breath away from seventh, and Frisch had reason to be uneasy.

He had reason to be uneasy because the Cardinals' front office had been inured to four consecutive years of first-division ball clubs and a second-division club was hard to take. The Cardinal owners had fired pennant-winning managers when the whim struck them. As a manager of a sixth-place club, Frisch probably was not unaware of his managerial fate.

The Cardinals, in fact, have been famous for firing their managers. Since 1924 six different men have been given the job and none of them quit. All were fired. Rogers Hornsby's reward after winning the pennant for the Cardinals in 1926 was his discharge. Bill McKechnie led the Cardinals to the championship in 1928 and was fired in mid-season of 1929. Gabby Street won pennants in 1930 and 1931 and was given the heave-ho in 1932.

Frankie Was Kidding

Frisch, at one point this season, answered rumors that he would be fired by saying, "My job is safe. The Cardinals only fire pennant-winning managers!" But he was kidding. He knew that the Cardinal front office, having tasted often of the financial sweets of successful pennant races, would not bear with a second division club.

There never was any thought of course that the Cardinals would fire their ball team and retain their manager. That might have been a good idea, but it is never done in the big leagues. In Frisch's case, however, he might have been given more consideration. Let's look at the facts.

In his first year as manager of the Cardinals, Frisch brought the club a pennant and led it to a world series victory over the Tigers. That was 1934. In 1935 he finished second with the Cardinals, in 1936 he tied for for second and last year he finished fourth. Not a bad record; in fact a very good one. Of Frisch's managerial talents there can be little doubt.

What has happened to the Cardinals has not been anything attributable to managerial skill. It has been the breakdown of the Cardinals' organization. The Cardinals' farm system which used to send up so many acceptable ball players has bogged down badly. Branch Rickey and Sam Breadon over-reached themselves in extending their farm system. Too many of their minor league clubs lost money and represented a terrific drain on the pappy club.

Even Owens Flopped!

And the Cardinals were unable to bear the strain. They lost a superb catcher when Bill DeLancey took ill and they were hard hit when sore arms removed "Me 'n Paul" Dean from the win columns. Pepper Martin simply grew too old, and Frisch, a bulwark at second base for years, finally had to hang up his spikes Mickey Owen, the $100,000 catcher from the minors, didn't pan out at all.

To meet the terrific expense of their minor league farms, the Cardinals had to sell Dizzy Dean and trade away Leo Durocher for the cash he would bring, in addition to players. The drain on the club's treasury made it impossible to go into the market for proven players despite the $185,000 check received in the Dean deal, and the Cardinals continued to function as a second division club. When they gave up Dizzy Dean, the Cardinals may have parted with only a sore-arm pitcher, but at least he was a gate attraction and, in the absence of a first-division club, the Cardinals needed a gate attraction no less than Hitler needs his Brownshirts.

But the Cardinals' front office, with that peculiar logic known to swivel-chair baseball men, has decided to remedy the situation by firing the manager. The thought probably didn't occur to them to fire the ball team, as we were saying, and keep the manager. It might have been more effective.

Won't Be Idle Long

That Frisch will be jobless for long is hardly probable. There are two many clubs in the big leagues which could use pennant winning managers. Of Frisch's talents there never was much doubt. Back in the 1920's, when the late John McGraw entertained ideas of retiring, he had tabbed Frisch as his successor. McGraw had brought the Fordham Flash out of college, saw him make good instantly as a big leaguer, and was grooming him for bigger things. Suddenly, however, McGraw cooled toward Frisch, and traded him to the Cardinals in 1927.

But it is not too far-fetched to believe that some day, perhaps soon, Frisch will get the job as the Giants' manager. Bill Terry has indicated frequently that he will be happier when he steps out of the Giants' managerial role. Terry and Frisch are long-time friends and old teammates.

Terry would not be stepping down. As vice president and general manager of the Giants he would simply be stepping out of the manager's job to apply himself to what he believes more important administrative duties. Terry can retire with three pennants and three first-division clubs to show for his six years as manager of the Giants. It is one of the finest managerial records in all baseball history.

High in the confidence of Horace Stoneham, Terry has little to gain by continuing as manager of the Giants. He has proved himself in that post and would merely be exposing himself to a loss of prestige if he failed to maintain his remarkable managerial record. He likes the kind of job Eddie Collins has as the general manager of the Red Sox. General managers are rarely fired, especially when general managers are in strong with the boss, like Terry is.

Cards to Cut Farm System in-Half

St. Louis, Sept. 12 (AP).—The Globe-Democrat says that in the wake of Frankie Frisch's release as manager of the Cardinals comes the word that the Cards' vast farm system will be cut almost in half this winter.

The report is that Sam Breadon, president, and Branch Rickey, vice president and general manager, have "decided they do not need so far-flung a chain of minor links and will take steps to eliminate a dozen farms before another season."

Hank Leads Babe's 1927 Homer Pace

Tiger Slugger Is Now Four Games Ahead of Bambino's Record With 20 More to Go This Season.

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 12.—The Tiger's one-two punch, Hank Greenberg and Rudy York, accounted for another victory today as the Tigers edged out the Chicago White Sox, 4 to 3, in the major league's only game.

GREENBERG.

Greenberg drew closer to Babe Ruth's home run record of 60 by slamming No. 50 into the upper deck of the left field stands in the third with the sacks empty. York batted home the winning run when he doubled to center in the sixth to score Greenberg.

The homer put Hank four games ahead of the Babe's standard in games played. In his gala year of 1927 Ruth hit No. 50 in his 138th game on September 11. Greenberg played his 134th game today, and with 20 games remaining must hit better than one homer every two games to better the mark.

The siege guns' hits counted, for Pitchers Jack Knott and John Whitehead limited the Tigers to seven hits, while young Al Benton, of Detroit, was allowing nine. Joe Kuhel drove in two Chicago runs in the third when he rapped a homer with a man on base.

The Sox flared briefly in the ninth when, with two out, Meyer tripled but Christman threw out Mike Kreevich, a pinch hitter, to end the game.

Cobb Fails Again In Speed Attempt

Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, Sept. 12 (AP).—Hampered by a slushy track, John R. Cobb, of England, failed today by a narrow margin to shatter the world's land speed record of 345.49 miles per hour.

Cobb's shark-shaped automobile, "Railton," averaged 342.53 miles per hour for two runs.

Acutely disappointed, Cobb said he would make minor mechanical repairs on his 7,000-pound, 24-cylindered car and try again "perhaps by the week-end," for the record held by his fellow Briton, Capt. George E. T. Eyston. Cobb's first attempt, August 30, also failed.

Feather Title Vacated by Armstrong

Henry Armstrong abdicated his featherweight throne early last night, almost as Tony Dupre and Joey Archibald climbed through the ropes at Griffith Stadium for a 10-round bout to determine the No. 1 challenger for the title.

ARMSTRONG.

The Dusky Dynamo's action came as no surprise. It had been predicted months ago, after he slugged Barney Ross from beneath his welterweight crown, by this writer as well as others. When he challenged Lou Ambers for the lightweight crown it was apparent that he had no thought of ever defending the 126-pound diadem.

Portly Eddie Meade, the colored boy's manager, hinted that Armstrong intended to cling to the throne only until he had won three championships—a feat never before accomplished in the ring. And after Henry successfully performed that Herculean task, Meade bluntly stated that his fighter would relinquish the featherweight crown unless a sizable sum was offered him to defend it.

Armstrong had difficulty making the weight for his bout with Petey Sarron, in which he won the featherweight belt—despite reports to the contrary, and later found his best weight to be approximately 133 pounds. It was this problem

For the second straight year, Mrs. Betty Meckley, of Indian Spring, yesterday captured medal honors in The Washington Post women's golf tournament, shooting a brilliant 83 over the water - logged Manor Country Club course. She added an incoming 42 to a 41 on the first nine to lead the field by two strokes.

MRS WALPER.

Bunched at 85 were three players—Mrs. Howard Simons, of the home club; Mrs. Jack Scott, unattached, and Mrs. Leo Walper, of Capitol Country Club. An 87 was turned in by Mrs. George Hussey, of Army and Navy, and the rest of the field was strung out at 90 and above.

Considering that there were five players with gross totals under 90 this year, and only two under that aggregate last year, when an 87 won the medal for Mrs. Meckley, the tournament promises a brand of golf as good as this section has seen.

Heavy water on the greens proved a distinct handicap to players, Mrs. Meckley and others three-putting time after time. The holder of almost every local ladies' golf crown at one time or another was only able to crack regulation figures on one hole, the eleventh, when her tee shot hit the green and she laid down a 20-footer for a deuce. The rest of the time Mrs. Meckley was

By Jack Cuddy.

Copyright, 1938, for The Washington Post.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The most stunning double-barreled upset in the history of the national singles tennis championships occurred today when Helen Jacobs, America's top-seeded woman star, and Bobby Riggs, the Nation's second-ranking men's player, were eliminated from the tournament.

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 12.—The most stunning double-barreled upset in the history of the national singles tennis championships occurred today when Helen Jacobs, America's top-seeded woman star, and Bobby Riggs, the Nation's second-ranking men's player, were eliminated from the tournament.

Miss Jacobs, of Berkeley, Calif., favorite to recapture her fifth singles crown, was surprisingly beaten by Margot Lumb, a brown-haired girl from England who is seeded only sixth among the foreign women in the tournament. Miss Lumb won in straight sets, 7—5, 6—2.

This upset came after the elimination of Riggs, of Chicago, who is ranked and seeded right under Donald Budge, the defending champion. Riggs was beaten in five sets by Gilbert A. Hunt, jr., of Washington, D. C., ranked nineteenth and winner of only two minor tournaments this year. Hunt, a stoop-shouldered mathematics student at George Washington University, eliminated Riggs, 6—2, 0—6, 9—7, 0—6, 6—4.

Performance Brilliant.

Miss Jacobs' defeat occurred in the women's third round, and the Riggs catastrophe came in the men's fourth round.

From start to finish the amazing speed of her forehand, her magnificent volleying and smashing service virtually routed the Californian who had been in top-flight tennis for 14 years.

Miss Lumb never allowed "Husky Helen" to get set for a shot. She pressed Helen continuously and attacked with such severity that Miss Jacobs' methodical, crafty game melted.

Jacobs Like a Novice

The English girl was so superior in the second set that she might have been playing a novice. She broke Helen's service every time by racing in close and smashing the ball for placements. Helen, beaten back on her heels from the start, never had a chance to attack. She couldn't get away from the baseline.

Miss Lumb's victory advanced her into the fourth round where Wednesday she will meet Nancye Wynne, of Australia.

Meanwhile, Gil Hunt had triumphed over the highly-touted Bobby Riggs by using virtually the same tactics. Riggs, like Jacobs, had been a 10-1 favorite when he took the court. He was fresh from Davis Cup play and a season of brilliant victories.

But the frail Washington mathematician constantly out-maneuvered and pressed the husky Chicago "play boy." Again and again he stormed the net to overwhelm Riggs, who is essentially a crafty, defensive player and who has virtually no net game of his own.

At other times he broke Bobby's

'Big Train' Wins In the Primary For Commissioner

JOHNSON.

It was the "Big Train's first venture into politics.

Johnson piled up a 1,718 to 95 lead over his opponent, James M. Mount, of Gaithersburg, in returns from the first 20 precincts reporting out of a total of 35. In one precinct he polled 104 votes to 1 for Mount, and in another, 100 to 1.

Mount conceded his defeat in the early part of the evening, saying, "I am ready to take off my hat and work night and day for Walter's election next November."

Johnson, who runs a dairy farm near Gaithersburg, has been active in organizing boys' clubs and athletic teams in the community. This was a large factor, his supporters said, in the popularity which he showed today at the polls.

Joey Given Unanimous Ring Verdict

By Lewis F. Atchison.

Joey Archibald staked a convincing claim to the world featherweight championship at Griffith Stadium last night when he pawed and punched his way to a unanimous 10-round decision over Tony Dupre.

A disappointingly small audience of 3,500 fans saw the sleek and smiling Providence kid outgeneral the blond Italian from the first bell to the last. The issue was in doubt, however, until they swung into the latter stages of the bout, when Archibald opened up and chased his opponent from corner to corner in a futile attempt to land a knockout punch.

ARCHIBALD.

Archibald's victory came only a few hours after Sepia Henry Armstrong announced in Los Angeles that he had vacated the title, and Al Weill, Joey's pilot, announced after the verdict was rendered that he is filing a claim with the New York State Boxing Commission for the championship.

Dupre took the play away from Archibald, a 7-5 favorite, in the earlier rounds, moving in cautiously and scoring with a short left hook to to the body. But he varied his style enough to keep Joey at a a safe distance, and the eventual winner appeared a little puzzled by these tactics. Dupre came in one minute then stood off and waited for Archibald to make a move. And when Joey did leap in Dupre usually tied him up in a clinch, or ducked out of the danger zone.

Archibald Penalized

Archibald was penalized two points for heeling and hitting on the break in the first round and drew another warning from Referee Ray Bowen for hitting low in the fourth. During the minute's rest between rounds Weill walked over to the referee to protest the strict manner in which he called the blows, and Bowen waved him back to the corner, threatening to disqualify his fighter.

On the official score sheet, Dupre was given the first two rounds, the third and fourth were called even, and Archibald won the remainder. On The Post's score sheet, the first fourth and tenth were even, and Archibald won the rest.

Dupre was distinctly out of it after the fourth and seemed to realize that fact. He clinched and held continually and the effective blows he landed could almost be counted on your thumbs. Both fighters were entirely too cautious for the fans, who clamored for action with throaty bellows after the fifth round. Archibald tried to make a fight of it, but happened to be in with the wrong man.

Start Is Slow

They were off to a slow start, moving around gingerly, pawing half heartedly at one another, and peering vainly for an opening. Dupre stabbed Joey with two light lefts before Archibald chased him across the ring, literally running after him, and peppering him with lefts and rights on the chin. Near the end of the session, Archibald caught Dupre in a corner, and tried to blast him at the midsection, but Tony tied him up. Joey wrestled him to the canvas, trying to break away.

They spent most of the second round in statuesque poses, waiting in cat-like postures for the other to move. Archibald's best shots were rights to the head and body—one each, while Dupre's efforts consisted

On Fishing

The northeaster that throughout the past week tried to get underway did little more than spoil the fishing, poor as it has been, for those who defied the prediction of rain and give it a try anyway. If there were any catches made worth noting, it wasn't in our neighborhood, nor have we heard of them as yet.

ACKERMAN.

Our thought is that if this northeast weather would set in right and give us two or three days' rain, as soon as it broke the fishing would be really right, for they are in the upper bay in numbers beyond that of the past several years.

Although we are in thorough agreement with the angler whose answer to the question—when is the best time to go fishing?—was anytime you can get near the water, we would say now, wait until we do get a blow, if it isn't too long in coming.

To that we add—anyone making a prediction on fishing is sticking his head out for trouble, for the right time cannot be told. It is a question of trying until you luck out, for many times with every contributing factor seemingly just right, the fish refuse to strike on anything. Again, when conditions seem to be all against the angler, they will strike as though they are mad.

The Patuxent River in the Marlboro section generally supplies excellent yellow perch and pike fishing at this time of the year, but it is so muddy that a full week of fine weather wouldn't be enough to clear it so the fish could see a bait well enough to strike at it.

That is no deterrent to railbird hunters, however, and this week should see limit bags for any hunters good enough to knock them down when they flush, for the cool weather has been bringing them in to the marshes in daily increasing numbers. Most all of them in poor shape, it is true, and kind of hard when it comes to putting them in the pot, but what shooting. They are as fast as the clay pigeons on a skeet field, but not near so certain, for there is no way to figure from where they are coming, nor whence they are going.

It wasn't so many years ago that we had exceptional shooting right here on the outskirts of Washington, in the marshes of the Eastern Branch, but with the gradual raising of the ground, and the building of many miles of seawall, the birds have abandoned the small area left for the marshy creeks down the Potomac. All these sections are later in getting their flights of rails, sometimes by as much as two weeks, and in addition are miles further than the marshes of the Patuxent.

* * * *

Changed but little through the years by the use of humans, they, too, are gradually rising, until the time isn't so far away that they will also cease to be the point of greatest congregation of sora in the Mid-Atlantic States. In the past the birds have come into these marshes earlier, and stayed later, than in other places. Probably because conditions were just right to condition them for the long flight that ends, not always in some Gulf-shore State, but often across the Caribbean to Peru and Venezuela.

Today the king sora in the Patuxent is almost as scarce as the Virginia rail, which, lighter in color and marking than the common rail, is almost nonexistant, but the shooting suffers in no way by their absence, and particularly this week with two tides each day, the 15 birds allowed by the law should be no trouble at all.

* * * *

And in bagging your limit, don't forget your pusher rates 50 cents over and above his regular $5 for a tide. Then there is the item of picking, another 30 cents, or 2 cents a bird. Well worth it if for nothing more than the pleasure you derive from watching his skill and dexterity. In every way on a par with his ability to push the sharp-ended, keelless punt through the thick reeds by literally walking the 16-foot, three-cleated pushing pole.

The many sportsmen following this early shooting, not only to get their hand in, but for the real diversion it affords, will need no help in its pursuit, but for the stranger in this section we might note that many of the pushers are colored. That they may be found at the general store, marked on most maps as Leon but known by many as Pig Point or Big Bend. If you would rather make your arrangements ahead, which is always best, call West River 24-F-12. Remember that you shoot only the two hours before the top of the flood tide, that heavy overcast weather adds to the sport, for it usually causes higher tides, and that the tide is high about three hours before high tide here.

* * * *

Dropping down the Patuxent nearly 40 miles to the mouth of St. Leonard's Creek, just a few miles above Solomons Island, and you are on one of the finest September fishing grounds we know of. Not only do the large sea trout find the lush feeding to their satisfaction, so that they remain for many days, but the yellow perch (often called here black perch) come down from their fresh water haunts to wax fat, and to become so deeply marked from the greater salinity of the water, as to be almost unrecognizable. It is not out of the way to see catches as large as 300 and 400, when they get going right.

Although all the Solomon captains knew the Lump well, it is Capt. Ed Bowen's pet fishing place. One night last September in his company we caught here 104 trout that run up to 4 pounds, and ruined forever, a swell new Heddon No. 600 rod.

The first fall meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Izaak Walton League will be held tomorrow evening at 8 p. m. in the Elizabethan Room of the Raleigh Hotel.

If you are for more and better fishing, ally yourself with this organization, or at least go down to see what they are doing.

Miss Epe, The Favorite, Beaten Out

Winner Brings Backers $6.80 Ticket; Good Wine Shows; Jungo's Time Is Fastest of Meeting.

Timonium Fair Grounds, Md., Sept. 12.—A. H. Utterback's Jungo came like a runaway express the final quarter-mile to snare the Defender's Day Purse, feature mile and one-sixteenth race by a nose from Mrs. G. Hutchins' Miss Epe. The time of 1:50 1-5 was the fastest of the meeting.

A Defenders' Day crowd of 9,000 installed Miss Epe the favorite. The filly flattered her backers by taking command going to the first turn. From there on home Sammy Palumbo rated her nicely. However, she tired right at the end and Jungo got up to win by the smallest margin. The Virginia-owned colt paid $6.80. A head away in third place finished Mrs. Tom Lewis' Good Wine.

The day's 4½-furlong opener saw Chester F. Hockley's Mystery Miss, an odds-on favorite, make every post a winning one. The filly, who had trained cleverly at Pimlico, paid $3.80.

The 6½ furlongs of the second saw an upset with F. T. Johnson's Tuft Hunter winning in 1:23 3-5 to pay $35.20.

Well back for a half, the gelding closed fast to win by a nose from C. A. Guletta's Clock Fixer. H. R. Freck's Colony, medium of a big plunge at post time, was poorly ridden to finish third. The daily double combination of Mystery Miss and Tuft Hunter paid $141.10.

Beaten a whisker last out after leading to the final stride, Victor P. Noyes' Ruth Lerner stuck it out long enough to land today's third race. She led throughout and raced the 6½ furlongs in the excellent time of 1:21 1-5. She paid $9.30.

J. R. Howell's Quick Vine, odds-on favorite, outran a half dozen opponents from flag fall to wire to land the 6½ furlongs of the fourth.

Miss Amil Booker's Sumac, favorite, became the first triple winner of the meeting when she won the mile and one-sixteenth of the sixth. Away slowly, she took the overland route thereafter, just got up to win by a nose from A. S. Garthright's Best Policy.

Down In Front

—By Richards Vidmer

Three Men in a Boat

New York, Sept. 12. — Sometimes it is a little more than difficult to understand the reasoning of baseball magnates. With the dismissal of Frankie Frisch as leader of the Gas House Gang, three major league managers have joined the leisure class since the current but fading baseball season opened last April. And the term major leaguer applies to all three of them. At least all were good enough to win pennants for the clubs that decided to get along without them.

VIDMER.

Charlie Grimm, as I recall, was the first to go. He was suddenly released by the Cubs and Gabby Hartnett appointed to succeed him. Yet only a few short years ago Grimm was being hailed as a miracle man, the perfect pilot, the saviour of Chicago. He took over from Rogers Hornsby after the 1932 season was well underway and lifted the Cubs to a pennant that year. He repeated by winning another in 1935.

Then Mickey Cochrane was released by the Tigers, yet Mickey was a hero in Detroit when he won the first pennant that city had seen in a quarter of a century three years ago and repeated in 1935.

And now Frisch has been fired by the Cardinals, although he led the club to a National League pennant and a world's series victory in 1934.

What rather confuses me is how the club owners figure that these men are not good enough to manage their ball clubs now if they were good enough to win pennants for them only two and three years ago. After all, it isn't every manager who can win a pennant; only one out of eight each season achieves that distinction. Cochrane, Grimm and Frisch won five among them in the last six years, but by some method approaching madness Messrs. Briggs, Wrigley and Breadon came to the conclusion that they weren't good enough.

In the case of Cochrane there may be an explanation. He was bought and appointed by the late Frank Navin. He was Navin's choice, and when Walter Briggs assumed the presidency of the club, he may have had ideas of his own. But Grimm was chosen by Wrigley and won for him. Frisch was selected by Sam Breadon and gave him what he wanted —a pennant.

Still Are Capable

And it seems to me that if these men were capable enough to lead championship teams to championships before, they still are capable —providing the club owners give them championship teams to lead. The fault seems to be in the false reasoning by the club owners that the fans can be fooled. If a club fails to win because of a lack of adequate material, the club owners apparently feel that they can revive interest by changing managers even in midstream.

But this is only a temporary cure. The fans may return for a short time out of curiosity, but if the team still loses they quickly drift away from the ball park and turn to other, more pleasant amusements. The only permanent cure for a ball club in a losing streak is better material. However, this is more expensive than simply firing the manager and serves only as a reluctant and last resort. Sometimes not even then.

Of course there are occasions when the firing of a manager is perfectly proper. If the material is there and the players fail to produce the best results, then he hardly can be called a successful leader. Some who have attempted the role of manager couldn't win even if they had the Yankees. But Grimm, Cochrane and Frisch all have proved their ability as leaders by winning pennants if they have adequate playing strength at their command.

The Old Gang Disperses

It isn't surprising that Frisch failed to lift the Cards out of the second division this season. Last winter Sam Breadon sold Dizzy Dean, who had become the mainstay when the Cardinals were winning or coming close to it. Not that I think the Cardinals could have won if they had kept Dean, but the club had fallen apart since 1934 and commensurable replacements had not been forthcoming. Collins, Frisch, Durocher, Paul Dean and several others who were instrumental in that triumph had departed for various reasons, including trades, sales, age and illness, and Frisch was supplied with inferior players in their place.

However, there seems to be no reason to offer the Messrs. Grimm, Cochrane and Frisch any sympathies. They have convinced a lot of people that they are major league managers in every sense of the word, and no doubt they will be sought by other clubs during the winter that lies ahead.

They may not be good enough for Messrs. Briggs, Wrigley and Breadon, but there's little doubt that there are other club owners who will be only too glad to have them handle their affairs on the ball field. After all, Bill McKechnie was fired by Pittsburgh after winning a pennant for the Pirates and proceeded to win a pennant for the Cardinals three years later. Joe McCarthy was fired after winning a pennant for the Cubs, but he has won several since for the Yankees. There's no reason to believe that just because Grimm, Frisch and Cochrane have been released they can't still win pennants for someone else.

7 Up Practice

The 7 Up Athletic Club will hold a practice tomorrow afternoon at 5 o'clock on the East Ellipse for the games Saturday and Sunday with the Colonial Heights Volunteer Fire Department team, winners of the Southside League, at Petersburg, Va.

Scores a Par 72 on Rain-Soaked Course

Three District Golfers, Miller Stevinson, Ralph Bogart and Martin McCarthy, 'Under Wire' as Field Is Reduced; Brownell 'Qualifies' as Storm Sends Scores Soaring on First Day.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey,
A Staff Correspondent.

Oakmont Golf Club, Oakmont, Pa., Sept. 12.—The terrors of Oakmont's holes of horror bluffed all but one of the finest amateurs in the world here today in the first qualifying round of the forty-second National Amateur Championship. The lone man to equal the par of 72 was Georgetown University's 1928 Intercollegiate champion, Maurice J. McCarthy, jr., now of the Wyoming Club in Cincinnati, who posted perfect nines of 37 and 35 for the pace-setting score.

A morning downpour, the first rain "since the cab drivers' picnic in July," soared the scores, but that was a mere sprinkle compared to the afternoon deluge that all but forced cancellation of play. It was so dark the players could not see where their drives landed, and a quarter of an inch of rain fell in ten minutes.

McCARTHY.

The multi-trapped layout, scene of six previous national championships, proved a heartbreaker throughout the day. Johny Goodman, defending champion and favorite, posted a 76, a score duplicated by the '37 titleholder, Johnny Fisher, while Brooklyn's Frankie Strafaci struggled in with a card of 79. Goodman played rather aimlessly, apparently shooting just for a safe qualifying score. He was only one over par leaving 11 but hit the trap parade on the finishing holes for his 76.

It was a bad day for former champions, as Chick Evans, the "grand old man" from Chicago, was virtually out of the tourney with an 85; S. David Herron, who won the 1919 title over this course, had 83, and Jess Sweester an 80.

Arthur Doering, jr., low amateur in the Open this year, was the lone 73 scorer, the Chicago youngster three-putting the last green and that stroke cost him a tie with McCarthy. His first putt stopped in a pool of water, and he barely got down in two more for the 73.

District Contingent

The District of Columbia's five entrants were led by the medalist in the sectional qualifying rounds at Congressional, Bobby Brownell, who rallied on the last six holes with a one under par performance to card a 78. Miller B. Stevinson, Columbia's veteran, was a stroke back at 79, in a round marred by a pair of two over par holes on the last four. He was only three over leaving the fourteenth green.

Ralph Bogart, out nicely with a two over par 39, hit trouble on the back nine and finished with a 41 for an 80, while Martin McCarthy, of Beaver Dam, also slumped on the return trip with a 43. He was out in 39 for an 82. Levi Yoder, who hit the ball beautifully on practice rounds, was all over the course and finished with an 85.

Bracketed at 74 and still well within hailing distance of the medalist honors were several big names, including Atlanta's Charley Yates, British Open champion, who bettered par by a stroke on the front nine but lost three coming back. Tommy Tailer, Walker Cup team alternate, had 38-36; Eddie Held, Edgewater, Colo. twin 37s; Reynolds Smith, the drawling Texan, 38-36, Harry Givan, Washington State star, and Fritz Steidle, Memphis.

Kelly is Leader

The 75 shooters were led by last year's medalist, Roger Kelly, of San Francisco, who made it the hard way, a 42 and 33, the latter the lowest round of the day. Fred Haas and Ray Billows, Walker Cup players, had duplicate 37-38; Bud Ward, Olympia, Wash., 38-27, and Hunter Hicks, Glencoe, Ill., 41-34.

Johnny Burke, Intercollegiate champion from Georgetown, had 38-40, 78, and a duplicate performance will get him safely in Wednesday's rounds. He missed a half dozen putts inside of 4 feet, including several three-putt greens.

Big names were scattered from 76 through 80, including the former public links champion, B. Patrick Abbott, who was a potential medalist with his sub-par 35 on the front nine but finished with a 76. Johnny Fisher's 76 included an eagle three on the ninth hole, where he holed a 50-yard niblick shot.

Willie Turnesa, one of the three players to better perfect figures on the par 37 out nine, was 7 over on the back for a 77. The 1932 champion, Canada's Ross (Sandy) Somerville, had a 78; the French amateur champion, Bobby Dunkleberger, of North Carolina, required 81 shots, while Scotty Campbell, Seattle, posted 82; Ellsworth Vines, the pro tennis ace, had 44-42—86, and former English champion Thomas Torrance bagged an 83.

All players scoring 85 or over were eleminated from the second day's medal play, the casualties including Levi Yoder, Kenwood, and Otto Greiner, Baltimore, who had 85; Chick Evans and Ellsworth Vines. Thus 39 of the 163 starters are disqualified, leaving 124 players battling for the match play berths.

All scores over 84 were eliminated, to speed up the play, and make way for a possible playoff late in the afternoon.

of paring off poundage to compete as a featherweight, and put it back on to oppose lightweights and welterweights that confronted the Californian.

Meade decided that it would be foolish, and possibly fatal for Henry to even attempt such a task. Joe Gans, he remembered, contracted tuberculosis and eventually died trying to make unreasonable weight limits, and Meade was unwilling to gamble with his man's health. It appeared to be better business, moreover, to campaign in the heavier ranks.

The New York State Athletic Commission as well as other State commissions, issued an ultimatum that Armstrong must defend his 126-pound honors before signing to defend either the lightweight or welterweight championships. Armstrong's answer was to sign for a welterweight bout with, Ceferina Garcia in November.

Archibald, meanwhile, posted a check for $1,000 with the New York Commission, as a guarantee of good faith in challenging for the the title, and the Empire State governing body accepted the money. As Archibald had defeated Mike Belloise, until then the recognized No. 1 challenger in New York, the commission's act in accepting Archibald's check served to confirm him as the foremost challenger.

Archibald's drive toward National recognition, which had been denied him previously, was launched here in Washington in an elimination tournament sponsored by the pugilistic promotorial firm of Turner and Ahearn. The Providence halfpint outpointed Belloise in his biggest test of the year, earning the right to meet Dupre, who had gained the finals by winning over Pete Scalzo in a driving rainstorm.

D. C. Ring Commission Chairman Named to Board of Governors of National Body.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Montreal, Canada, Sept. 12.—Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of Washington, D. C., police, was today re-elected for the third time to the board of governors of the National Boxing Association in session here for its nineteenth annual convention.

Commissioner Claude W. Owen was appointed chairman of the 1939 convention committee. Other members of this committee are Commissioners Jack Farley, of Rhode Island, and J. T. Joyner, of North Carolina.

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller was reappointed chairman of the championship ratings committee. Other members of this committee are Joseph T. Maloney, New Jersey; Maj. J. J. Ahern, Minnesota; Charles F. Reynolds, Rhode Island; Senator Edward Bohn, Colorado; Sam L. Murbarger, Indiana; James A. Blake, Virginia; Fred J. Saddy, Wisconsin.

Cities requesting the 1939 convention are Washington, D. C.; Milwaukee, Wis., and Winston-Salem, N. C.

Michigan was expelled from the N. B. A. for refusing to recognize Illinois suspension in connection with the recent Adamick-Trammell fiasco. The vote to oust Michigan was 18 to 2.

Capital Minnesotans List Grid Party

Coincident with the Minnesota-Washington game at Minneapolis on September 24, the Minnesota Society of Washington will hold the first of its 1938 Minnesota football parties.

The gathering will be held at the Raleigh Hotel, where reception of a Nation-wide broadcast of the game has been arranged. The Minnesota football parties were inaugurated by Johnny McGovern, former All-American quarterback at Minnesota. Not only Minnesota fans, but fans of opposing teams are invited to attend, it was announced by Sudney D. Sarff, president of the Minnesota Society.

Pepsi vs. Ballston

Pepsi Cola will invade Ballston Thursday night for a game with the Ballston nine at 8 o'clock. The Pepsis defeated the Young Democrats of Southern Maryland in their last game, 9-2, Sunday afternoon, giving them 20 victories out of their last 26 games.

Gridmen Turn Titian To Please Coach

Hickman, Ky., Sept. 12 (AP).—Twelve members of the Hickman High School basketball squad dyed their hair a flaming red today in a welcoming gesture to their new coach, red-haired Clyde Rayburn.

While Rayburn grinned happily, the boys hoisted him into a hand-decorated "collegiate" automobile and paraded the downtown section in that and other bright-hued cars.

Ryan Is Victor In Manor Play

Tommy Ryan, Belle Haven Country Club's professional, won the golf tournament which featured the monthly meeting of the Mid-Atlantic Greenskeepers Association yesterday at Manor with a net score of 69. It was a single stroke better than the card turned in by Joe Fungy, of York, Pa. Another Pennsylvanian, I. Gantz, of Lancaster, scored 71, and Bob Williams, of the Naval Academy, shot a 72.

4 Terp Teams Work In Long Scrimmage

Four elevens engaged in a long scrimmage on plays that had been diagrammed for them before they went on the field. This will be the program for the rest of the week.

Astor Clarke to Head Recreation Pin Loop

For the second consecutive year Astor Clarke, the Nation's No. 1 bowler, was elected President of the Recreation Bowling League. Joe Pricci was elected vice president, while Irwin Simon and George Aldridge were re-elected as secretary-treasurer and scorer.

Play Benefit Game

The O'Donnell's Sea Grill team will play the Ballston A. C. Friday night at 8 o'clock in a benefit game for Jimmy Schwab, injured O'Donnell player. Admission to the game will be 25 cents. Schwab performed for the Sea Grill team in the Industrial League and for the Ballston team in night games.

par or over. She earned the medal despite sevens on the ninth and eighteenth and a six on the par 4 fourteenth.

Mrs. Simons won top berth in handicap match play which starts today, subtracting an allowance of eight strokes from her 85, giving her 77. She plays Mrs. Arnold McNitt of Congressional in the first round. Mrs. Meckley plays Mrs. A. A. McEntee, of Kenwood.

Feature of the first day's action was the collapse of Mrs. Florence Godfrey, of Beaver Dam. Usually an 80-shooter, Mrs. Godfrey decided to improve her game Saturday with a lesson and some practice. Her 97 yesterday she laid to excess practice.

Mrs. Charlotte Stern, another contender who was expected to be heard from in the sixth renewal of The Post tourney, was the last to finish the route, but announced that she had merely been out for the practice. She didn't turn in a card.

The 32 low scorers who qualified yesterday will enter match play rounds today, losers playing a consolation series throughout the rest of the week. Seven-eighths of the difference in club handicaps will be allowed twosomes who clash in championship rounds for The Post Cup.

9 Colonials Join Squad

Nine more football players reported for practice yesterday at George Washington University, bringing the total to 32 as Coach Bill Reinhart hustled the Colonials through two lengthy sessions on the polo field.

Vic Sampson, star halfback, who decided to return to school after considering a hotel position, and John Rebhalz, veteran tackle, headed the list of late arrivals. Also in the group were Hal Schiering, Clem Weidenfeller and Ed Boston, linesmen, and Lud Urick, Biff Borden, Tom Grady and Joe Carriere, backs.

Rebholz, who was voted the squad's "most valuable" player last season, faces a stiff conditioning program. He reported 20 pounds overweight, scaling about 234.

Sampson and the other late arrivals all appeared in fine shape. Weidenfeller became the season's first casualty, however, when Bob Nowaskey stepped on his hand just as the afternoon drill was coming to a close. Trainer George Lentz said Weidenfeller suffered a slight injury.

Four players still are missing. Frank Merka, halfback, and Guy Renzaglia, guard, both seniors, are due today. Bob Faris, lanky end and basketball star, has been permitted to remain on a job at Fremont, Nebr., until Friday.

John Tonkavitch, soph fullback and fourth member of the absent quartet, was scheduled to report with the first squad on Saturday, but Colonial officials have received no reason for his delay in reporting.

Archibald Is Winner

of a half dozen light lefts and one good, solid right to the body.

Archibald awoke to the realization that Dupre gradually was edging ahead of him on points in the third, and tried to do something about it. He fought like a tiger on the ropes when Dupre tried to tie him up, and Bowen almost called for a crow-bar to separate them.

Catches Up in 4th

In the fourth Archibald almost fell out of the ring after missing a couple of intended knockout punches by yards. He finally caught Tony on the ropes and ripped two hard rights to the heart that staggered him, and clipped him with a right on the head. Dupre snagged Joey with a short left uppercut midway in the period, but failed to discourage the clever Providence lad.

Dupre buckled in the fifth when Archibald tore into him with a furious two-fisted attack to the body. Tony shook it off and caught Joey off balance with a looping right that knocked him half way across the ring and through the ropes. They stood briefly in the center of the ring and with heads buried on one another's shoulders let go with a barrage of body punches, but it was Dupre who finally quit and held.

Archibald won the sixth by virtue of his superior in-fighting and shook up Tony in the seventh with a brace of stinging punches. Dupre hooked two lefts to the head and cracked him on the chin with a right, but Archibald continued to force the fighting. Tony stung Joey with a left to the head and connected with a right to the chin, but Archibald chased him across the ring again, rights fairly dripping from Tony's chin.

Dupre landed a right on Archibald's left eye that opened up an old cut on Joey's eyelid. Archibald pushed both hands to the head, but Dupre countered with a right-hook to the bad eye. Dupre landed with lefts and rights to the head in the ninth, but again Archibald waded in, forced him to clinch with a blistering body attack.

Dupre strove tirelessly to make up the lost ground in the tenth and final round, but Archibald had more left than Tony and answered him volley for volley. They finished rather slowly, considering the prize at stake.

Toby Scoggins (130) outpointed Brooks Bowen (135) of Richmond, in the initial four-rounder. Both were swinging for knockouts and missed frequently, but landed enough to make it interesting.

Buddy Taylor, 138½, outpointed Govan Rhodes, 134¼, in the six-round windup. It was a hard-fought, dull fight and a majority decision.

Joe Perry, 134¼, outpointed Billy Temes, 138, in the six-rounder following the main go.

Garibaldi Back Again

Gino Has Traveled Far and Wide Since His Last Appearance on the Mat Here.

Gino Garibaldi's bout with Joe Dusek at the Arena Thursday night will be in the nature of a homecoming for the husky Italian, who has been away from the city so long he can't remember whether it still has horse-drawn street cars or not.

One of Promoter Joe Turner's more mathematically minded assistants yesterday figured up that Gino has traveled in 15 countries, and over 100,000 miles, won 55 bouts, lost 43 and drawn in four, since his last appearance here. How many beefsteaks, or hamburgers Garibaldi has devoured in his tours the mathematician declined to add, but the total probably is considerable.

Dolly Dalton and Babe Murphy, victors in the two matches involving all-female talent last week, meet in a co-feature bout Thursday, the winner to be matched with Clara Mortensen for the women's lightweight championship of the world.

July Building Loans Total 88 Million

Advances Made to 39,900 Families for Buying, Building, Repairing or Refinancing Homes.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

In his latest monthly report, Edward C. Baltz, of this city, president of the United States Building and Loan League, estimated that average savings, building and loan associations of the country placed $88,136,900 in home mortgages in July, supplying 39,900 families with loans to build, buy, repair or refinance homes. One out of every four and one-half borrowing families got the money to build a new house, and 31.5 per cent of the funds disbursed was for this purpose.

Mr. Baltz indicated that borrowing for new construction was, for the first time since recovery began four years ago, the most important component of the saving, building and loan volume of lending. In July it became more important as a reason for borrowing than the purchase of a home already built, accounting for 31.5 per cent of all loans, while home purchase accounted for only 29.9 per cent.

Decrease in volume of money lent by the associations, as compared with June, was less than for the corresponding period last year, stopping at a decline of a little less than 8 per cent, whereas a year ago the drop was 10.2, indicating the recession period. Mr. Baltz observed that volume of construction loans in July was the second highest since last October, being the main reason why the associations' toal lending held up better than it did between these two months last year.

Average construction loan was for $3,180 in July, indicating that more homes costing $4,000 or less were included in the new buildings financed by savings, building and loan associations than those of any other price range. This is in line with a recent observation of the National Association of Real Estate Boards that the house with an under $4,000 building cost accounted for a fourth of this year's dwelling construction in 58 per cent of all the cities of the country.

Since these cities are mostly those out of the metropolitan group, Mr. Baltz explained, the part played by savings, building and loan associations financing them is all the more obvious. Fully as much of the savings and loan financing takes place in smaller cities and towns as in the great population centers and their outlying areas.

Foreign Buying Lifts Cotton

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 12.—Cotton was generally higher today on trade and foreign buying, while offerings were light. December, which had advanced from 7.92 to 7.99 and then reacted to 7.90, closed at 7.96. Final prices were 3 to 7 points net higher.

The market opened unchanged to 3 points higher in sympathy with steadier Liverpool cables and on covering by spot houses in near months. Foreign buying of later deliveries absorbed a moderate volume of hedge selling and with offerings light, the list sold up to net gains of 5 to 7 points.

August domestic consumption was estimated by the New York Cotton Exchange service at 565,000 bales against 449,000 in July and 604,000 in August a year ago.

Exports 4,443, making 375,105 so far this season. Port receipts, 41,034; United States port stocks, 2,620,093.

Big Silver Cargo Arrives at New York

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—What was believed to be one of the largest shipments of silver received in New York in recent months was reported today on the arrival of the S. S. American Trader.

The metal, unofficially estimated at around 16,000,000 ounces, consisted of 3,511 drums of Chinese silver coin and 1,298 bars of silver, all consigned to the Federal Reserve Bank.

Wheat Dips; Supplies Rise, Exports Fade

Stocks on Hand Increase to 3,983,000 Bushels; Russia Reported to Be a Heavy Exporter.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 12.—Notwithstanding many misgivings in regard to what might develop from Hitler's speech tonight, the Chicago wheat market tended downward today late as well as early.

Price declines, however, amuonted to but ¾ of a cent a bushel, maximum. Dealings were ended long before the long-awaited address was begun, so that no inkling of Germany's action relative to the Czechoslovak crisis had any market influence.

Persistent absence of export interest in United States wheat served as a drag on values, and so too did 3,983,000 bushels increase of the domestic visible supply total. Another outstanding handicap was word that Russia continued exporting wheat and barley as fast as possible.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅛@½ lower compared with Saturday's finish, September 61¾, December 62¾@62⅞, corn was ⅛@⅝ down, September 51⅛@51¾, December 49½@49⅝, oats unchanged to ⅝ off, rye ¼@⅝ up, and provisions varying from 7 cents setback to 17 cents advance.

Steel Operations Advance to 45.3%

New York, Sept. 12 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week will advance 5.4 points to 45.3 per cent of capacity, a new high for the year, compared with 39.9 per cent last week, the American Iron & Steel Institute estimated today.

A month ago operations were at the rate of 40.4 per cent of capacity, while a year ago they were 80.4 per cent.

The Market

By C. Norman Stabler, Special Correspondent.

Stocks Edge Upward in Light Trading, Without Reaction to Hitler's Speech Delivered at Market's Closing.

New York, Sept. 12.—Securities worked irregularly higher today as the world awaited for Hitler's Nuremberg speech in which he was expected to outline Germany's policy toward Czechoslovakia. As the speech was not delivered until about the time the market closed here, the traders who bid stocks up slightly had nothing to go on except faith. Outside of the stock market, the trend of financial affairs was much the same as on the days preceding the week-end.

Stocks closed with a net average of 0.44 point. The government bond list continued weak, sterling sank to another new low as the rush into dollars and gold continued, and among the commodities wheat was soft and cotton firm to higher. The few bits of domestic trade news that developed during the day, most of which were favorable, appeared to have no influence on prices whatever and everywhere in the financial district the news tickers were watched for the latest word from abroad. The fear of war is uppermost in everyone's mind, and the day closed without any definite indication of what may happen. There was considerable satisfaction in the financial district that the week-end, the tensest since the close of the World War 20 years ago, passed without any invasion of Czechoslovakia, but there was nothing to indicate that we have gained more than a breathing spell.

The first parts of Hitler's speech appeared on the news tickers shortly before the close of the market but too late for Wall Street to register its reaction. On the West Coast, where markets were open well after the conclusion of the speech, there was no apparent effect, and in this city there was a sharp division of opinion as to how his words should be regarded.

Sterling's New Low

Up until the time the speech was delivered, sterling had displayed some firmness. During the forenoon it bobbed around and was at $4.81⅝ when Hitler started to talk. It dropped precipitously from that point and closed at its new low of $4.30 5-16. The action of Government bonds also reflected the continuation of the tension of the week-end.

Long-term Government issues declined steadily during Stock Exchange hours and closed off ¼ to ⅜ point. In this market, however, there was a firming tendency after the Hitler speech. In the counter market, where trading continued after the close of the exchange, there were recoveries of 1-32 to 10-32 point.

Trading in stocks was restricted to 601,960 shares today as the street awaited the developments abroad. Manufacturing, metal and steel shares were well supported, followed by the motors. Utilities and rails were little changed. Most active in the day's list were General Motors and Chrysler, which gained 1¼ and 1½ points, respectively. Steel was up 1¾ and Bethlehem 1½. United States Rubber, Yellow Truck and Electric Auto Lite were other members of the motor group which were active and higher.

Domestic trade news was bullish, leaving little doubt that we would have a bull market if the fear of war could be dissipated. Steel operations this week are placed at 45.3 per cent of capacity against 39.9 a week ago. Part of the substantial gain is due to Labor Day having shortened last week's rate. Bank loans to business turned upward, the Federal Reserve reporting that banks in 101 leading cities increased their commercial, industrial and agricultural advances $2,000,000 in the week ended September 7.

Despite the unsettlement abroad, wheat prices eased as the trade awaited the Hitler speech. Absence of export interest contributed to selling, the close being down ⅛ to ½ cent. Cotton trading reflected nervousness and the movement was feverish over a range of 9 to 10 points, the closing being up 3 to 7.

Treasury Bonds Drop.

United States Treasury bonds fell sharply in the formal trading today, but in the later counter dealings much of the declines were regained, as Chancellor Hitler's speech was considered less martial than the market had anticipated. Movements were based mainly on the European events, but to a small degree they were affected also by the $700,000,000 of new money financing allotments, which induced some selling by dealers. The bond market otherwise was dull and lower, with total trading only $4,390,000.

Trends in Treasury issues were observed closely, as these sensitive bonds clearly reflect all variations in sentiment. In quiet trading, long-term issues fell throughout the formal trading and closed off ¼ to ⅞ point. After Hitler's address was heard, however, recoveries of 1-32 to 10-32 point from the official closing developed in counter dealings, modifying the actual losses considerably.

In the corporate section most high grade money market bonds were off fractionally, but U. S. Steel debentures took an upward course. Speculative railroad issues were under mild pressure and losses of sizable fractions to a point or more took place. Local tractions eased, as did holding company issues, communications bonds, holding company securities and other special groups.

In foreign dollar bonds lower levels were the rule, but declines were small in comparison with the risk of war. Australian and Canadian bonds suffered losses up to a point, and Belgians were similarly weak. Danish issues led the Scandinavians lower. German bonds long have been at default levels, and only moderate declines developed. The Italian and Japanese groups were dull, as usual, and Latin-American default bonds were neglected.

Farm Prices Rise Despite Bigger Sales

July Advance Is the First in a Year, But the Level Is 23.9 Per Cent Below the Same 1937 Month.

New York, Sept. 12.—As the result of a little inflationary spurt, the price level of farm products rose in July for the first time in a year, despite the depressing effect of a seasonal increase in the quantity of products marketed, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute, today. The price index, on the basis of 1929 as 100, rose from the current recession's low of 63.0 in June to 65.1 in July.

The price level in July, however, was still 23.9 per cent lower than in the same month last year when the index was 85.6. This price reduction was only partly offset by an increase of 8.1 per cent over a year ago in the quantity of farm products marketed. Despite the inflationary spurt in July, the amount of inflation prevailing was less than that of a year ago. This accounts for the fact that prices were depressed to a greater extent than the increase in the shipments of farm products warranted.

Cash income from farm marketings in July was consequently 17.7 per cent smaller than in the corresponding month last year, declining to $609,000,000 from $740,000,000. This was a relatively greater decrease than in the previous months of 1938. This is shown by the fact that, for the first seven months, farm income from marketings totaled $3,693,000,000 this year as against $4,238,000,000 last year, a decrease of only 12.9 per cent.

Loans to Business Take Upward Turn

By the Associated Press.

Bank loans to business turned upward again in the first week of September. The Federal Reserve Board said yesterday that banks in 101 leading cities increased their advances for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes by $2,000,000 in the week ended September 7. Increases in ten of the 12 Federal Rserve Districts offset a $13,000,000 drop in New York City.

Butter in Storage Highest on Record

Cold storage stocks of creamery butter September 1 were 201,543,000 pounds, the highest point on record.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, reporting yesterday, said it exceeded the previous high stock of September 1, 1933, by more than 26,000,000 pounds, and was 28,921,000 pounds greater than the August 1 stock.

Half-Year Sales Top Production

Stocks of Manufacturers and Distributors Are Reduced $1,250,000,000 in First 6 Months.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 12.—Selling more than was produced, manufacturers and distributors in the United States reduced their stock of goods $1,250,000,000 in the first six months of this year, Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported today.

The mercantile agency based its estimates on returns from 19,000 manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers of all sizes in a sweeping survey to determine how fast inventories had been curtailed in the 1937-38 business recession.

Its findings supported other indications that demand for goods had been outrunning production and thus had enabled manufacturers and distributors to liquidate inventories accumulated in 1936 and 1937. However, the estimates pointed to only partial sale of the stocks built up in those two years. Dun & Bradstreet noted the decline followed increases in stocks estimated at $2,269,000,000 in 1936 and $3,004,000,000 in 1937.

Whether inventories generally have been curtailed sufficiently to dictate expansion of industrial production in coming months is a question business analysts have been pondering. Some have concluded sufficient progress has been made to expedite recovery.

Total inventories were estimated at $20,258,000,000 on June 30 compared with $21,481,000,000 at the end of 1937, $18,477,000,000 at the close of 1936 and $16,208,000,000 at the end of 1935.

Rising prices accounted partly for the increase in the dollar totals in 1937 and 1936. In the first half of the year, wholesale prices on the average dropped 4.2 per cent.

The figures pointed to a slower rate of decline than was recorded in other surveys which covered less ground, especially among smaller concerns, the agency said.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 12 (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—New business in greasy combing domestic wools was very slow in the Boston wool market today.

Members of the wool trade, however, reported that wool manufacturing operations were being fully maintained but that current mill requirements were being filled largely by deliveries of wools bought earlier in the season. Nominal quotations on domestic wools in Boston were unchanged compared with the close of last week.

ON A GENTLE SLOPING HILLSIDE IN CLEVELAND PARK THERE IS AN ATTRACTIVE LITTLE HOME.
Of course, the dining room affords lovely views, the kitchen is replete with modern cabinets and the 3 bedrooms are spacious and cool, but what I want to talk about is the living room. It has 2 separate tiers of bookshelves and a charming fireplace. Why, you can almost feel the warmth of the crackling logs and hear the tick-tock of grandmother's clock on the mantel. Oh, I almost forgot, the lovely living porch, completely surrounded by flowering plants, a winding walk alongside a tall hedge and a weeping willow tree to the garage, partially hidden by vines, rambling roses and forsythia. It may be purchased with $500 cash and the balance in monthly payments less than rent. Phone J. WESLEY BUCHANAN, Wis. 6812, after 2 p. m.

Bob Burns Says—

I never could see why some people have'ta travel clear across the country to see a big specialist about every little ailment. The part of a country a person is raised in has a lot to do with their physical make-up and in most cases the local doctor could diagnose their case better.

When my Cousin Pernell tried to enter the Walk-a-thon at St. Louis, they told him he'd have 'ta undergo a physical examination. The city doctor looked him over and says, "Why—you've got bad arches! You wouldn't last 15 minutes in this walkin' contest!"

Pernell says, "Well, I had'ta walk 419 miles to get here and I hate to think of walkin' all the way back home without takin' a whirl at it!"

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart.

September 12:

OUT ON THE ROUNDS this morning and the Federal workers all seemed steeped in Blue Monday; particularly some of the boys and girls in the press services, who bit the ends of their Federal pencils in bother about how their copy has to be inhibited in the writing.

To want to write, the urge of it, is in everybody; and it is all so understandable that the boys and girls in the Federal press services—whose job it is to write—should want a little latitude, the latitude of turning a few pretty sentences.

But nowhere in all editorialdom are the blue pencils more sharpened than in the Federal Government. The blue pencil wielders naturally have an explanation for their caution: the Congressmen are eternally watchful for any doo-dads in the service, so, it is contended, the press releases should be held to a dry and factual minimum, without a turn of sentence that might indicate Federal propaganda or that might give the notion that the press release writers are spending their time in whimsical writing.

So they complain, quietly, that their talents are put in a straightjacket, and they argue that there is no incompatibility between reasonably good writing and truth.

And having agreed with them, it was thought that probably the best Federal press releases are being done by the National Park Service, where, of course, the opportunity for such would be greater. And this is a little curious, because of all the Federal personnel in town, those under the Interior Department are by far the most closely watched, administratively. The big building and all it contains are ruled with an iron hand and disciplined to an Army officer's taste.

Those of you who attend the Federal Interdepartmental Safety Council sessions in the labor auditorium Tuesday will see as the chairman FRANK L. AHERN, who, it may be ventured, has made the Federal service personnel accident conscious. And Ahern, it is pleasing to note, is a splendid example of how a Federal employe can rise on his own footing. . . .

Thumbnail biography: Born, Somerville, Mass.; educated, Somerville High School (where he was class president), and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he sang in the glee club and was graduated in civil engineering; then visited most of the national parks on fire and safety inspections; went to France as a first lieutenant, in the Chemical Warfare Service; worked in various engineering offices on construction jobs, including work on the New York subways; was fire protection engineer for Stone & Webster, Boston; became fire protection engineer at the National Bureau of Standards, and at present is chief of the safety division, National Park Service. He is chairman of the FISC and of the Committee on Health and Safety, appointed by the Secretary of the Interior; is a member of the Federal Fire Council and other related organizations. He is married and has two sons, one aged 16, the other 11.

IT IS KNOWN that accidents in the Federal service are out of all proportion to the normal risks of the service. One authority (he wants to be anonymous) explained today that in one department, 45 per cent of the injuries are due to two causes, the handling of objects and falls suffered by persons . . . Some authorities in the council had hoped for a 40 per cent improvement in the Federal personnel accident rate in the next five years; but this is considered a conservative outlook. . . .

Our informant broke down the statistics, to learn that had the Navy's accident rate, as based on its 1926 experience, continued, 175 men alive today would have in the meanwhile died of occupational injury or incidental disease. But the Navy set up a prevention program, and the accident frequency is now about half of the 1926 rate—despite the fact that the number of people involved has approximately doubled!

And that, it is thought, shows that the council, which meets Tuesday, has a fine opportunity for some constructive work.

Add Surprises: S. M. Barrett, the South Carolinian of the old school who made the I. D. R. A. what it is (and who wouldn't ever permit himself to get credit) has transferred from the Bureau of Reclamation to a position in the PWA. On leave-taking, Barrett was given a handsome leather brief case, a fountain pen, and, as much to be appreciated, a long letter wherein his fellow-workers intimated they would as soon see the Boulder Dam moved off as their friend Barrett. In all the Federal service, there are few men who have a more genuine liking among their fellows. Immediately in return, Barrett had a party for as many of his well-wishers as his house would hold.

Add here that the Federal service is notable for attentions to those who leave. In practically every case, fellow-workers hold ceremonies, and there is never anything short about the tokens of leave-taking.
